WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28.—The Senate during the coming week will dispose of the land grant forfeiture bill, the pension appropriation bill and possibly the customs administration bill, known as the McKinley bill. The land grant forfeiture bill remains the unfinished business on the calendar and the intention is to take it up immediately at the conclusion of the morning business today and proceed with its discussion until it is disposed of. It is likely that the appropriation committee will attempt to sandwich the pension bill in between this measure and the McKinley bill. The appropriation bill has no place in the order of business, but the other business of the Senate must give it right of way. It was thought at first that the McKinley bill would go through the Senate without opposition in the form in which it came from the finance committee. There was no opposition to it in that committee and there will be no Democratic opposition of importance on the floor of the Senate. But opposition has developed in a new quarter, and it promises to delay by a day or two the passage of the bill. Mr. Evarts has announced his intention of offering some amendments to the bill as reported from the committee, the chief of which is a proposition that all final judgments, when in favor of the importer, shall be paid by the secretary of the treasury from the permanent and definite appropriations provided for in the bill. This proposed amendment does not meet with the sanction of the committee, and its introduction is likely to lead to some debate.

It is the intention of the Republican leaders of the House to force the silver question to a conclusion so far as the House is concerned, during the week. The compromise silver bill will be the measure brought forward and two days will be given to its discussion, voting on its passage to take place immediately at the conclusion of the debate. The Merrill service pension bill which recently failed to gain a hearing under suspension of the rules, will be considered, probably on Tuesday, and pushed to a conclusion before adjustment on that day. This bill was sanctioned by the Republican caucus on last Wednesday, and the Republicans have virtually pledged themselves to its support.

An arrangement has been made by which one day in the week, probably Friday, will be set apart for the passage of public building bills.

Today will be devoted to matters concerning the District of Columbia.

Mr. McKinley has stated that the tariff debate will not begin during the week, but he may bring forward the Dingley bill to increase the duties on worsted cloths. Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, would like to have the river and harbor bill called up for discussion, but it is probable that he will defer to the wishes of the Republican leaders in regard to the programme for the week.

Decision of the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission has decided the case of Stone & Carter against the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee Railway Company in favor of the complainants. The main opinion was written by Chairman Cooley, Commissioners Morrison and Schoonmaker, concurring and expressing additional views, and a dissenting opinion filed by Commissioner Bragg.

This case involves the question of the lawfulness of free cartage of freights by the railroad companies to and from one station on their lines and shippers places of business, when such free cartage is not given to shippers at another station on the same line taking the same grouped rate. The commission rules that the practice is in effect the giving of a rebate from the regular published tariff rate, and in this case also violates the long and short haul clause of the law by making the charge for the shorter distance to Ionia, Mich., greater than to Grand Rapids, Mich., the longer distance. The railroad company is ordered to cease and desist from making any such free cartage at Grand Rapids.

ONE WAY TO PREVENT STRIKES.

A Remarkable Proposition Submitted to Employes By An Illinois Company.

JOLIET, ILL., April 28.—J. C. Sterling, secretary of the Illinois Steel Company, of which company the Joliet rolling mill is a part, employing about 2000 men, addressed the employes Saturday night, submitting a proposition to them which is remarkable, considering the way in which the world is running on now. The company will give to each man who stays one year 1 per cent. of his wages and so on up to five years, when 5 per cent. of his wages will be added to his pay; thus at the end of five years the company will be giving their employes $60,000 a year. Men entering the company's employ July 1st, 1890 are entitled to the benefit. The men read the proposition with unbounded joy. This will settle all likelihood of strikes or quitting of work without giving notice.

A GIGANTIC SCHEME.

The Farmers' Alliance to Bull the Wheat Market.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., April 28.—The Farmers' Alliance has undertaken a gigantic scheme to advance the price of wheat. A large elevator is to be built for the farmers who are members of the alliance, and the wheat is to remain stored until it can be sold at $1 a bushel. In order to tide over the farmers who have their wheat thus stored, a new bank is to be established at St. Joseph, with a capital of $50,00, and the money will be loaned to members at a very low rate of interest. Applications will be made for a charter this week.

Chief Arthur's Views.

OSWEGO, N. Y., April 28.—Grand Chief P. M. Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is here to attend a special meeting of the brotherhood. He says he thinks the eight-hour question should be settled between employer and employes and not by agitators. He expressed himself as strongly opposed to the proposed confederation of labor, and said every trade should organize by itself. He pointed to the brotherhood as showing the value and benefit of separate organizations.

A Cloud Burst at English, Ind.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 28.—A cloudburst struck English, Indiana, Saturday. The water rose rapidly and flooded the streets and many of the houses to a depth of four feet. Within fifteen minutes the water began to recede with a rapidity equal to its rise. Much damage was done to property in English and the surrounding country.

GRANT'S BIRTHDAY

CELEBRATED BY THE AMERICUS CLUB OF PITTSBURG.

Eloquent Speeches Made by Speaker Reed and Other Prominent Public Men—A Banquet Given in Honor of the Occasion.

PITTSBURG, April 28.—The Americus Club annual dinner at Seventh Avenue hotel Saturday night, commemorating the birthday of General Grant, was and event of more than ordinary interest. After an informal reception lasting one hour, dinner was served promptly at seven o'clock. Among the guests of National renoun were Speaker Reed, Senator M. S. Quay, Hon. Jno S. Clarkson, Hon. E. S. Osborn, Hon. John Dalzell, Hon. Thomas M. Bayne, Col. Richard Murphy, E. W. Halford, Governor A. L. Thomas, of Utah; Governor Beaver, Pennsylvania; Lieutenant Governor Davis, Pennsylvania; Adjutant General D. H. Hastings, Senator G. W. Delamater, Hon. L. D. McComas, of Maryland; Hon. Robert E. Taylor of New York, and many others.

GENERAL GRANT.

The dining hall was a place of beauty. The walls, ceilings and pillars were hidden with the National colors, in graceful folds, while festoons, canopies, arches and wreathes of lowland pine intermixed with flowers and small silk flags occupied every available space. An elegant portrait of General Grant faced the entrance to the dining hall. The tables were arranged in a parallelogram. Covers were laid for 310 persons. The tables were gorgeous with their furnishment and decoration. The menu card was a special design for the occasion and is a work of art. The cover contains an admirable steel portrait of General Grant. The dinner was served in eight courses, with several kinds of wine intermingled. The toast list was necessarily short because of its being Saturday night. A. S. Paul, president of the club, was toastmaster.

REED.

Colonel J. M. Schoonmaker responded to "Our guests absent." Hon. John Dalzell extended a general welcome to "Our guests present." Governor James A. Beaver responded to "Grant."

The address of Hon. Thomas B. Reed, responding to "The Republican party," was received with special enthusiasm. He said: Your toast strikes the only possible note of continued victory for the Republican party. Continued victory we must have. Not as partisans, but as patriots. Not on the past must be our reliance, but on the future. If we are not today in the forefront of human progress, to have been followers of Abraham Lincoln in the year gone by is not an honor, but a burning disgrace. Progress is the essence of Republicanism. To have met great emergencies as they arose has been our history. To meet great emergencies as they shall arise must be our daily walk and duty, or we cease to be. Hanging on to old traditions is the business of the Democratic party. And it does that business well; we can never rival it. I have not for years been one of those who have talked about the south. For the last eight years no man has heard me in the House or in the campaign, discourse upon either outrages or wrongs, murders or shootings or hangings. My silence did not arise from any approval of murder, of terrorism, or of fraud at elections. It did not arise from any ignorance of facts or any doubts of the great wrongs which are perpetrated against government by the people. It arose from a conviction, deep-seated in my mind, that the remedy for the political wrongs could not come from politicians, but from the people. Until they were aroused, any efforts of ours would be utterly in vain. In fact, politicians are only seventh hour men. They are worthy of their penny, but they never bear the burden and heat of the day. If they cry aloud before their hour, they only turn back the shadow on the dial.

It is known to everybody that the South denies that cheating is part and parcel of their elections. It is equally known to everybody that that denial is not true. The South has passed through many stages. The Ku-Klux first deployed its midnight terrors to intimidate voters. Then came the midnight shootings and harryings; then the bull-dozing and the driving of the negro politicians into the woods in the darkness of the night. At present, the murders have mostly passed away, and the terrorizing and the midnight marauders. Ballot-box stuffing and cheating in the count have taken their places. Throughout all this variety of wickedness, I call upon you to note one singular fact, that while it existed, every one of these crimes against the government was most solemnly denied by Southern press and Southern people. No one denies them today.

Let us come at some principles which are fundamental in this matter. A negro is a citizen of the United States. He has just as much right to vote and have his vote counted as anybody on earth; that he is poor and ignorant, does not, under the constitution, put upon his neck the foot of riches or of intelligence. Manhood and not riches—manhood and not learning is the basis of our government. We would like all our citizens to be learned, we wish they were all rich; but until they become both, we will take the average of them as they are. Nothing less than that would be government "by the people." While the south denies the frauds in elections, the cheatings and the ballot box stuffings, singularly enough they justify them. Why they defend them if they don't happen, you cannot understand on the principles of logic, but you can on the principles of lying.

The Republican vote of the South, the Republican party is entitled to under the constitution, whether that vote be ignorant or sensible. If ignorant we need it to offset the Democratic ignorance which votes in New York and other large cities. Why, Mr. Reed asked, should they poll their ignorance, and we not poll ours?

Hon. Louis E. McComas responded to "The New South;" Hon. John S. Clarkson, "The Republican Press;" Hon. Robert W. Taylor, "The Young Men of the Party;" Thomas M. Bayne, "Ways and Means."

All of the speeches were received with marked entrusiasm. The hour of midnight had almost arrived when the company separated.

He Was Loyal to the Queen.

WINNIPEG, April 28.—Crowfoot, chief of the Cree Indians, died Saturday. He remained loyal during the Riel rebellion and received a medal from Queen Victoria in recognition of this fact.

IS IT LA NONA.

A Peculiar Malady Reported From Muncie, Indiana.

MUNCIE, IND., April 28.—A peculiar malado has occurred here. Between fifty and seventy-five people have been attacked with such peculiar symptoms, affecting the stomach and bowels, that some of the doctors think it is the dreaded la nona, an epidemic now prevailing in Italy and other parts of Europe. Severe griping pains seize the lower bowels accompanied by nauseating sickness of the stomach. More than twenty guest of the Abbett house have been attacked. A man named Burgess was stricken down suddenly as he walked along the street. He laid unconscious for an hour before he was discovered. Some of the physicians think that the people affected have been eating diseased meat or cannnd fruits or vegetables that have been poisoned by that peculiar acid that sometimes accrues after the cans are opened and the contents are allowed to stand for some time before being used.

CHEAPER ICE.

War Against Cincinnati Dealers by Saloonists.

CINCINNATI, O., April 28.—The saloon keepers' association ice committee has secured warerooms at 706 West Front street, and selected J. G. Moorman as its manager. Messrs. Ward and Moorman are in the North making contracts for the delivery of ice here in quantity as may be desired. Upon their return a special meeting of the association will be held, when all members who have not subscribed and non-members if they so desire, may join the subscribers, of whom Mr. Ward said last night three hundred had been secured. The subscription list is not to be confined to saloon-keepers, but grocers, private families, and even "newspapers," as Chairman Ward put it, "can obtain ice at lower rates than the combine is charging."

A Railroad Agent an Absconder.

DENVER, COL., April 28.—W. H. Baldwin, agent of the Santa Fe at Lowell, Kansas, absconded Friday with $1,000 belonging to the road. Through some means it became known to the officials of the road in Topeka, Kansas, and they immediately telegraphed their agent here to have him arrested. Just before the message was received, Baldwin entered the general offices of the Santa Fe and asked for employment as telegraph operator. While he was in the office, the message asking that the absconder be arrested began to come in over the wire. Baldwin quickly detected the purport of the message and clearing the railing about the telegraph desk, made his escape. Four detectives are upon his track.

THE EIGHT HOUR MOVEMENT.

Gigantic Demonstration at Montreal, Quebec.

MONTREAL, QUE., April 28.—A gigantic labor demonstration took place here Saturday night in favor of the eight hour movement. Between three and four thousand representatives of the several labor organizations assembled in Chaboillez Square and were addressed by their leaders. They were advised to combine to combat capital, which was daily driving the workingman to starvation. Resolutions in favor of eight hours were passed. A strong police force maintained order.

He is engaged in walking from his home in Wabash, Indiana, to San Francisco, on a wager with Mr. McDonald, of New York. John L. Sullivan backer, to walk the distance, estimated at 3,000 miles, in sixty-five days. He left Wabash April 10th, and is up with his schedule time. He is accompanied by two judges, Fred Gebhard, of Wabash, for himself, and Fred Drummond, of New York for Mr. McDonald.

An Insane Mother's Terrible Deed.

DUBUQUE, IOWA, April 28.—Smoke was seen issuing from the upper windows of the residence of Richard Gruner yesterday. A neighbor heard a scream, and looking through a lower window, saw Mrs. Gruner brandishing a huge butcher-knife above her two little children. He leaped through the window and seized the demented woman and threw her on the ground. She had piled a lot of rubbish around the bed, saturated it with kerosene and placed a panful of redhot coals in the midst and intended to kill her children and perish herself. The flames were extinguished. Mrs. Gruner has had two similar insane fits.

Drowned in the Ohio.

PORTSMOUTH, O., April 28.—George Baumann, an employe of Marsh's bottling works, drove a two-horse team down the wharf to the river. He lost control of the horses, and they got into deep water. Baumann and the two horses were drowned. Marsh's son, a lad of twelve years, who could not swim, was swept down the river beneath the water, but reappeared fifty yards below, and was rescued by a boatman. Baumann's body has not yet been recovered.

Killed Two Men.

GAINESVILLE, TEX., April 28.—J. D. Morris was arrested near here yesterday for the murder of George Roberts and John Moss, Thursday evening. On that day the three men were traveling in company through Greene county. While his companions were asleep Morris shot and killed them both, robbed the bodies, and then buried them in a sand bank.

Relief Fund Embezzled at Seattle.

SEATTLE, W. T., April 28.—A local sensation was caused by the suspension from duty of Secretary McCombs of the relief committee, which has in charge $50,000 remaining of the funds denoted to Seattle after the great June fire. It is claimed that McCombs has embezzled a portion of the funds, and affidavits to that effect were filed at a joint meeting of the mayor and relief committee held this afternoon.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

NEWS OF THE MOVEMENT.

Tennessee.

S. P. Herran, Newcombe: There are plenty of men all through the country who believe in the justice of the single tax, but who have never had an opportunity to express their views. I shall take a hundred petitions and give them this opportunity as rapidly as posible.

Missouri.

Percy Pepoon, St. Louis: At last Tuesday evening's meeting the subject especially considered was the condition of Western farmers. A Republican lawyer present took up the fight for protection, and the debate flowed like a torrent for two hours, the free trade side being supported not only by the full strength of the league, but also by a number of strangers, much to our gratification. Our protectionist friend began in a very uncompromising style, but before he got through he made several vital admissions, and, after a thorough explanation of single tax, he said it looked as though that part, at least, of our programme would work well. The league has made arrangements for an address by Father Huntington next month. He comes to the city under the auspices of one of the most prominent Episcopal churches.

J. T. Raney, St. Joseph: We have a debating club here in which we have been discussing the single tax question. I find that men who have always opposed the labor movement are now beginning to take an active interest in the single tax reform.

Mr. James Malcolm of Chicago mails us copies of Missouri papers containing articles on the single tax, which are prepared and sent out by the St. Louis Single Tax League. Messrs. Malcolm, Place, and probably others of the Chicago club, are contributing articles, and some have been contributed by Mr. Shriver of this city. The work is an excellent one, and our friends could not do better service than send brief and pointed items to the St. Louis league.

Montana.

Will Kennedy, Boulder: Montana needs but little cultivation of the right sort to make her a single tax State. I believe this because the single tax will be the only power that can offset the eighty-mile land grant of the Northern Pacific. This belief is strengthened by the effort of the company to secure, beyond doubt, the odd sections in all the great mineral-bearing portions of the State. The success of the company's effort in this line is only a question of time. When that time comes Montana must submit to Northern Pacific domination or adopt the single tax. Montana responded quickly to the demand for purer elections through the establishment of the secret ballot. I have faith that she will respond as quickly to the greater reform.

Florida.

H. J. Simonton, Dade City: Everybody here would sign a petition in favor of having the United States take possession of and run the express companies. This is a new country, and those that have anything to sell can get for it little or nothing. I sent a barrel of oranges to my son at Fort Wayne, Ind., and it cost me more for the freight than my son would have had to pay for such a barrel of oranges in Fort Wayne. I paid $2.10 freight. Expressage would have been $5.90, and I see by New York reports that oranges are selling there for $1.25 to $1.75 per barrel. A man here shipped 10,000 pounds of cabbages North last spring. They sold for $90. The freight was $125, and the commission $9. Thus the producer was $44 in debt by the transaction. The Florida railroads take all our profits, and we live on cornbread and sweet potatoes.

HOW $100,000 WAS MADE—A MORAL POINTED.

E. O. Tramp, Pendleton, Ore., says in the East Oregonian: Many years ago ex-Senator J. K. Kelly, of Portland, took a piece of land supposed to be nearly worthless, lying near Astoria, in payment of an attorney fee which the owner of the land owed him, and could not pay in any other way. Last week he sold it, or a part of it, for $100,000."

The above is an actual occurrence. It happens somewhere every day. It is lawful, and considered the best of business. But when one comes to think seriously about it, he sees that ex-Senator Kelly—and a good man, too, against whom I do not and would not cast any reflections—pockets $100,000. The question arises, did he earn it? Speaking from a basis of production, he did not. He got it through the increase of population in the vicinity. If ex-Senator Kelly receives $100,000 which he did not earn by labor, the only source of wealth, it necessarily follows that some one has performed labor for which he has not received corresponding pay. It is absolutely impossible for any one to receive $1 or $100,000 for doing nothing without compelling other people to work and receive nothing for it. This truth is self-evident. As long as the American people allow better returns to speculators than to labor, so long will we enjoy "hard times," "strikes," "lockouts," strife between capital and labor, ill-feeling between man and man, selfishness rampant, and greed for wealth swallowing up everything good and sacred.

The single tax will prevent men from pocketing $1, $10, $100, $1,000, $100,000 or more, without earning it, through speculation, and in preventing this it lifts from labor's shoulders these tributes, of which this $100,000 profit is a sample, amounting to an immense sum daily, which it has been and is paying to those who perform no productive work. The eyes of the producers once pried open they will never shut again until justice is done. Let us all work and hope for that day. We will be all better and happier for it. It will be a day of plenty and of peace. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and he should get it. Let's help him to get it, and in helping him we help ourselves.

Texas.

James Fitzgerald, Dallas: The declaration of the Knights of Labor in favor of the single tax has produced a sensation among the labor people here. The friends of our cause, of course, are jubilant, but some workingmen here are ardent protectionists, and they do not know what to think of Mr. Powderly's recent action. I tell them they are behind the times in giving ear to the fallacies of an exploded theory, and foolish in attempting to pick up the rag that the East is already willing to throw away. The Morning News, though not with us, printed an editorial on November 17 setting forth our theories very clearly and discussing the probability that they will be adopted in New South Wales, Australia. This is helpful, as the News has much influence in the northern part of the State.

The Farmer and the Single Tax

In considering, therefore, the interest of any class, such as farmers, the real question to be answered is not whether they, in fact, own more or less personal property than merchants, bankers and money-lenders. It is, first, whether they own more personal property in proportion to the value of their land than do those other classes; and, second, whether the particular kinds of personal property which they own are more easily reached by the tax-gatherer than are the kinds of property owned by the other classes. The State must raise a certain fixed amount for public purposes. This amount it will assess upon all tax-payers, in proportion to their value as reported by the assessors; not in proportion to its real value, which the assessors, of course, are never able exactly to ascertain. If, therefore, experience proves that assessors are able to find twenty times as much land-value in the possession of merchants as they can among farmers, but only ten times as much personal property among merchants as they find among farmers, it is a plain result, as simple as the rule of three, that the taxation of personal property will end in making farmers pay a larger proportion of the taxes than they would pay if all taxes were concentrated on land.

Now, the average farmer no doubt says at once that this is impossible. He owns, we will say, 100 acres of land; and he knows of no merchant in any of the great cities who owns as much as one acre. He owns neither stock nor bonds, and has only $500 in the bank. He knows of 1,000 merchants or money-lenders who each own $100,000 or $1,000,000 in stocks and bonds, and keep balances of $50,000 in bank. He asserts, therefore, that it is a matter of plain common sense that the exemption of personal property from taxation must increase his burden, so as to make him pay 100 times as much as the merchant and banker.

THE FARMER AND THE BANKER.

But the farmer, in reasoning thus, entirely overlooks the most important facts of the problem, and abandons the common sense of which he so much boats. That common sense would tell him that, just as his 100 acres are worth to him far more than 100,000 acres in the midst of Africa would be, so one-tenth of an acre in the heart of Cincinnati is worth more than all his farm. It would also tell him that the assessor can easily count his cattle, horses, sheep and hogs, and estimate pretty correctly the value of his house and barns; whereas the most expert assessor can never find out how many bonds the banker owns, unless he can persuade that banker to tell him; while in estimating the banker's house and furniture he might guess at $10,000, $25,000 or $50,000, with a perfectly equal chance of being right or wrong in either case. The banker has chairs, standing side by side, apparently of exactly equal value, but one of which cost $25 and the other $250. He has two paintings, one of which is five times as large as the other, and which the honest farmer would, therefore, think to be five times as valuable; whereas, in fact, the large picture is barely worth $500, while the small one would sell as quick as lightning for $20,000. There are many houses in large cities upon the interior decoration of which the owners have each spent more than $100,000. The most experienced assessors would fail to discover that these decorations were really more costly than those in adjoining houses, which, in fact, did not cost one-tenth of that amount.

The operation of the Australian system will also have a depressing effect on the business of "Blocks of Five" Dudley.—Savannah Journal.

THE RULER'S DAUGHTER.

LESSON V, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 4.

Text of the Lesson, Luke viii, 41, 42, 49-56—Commit Verses 54-56—Golden Text, Luke viii, 50—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After the parables spoken by the seashore and the farther parables spoken in the house, He entered into a boat with His disciples to cross the sea, and as they sailed He fell asleep. But a great storm arising, they awoke Him; He arose and rebuked the wind and the sea, and there was a great calm, so that the disciples marveled, saying: "What manner of man is this?" Having crossed the sea, He healed the man of Gadara, who was possessed with a legion of evil spirits, and sent him home to his friends a well man, to tell the great things the Lord had done for him. Jesus then returned to His own city, Capernaum (Matt. ix, 1), and the people gladly received Him, for they were all waiting for Him. Contrast verses 37 and 40 of this chapter, and see the Gadarenes driving Him out and the people of Capernaum receiving Him. What has your heart for him? Rejection, or a hearty welcome?

41. "And, behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue." Matthew says that Jesus was sitting at meat in the house, in the midst of His disciples and many publicans and sinners, and to the fault finding Pharisees He said that He came to call sinners and not righteous ones such as they considered themselves to be. The disciples of John also come with a question concerning fasting, and Jesus in reply speaks of Himself as the Bridegroom, and of the impossibility of combining the old and the new.

"And he fell down at Jesus' feet, and besought Him that He would come into his house." He cares not what any one may think or say; one great need fills his soul, and here is one who can satisfy it; so he stops not to think of his dignity as a ruler, nor of the criticisms that may be passed upon him, but only of this Great Physician whom he seeks. In this gospel we find four different people at Jesus' feet (vii, 38; viii, 35, 41; x, 39), and they are four very different kinds of people, but the same Jesus meets the need of each.

42. "For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a dying." Here is the cause of his eagerness, anxiety and self forgetfulness; another fills his heart, and she is very dear to him, for she is his daughter, his only daughter, and she is sick, very sick, dying, perhaps dead by this time.

49. "While He yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house." On the way not only do the crowd press and throng Him, but there mingles with them another whole hearted seeker; only a poor woman, a sufferer for twelve years, who has spent all her living upon physicians but without avail. Quite a contrast in social position to the ruler, but they are both alike in this, that each is a whole hearted seeker because of a keenly realized need and sense of utter helplessness, and each has faith in Him.

50. "Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole." Mark says that Jesus said this word just as soon as the messenger from the ruler's house had spoken; as if to quiet the ruler's mind and keep him in peace, for it is Jesus' way to speak peace to His people and keep the mind stayed on Him in perfect peace. Here is a word for every child of God which will carry them in triumph through every trial. Take it as you find it in Mark v, 36: "Be not afraid, only believe," and let your heart reply, "I will trust and not be afraid" (Isa. xii, 2). So shall you have peace and victory, while you wait for the morning.

51. "He suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden." All is now quiet, the thronging crowd shut out, no more hindrances can delay; the father and mother have Jesus all to themselves, only the favored three of the disciples being allowed to enter.

52. "He said, Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth." This is as He sees it, and He knows, for He sees all things in their true light. The little tired body sleeps, the spirit has fled, but He knows how to awake it. He said concerning Lazarus, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth;" but later He said plainly, "Lazarus is dead" (John xi, 11-14). So here is our proof that Jesus calls death a sleep.

53. "And they laughed Him to scorn, knowing that she was dead." What their eyes saw you couldn't make them disbelieve; and like many today, what their eyes couldn't see or their blinded reasons understand you couldn't make them believe. Seeing is believing was their motto. The follower of Jesus says, "Believing is seeing." We take to our hearts His words to Thomas.

54. "He took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise." Mark gives the two words which He actually uttered, "Talitha cumi." Only two words, but the power that created the world is in them. Where the word of a king is there is power (Eccl. viii, 4), and here is a word from the King of Kings in the power of the omnipotent Spirit of God. "Young man, arise;" "Maid, arise;" "Lazarus, come forth." Let any ordinary mortal stand by these dead people and shout such words till he falls down from exhaustion and there will be no response; but here is one in the form of man, a real man but more than man, quietly He utters the word, but mark the result.

55. "And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway." Instantly, from the spirit world comes back the one just set free, the little tabernacle is again tenanted, the heart and lungs resume their functions, the eyes open and look around, she arises to her feet, and quicker far than I have told it she is in her mother's arms alive and well. Not weak and sickly looking as one arising from a sick bed, but perfectly whole as one in good health; and with an appetite for food, for He commanded to give her something to eat. At the same word shall all who are in their graves come forth, either among the Blessed and Holy who take part in the First Resurrection, or among the rest of the dead who live not again till the thousand years are finished (Rev. xx, 5, 6). What reunions never to be broken, what joy, what blessing unalloyed when we shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of God, to eat and drink with Him, at His table, in His Kingdom (Matt. viii, 11; Luke xxii, 30).

56. "And her parents were astonished: but He charged them that they should tell no man what was done." Yet Matthew says that "the fame hereof went abroad into all that land." He did nothing secretly; there were always witnesses enough to all He said and did, but for wise reasons He often told these witnesses to say nothing about this or that particular event. He came as Israel's Christ, and when the rulers of the nation refused to receive Him, it was only meet that many of His mighty acts should be hidden from these rulers who only sought to slay Him.

His command now is to all who believe in Him, that in the power of the Holy Spirit they should preach the glad tidings to every creature, that whosoever will may be saved and become part of His elect church. Disobedience is guilt. Are you obedient?

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Bright's Disease Cured!

About two years ago our daughter had congestion of the kidneys, which developed into Bright's Disease. Her body was swollen to an enormous size—measuring 45 inches around the waist and 18 inches below the knee. After physicians had given up her case I determined to have her try Dr. Kennedy's of Rondout, N. Y. Gradually the swelling was reduced from 45 to 29 inches. She began to gain strength and was able to walk without fatigue. We do not know how to express our gratitude for what it has done for our child. We are confident the Favorite remedy will do all that is claimed for it—surely God has blessed it in this case, and we earnestly recommend it to all suffering from kidney disorders.—S. P. Mrs. E. W. Freese, while attempting to get into her carriage at the Episcopal church, fell and broke her limb just below the knee. Mrs. Freese is a lady of advanced age, and her many friends extend their sympathies.

Petty burglaries are becoming altogether too numerous about the County.

Deputy Sheriff Pease, of Hudson, has been appointed a duputy U. S. marshal.

The district convention W. C. T. U. met at Hudson last week and held a very interesting session.

Blissfield has been enjoying an amateur show, under the title of Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels.

Between ten and twelve thousand broom handles are turned out daily at Osgood's mill in Morenci.

At the ladies' Aid Society of Blissfield they serve Johnny cake and mush and milk for supper.

Congressman Allen made a speech last week in favor of giving each member of the House a clerk.

The slander suit damage suit of James A. Coffin against the village of Morenci has been adjourned till the next term of the Circuit Court.

The portable photograph gallery of Hudson has folded itself up and gone to Devil's Lake to await the summer influx of pleasure seekers.

The Odd Fellows of Ogden Center held anniversary exercises last Saturday, April 26th. Judge Janes, of Hillsdale, gave the address.

If the fellow who sold "Chinese lily bulbs" at Medina should go back there he would be met by a battalion of women armed with broomsticks.

In the spring a young girl's fancy

The aged Dr. Hamilton, of Tecumseh, whom our older inhabitants remember as a pioneer doctor of this region, and who is now 81, grows more enfeebled and his remaining days, evidently, are few. His brother-in-law, Elder Garrett, and wife spent a portion of this week at the venerable physician's home.—Morenci Observer.

"Why don't you run a newspaper like that?" said a grocer in a country town to the local editor, throwing out a Chicago daily. "For the same reason you don't run a grocery like that," the editor replied, turning to a five-column advertisement of a Chicago house, showing a twelve-story building. The grocer looked attentively at the advertisement and the picture for a moment and then said: "I never looked at it in that way before."

A curious case has developed in Ogden, Lenawee county. Miss Wotring, aged 18, after attending a series of revival meetings, has come to have periodical spells, when she goes into a trance and holds conversations with the patriarchs of the Bible, being able when she recovers not only to give a complete report of what they visited with her about, but also to tell exactly how they looked and were dressed. A doctor has been called to try to cure her, as her family doesn't believe it is good for a young lady to move in quite such old society.

Morenci has, among other advantages, two things with which Hades is not commonly credited—good society and plenty of water. Last Saturday W. B. Thomas, the well borer, "struck" at the depth of 80 feet a high-gushing fountain on Joel Bailey's place, just east of the corporation line. The water supply now developed along our Main street is really remarkable. From C. C. Wakefield's on the west to E. DeMerritt's on the east, a distance of about one mile on that highway, thirteen good fountains, furnishing a seemingly inexhaustible quantity of aqua pura, may at present be counted.—Morenci Observer.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. A FAMILY JEWEL.

It is a work which should be read in every home, for the value of the medical lessons alone. It contains also many life illustrations, and two facinating stories from the widely known author "Ned. Buntline. Anyone sending their address with name of this paper to Dr. Kennedy, will receive the Book free by mail.

What It Costs

Must be carefully considered by the great majority of people, in buying even necessities of life. Hood's Sarsaparilla commends itself special force to the great middle classes, because it combines positive economy with great medicinal power. It is the only medicine of which can truly be said "100 Doses One Dollar," and a bottle taken according to directions will average to last a month.

A young lady of Jefferson, West Virginia, declares that she was all run down before taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla; but that now she is gaining strength every day. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is certainly a wonderfully effective tonic for the feeble and delicate.

Bradfield Female Regulator

Should be used by the young woman, she who suffers from any disorder peculiar to her sex, and at change of life is a powerful tonic; benefits all who use it. Write the Bradfield Reg. Co., Atlanta, Ga. for particulars. Sold by Jno. J. Orr.

Well, Sarah, what have you been doing to make you look so young? Oh, nothing much, only been using Hall's Hair Renewer to restore the color of my hair.

For bracing up the nerves, purifying the blood and curing sickheadache and dyspepsia, there is nothing equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

will wash clothes, will clean house—will do it well—will save you time; labor; wear and tear; will reduce drudgery; will not hurt your hands; your clothes or paint, and besides will cost you no more than common bar soap. One honest trial will prove all that.

Why not accept the testimony of the millions who use it as proof of its virtue. Among your friends you'll find those who have used Pearline for years—ask them—they will tell you "can't do without it."

Beware Pearline is the original Washing Compound—used by millions, but imitated by thousands who peddle their stuff or give worthless prizes. Pearline is never peddled, but sold by all grocers. 151 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY AT BROOKLYN.

The following is clipped from the Times: "Charles Teachout, the proprietor of the neat little hotel of the village of Brooklyn, and who is well and favorably known here, has a partner in the livery business connected with the hotel, by the name of Aldrich. The latter gentleman had in his employ a man by the name of Geo. Cole, who boarded at the hotel.

Last Wednesday evening, he and Teachout became involved in a controversy in the hotel office, and Cole was ordered out of the house. He was making his exit, when Teachout essayed to help him by taking him by the shoulder and pushing him thro' the door.

Then the trouble began in earnest, and in the melee which followed, Cole was struck twice with the large dinner bell, in the hands of Teachout, once over the head, cutting through his hat, and making an ugly scalp wound, and again across the breast, bruising him severely, and inward injuries are feared.

From latest accounts Cole's condition is very low, and the chances for life decidedly against him.

No arrests have been made yet, but should Cole die Mr. Teachout would be placed in a very compromising position; one which his many friends here sincerely hope he may escape. He has always borne an excellent reputation here, and those who know him best know him to have been a quiet, inoffensive man.

Found An Old Friend.

COLOMA, Mich., December 3, 1889. Gentlemen:—One of your circulars came to my notic to-day, and it reminds me of an old and very valuable friend, one that saved my life 12 years ago, and because I had not needed its help since, I coughed continually and had chills every day. I was as miserable as any one could be and live. A lady who knew the cause of my illness persuaded my mother to have me use Zoa-Phora —it was called Woman's Friend then. Before I had used one bottle my cough and chills ceased. I kept on and used two bottles and they brought me out all right. I afterwards mared, and am now the mother of three nice hearty children.

I feel that I owe a great deal to Zoa-Phora. I hope it will become well known and that every woman and girl who needs it will use it. If you will send me some circulars I will give them to acquintances, and do all I can to help you,

Yours truly, MRS. LAURA FURMAN.

HAPPILY WEDDED.

Marriage of Mr. Pliney S. Chapman and Miss Julia E. Wilson.

From the Lincoln, Neb., Daily Journal, of April 24, we clip the following wedding notice which will interest many people in this vicinity. The bride's mother, Mrs. J. J. Wilson, was a daughter of Deacon Isaac Adams, and passed her girlhood in Tecumseh, but for several years, her home has been in the west. It hardly seems possible that she has a daughter old enough to be a bride. How time flies.

Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents, 1228 H street occurred a wedding of two of Lincoln's most popular young people. The contracting parties were Pliny S. Chapman and Miss Julia E. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wilson, The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Hewitt of the Holy Trinity, assisted by Rev. O. A. Williams of the First Baptist church in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. The young couple were the recipients of many handsome presents, a particularly fine one being an elegant dining room set, which was presented by the groom's associates in the First National bank. The happy couple left at noon for Gibbon, Neb., and after a brief visit there will return and commence housekeeping in a cosy little home already prepared for them at the corner of Twenty-ninth and Starr streets.

WAR BOUNTIES.

LANSING, Mich., May 5.—The Board of State Auditors applied to Attorney General Huston for a legal opinion as to who are entitled to bounties under the recent decision of the Supreme Court. He replies:

"First—All persons enlisting in the volunteer service after February 5th, 1864, who were not residents of the state, and were credited on the 200,000 call, or any subsequent call during the war of the rebellion, are entitled to $100 state bounty.

"Second—All persons enlisting after February 5th, 1864, in said service, who were residents of the state, and were credited to any sub-district, township or ward where they were enrolled at the time of their enlistment on the 200 000 call, or any subsequent call, are entitled to $100 state bounty.

"Third—All persons who were residents of the state and enlisted after the above date, and were not enrolled, but were credited to township and ward, where they actually resided, and on the 200 000 call, or any subsequent call, are entitled to $100."

Under this ruling about 1,500 veterans are entitled to bounties. The auditors desire to state that it is useless to employ attorneys or claim agents. All claims sent in by mail will receive careful attention.

Not many physcians make great therapeutic discoveries. For the most part they content themselves with administering judiciously what is prescribed in the books. To Dr. J. C. Ayer, however, is due the credit of discovering that greatest of blood-purifiers—Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Although some of the testimonials of wonderful cures performed by the F. E. C Kidney, Blood and Liver Remedy, which have appeared in these columns read like miracles, we are pleased to state that they are all genuine. The company have the originals on file in their office in Rochester, N. Y., and they are cheerfully shown to all interested.

Mamma (to her little boy). "Now Bennie, if you 'll be good and go to sleep, mamma 'll give you one of Dr. Ayer's nice sugar coated Cathartic Pills, next time you need medicine." Bennie, smiling sweetly, dropped off to sleep at once.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The following interesting information about the agricultural department of the College is taken from the Detroit Free Press.

The agricultural department, which has recently been transferred to quarters in its new laboratory, is probably the oldest and most widely known branch of this famous institution. It was organized by Dr. Manly Miles some twenty-five years ago, remaining under his management for ten years. The work done by this man in this line was the first in our country, and has since been the model for similar institutions, not only in this country but in Europe, because it was the method that insured success wherever tried. As proof of the excellency of his system we need but to point to the fact that nearly all of the graduates who have attained success as teachers in this line, came under his instruction. As the basis of this plan, Dr. Miles made it his effort to give class room instruction upon the scientific part of agriculture, and to supplement this, as closely as possible, with field work; to educate the student and still hold his sympathy for labor. He always worked with his classes, and he tells of how, in the early days while thus employed he was accosted by an attorney from Lansing with, "Say, old duffer! Do you know where Dr. Miles is?"

Since the days of Dr. Miles, it has passed through the hands of three men in fifteen years, until by Dr. Johnson's resignation it came under the supervision of Eugene Davenport, M. S. last summer. The sophomores and elective seniors, who work in this department, are employed at least ten hours a week on a farm of 280 acres, which is well stocked with all modern farm machinery. There are numerous large barns and other farm buildings, as well as good specimens of most of the leading breeds of cattle, several breeds of sheep and a large sty of pigs.

When asked what his department, from an economic standpoint, had done for the people of the state, Prof. Davenport shrugged his shoulders and said: "You must understand our object is to educate the student. The only claim that the people have upon us as a college is to educate their children. It is our business to find out the methods of the most successful farmers and breeders, and to transmit these to the state's youth; not to advise the already experienced farmer. Yet since the organization of the United States experiment station here a new duty has been placed upon the department, which is to discover and test for methods best applicable to maximum results in practical agriculture."

"What, then, is this experiment station doing, and what does it expect to do in your department?"

Not to be too specific, it is conducting a line of feeding and dairy experiments. It is testing in the field for best varieties for all farm plants growing in this climate, and in the next few years will make a series of tests on fertilizers. It also intends to compare a rotation of crops with a succession of the same, both with and without fertilizers."

A LIBERAL CORPORATION.

Talk about soulless corporations. They have souls, and they make it manifest sometimes, though in an unostentatious way. A few weeks ago a Hudson River passenger train was flying over the rails at midnight. Nearly 200 passangers were aboard. Suddenly there was a shrill danger whistle and the train was brought to a standstill. The frightened passengers soon learned that there had been a fall of rock across the track and that Mrs. Groves, wife of a flagman, had run half a mile up the track in her nightclothes to warn the train of danger. The obstructions were removed and the train passed along in safety. What's that to do with the soul business? Oh, yes; the Hudson River railroad company has just acknowledged that Mrs. Groves saved them $60,000 and no telling how many lives, and in recognition of that fact they have given the brave woman an even $100! Of course it's a small soul, but that corporation has one.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 8.

Major McKinley's tariff-for-fat bill does not please the vinegar men. Their criticism of the bill is highly charged with acidity.

The price of sugar trust certificates has advanced 3 6-8 per cent since the McKinley tariff bill was reported. This fact speaks for itself.

Baby McKee has had a hair brush and a new brand of soap named after him. Baby McKee seems to be the most popular member of the administration.

The members of Congress who voted against an appropriation for the civil service commission are thereby making a record which may rise up to plague them hereafter.

Public buildings come high but we must have them. New York's capitol was to cost $4,000,000. The bills already allowed exceed $18,000,000 and they are not all in yet.

The Senate will prepare a tariff bill of its own, and so the little game of bluff proceeds. Each House will pass a bill of its own and tariff revision will fall to the floor between two stools.

It is generally conceded now that it was the liberated factory employees who gave the last election to the Democrats in Rhode Island. The factory barons were completely knocked out by the Australian system.

President Harrison's veto, read between the lines, means simply this: "Less money for public buildings and more money for bounties and subsidies." The President would save at the spigot and leave the bung hole open.

Will somebody please mention some point on which the Republicans are agreed? Oh, yes! Come to think of it, all factions are in perfect accord in their condemnation of Harrison and his administration.—Kansas City Times.

The Democratic Governor and Republican legislature of New York have finally come to their senses. They have discontinued their pastime of trying to "put each other in a hole," and have united on a fair ballot reform bill which is likely to pass.

The spoilsmen of both parties rallied in force in the House last week and attempted to kill the appropriation for the Civil Service Commission, but the bill passed by a vote of two to one. Although this Reform has become a mere by-word under the present administration, the principle has evidently come to stay.

The HERALD'S suggestion of Alex. Richard's name for Congress is meeting with considerable favor. In justice to him we would say that we are alone responsible for the suggestion, as the article was published without his knowledge or authority. We believe that the true policy for the Democracy this fall is to seek their candidate, and that candidate should be a farmer.

General Grant boldly and unequivocally said that no able-bodied soldier ought to be a government pensioner. Gen. Grant's position is the only safe one. Disabled soldiers and their families should be liberally provided for, but the principle of a service pension is all wrong. The service pension bill just passed by the House would take forty millions from the treasury the first year.

Ex-Speaker Carlisle publishes in The Forum for May a review of political events since the last presidential election, his aim being to show that the Republican party conducted the last campaign in order to procure the offices, and the Democratic party in order to further the principle of tariff reform. He argues that both gained what they struggled for; the Republicans have the offices, and the Democrats see the principle for which they contended gaining in popular favor every day. He summarizes the pending legislation, which if passed would not only exhaust the surplus, but would require new and heavier taxation; and he points out how the Republican party cannot carry out two opposing promises that it made—first, its promise to the people that it would reduce the tariff, and second, its promise to protected manufacturers, and to pensioners that it would increase taxation for their benefit. It is a very able paper.

SOME SIGNIFICANT FACTS.

At the annual dinner of the Americus Club of Pittsburg, held last week, the Hon. James S. Clarkson responded to the toast, "The Republican Press." He talked right "out in meeting" and stated some facts, which, although well known to intelligent tariff reformers, will be news to thousands of his republican friends. We append a portion of his remarks.

The consideration of the party press daily grows more and more important. We are in a state of transition somewhat as to party methods. Mr. Brice was much derided for his phrase, in 1888, that the campaign of that year was an intellectual one; yet his statement was true. Political contests are coming more and more to be fought in the arena of discussion and in the newspaper press. The days of parades and physical demonstrations are pretty plainly passing away. The torchlight and the red light as political arguments are being superseded by the intellectual discussion of the press. The campaign of 1892 will be largely a newspaper campaign, and it has already begun. Let us be frank, and say that the Democrats saw this before the Republicans, for any close observer must have seen with interest the marvelous manner in which the Democratic party has been strengthening its lines in the newspaper or magazine. It has been beating us in our own game. In the large cities of the east they have captured nearly all the magazines and illustrated papers. All the mercenaries of press and literature have been lured into their service. The reinforced Democratic press is a startling thing for the Republican party to face, and it must face it with courage and wisdom. In New York City 1,400,000 copies of daily newspapers are printed daily. Less than 200,000 of them are Republican. This means that two-fifths of the Republicans of New York City and its environments are reading Democratic papers, taking the Democratic version of things, and the young people of the households being educated unconsciously against the party of their fathers. I would not abridge the latitude of discussion nor reading, but it is important that young people should at least read their own side as well as the other. In Boston the papers of greatest circulation are also Democratic. New England has largely gone from the faith of the days of the war in its newspapers. The same is true of nearly every large city in the country. Democracy has also pressed its conquests to the agricultural press, and in the last three or four years many of the farmers' papers in the west have become advocates of free trade. Such a propaganda has never been known in America as that of the Democrats in their hunt in secret and through a changing press in behalf of free trade in the west today; and I submit to you as Republicans that it is time for our party to take notice of what the opposition party is doing by increasing and strengthening its press. These are significant facts.

What a pitiable and humiliating confession for the leader of a great party to make at a public dinner. Mr. Clarkson and Mr. Quay were the two men who managed the Republican campaign two years ago, and to whose efforts Benjamin Harrison owes his election. Mr. Clarkson now frankly admits, what the Democratic leaders told the people at that time, that the Republicans relied upon parades and torchlights and brass bands, while the Democrats placed their dependence more upon the daily and weekly press. One of the stock arguments of our Republican brethren for the past twenty years has been that the G. O. P. contained all the intelligence and culture and morality of the country, but Mr. Clarkson's confession shatters this idol pretty badly. He may well say: "These are significant facts." The Democratic party is not a corporation nor a trust. It has no big corruption fund with which to subsidize newspapers and magazines. The fact that the best, strongest, and ablest newspapers of the land are preaching tax and tariff reform, is a proof that these doctrines appeal to the intelligence and good sense of the people, and the people respond by patronizing those newspapers which work for their interests.

Another inference can be drawn from Mr. Clarkson's confession which he does not make himself. It is a difficult matter to persuade people against their will. The political pabulum which is dished up by the Republican press of today appeals only to the pockets of big monopolies and trusts and to the war prejudices of the masses. High protective taxes and the bloody shirt are the leading features of their party policy at present. Thick and thin partisans can thrive on that kind of diet, but thousands of men, especially the younger voters, who are seeking for political light, repel it. Men buy those newspapers which they like best. Catholics do not take the N. Y. Observer, nor do Presbyterians buy the Universalist. The wonderful increase in circulation, during the past ten years, of tariff reform newspapers is proof, not that the newspapers are bought up, but that the leaven of tariff reform is working in the hearts of the masses. Not only the democratic party papers, but nine-tenths of the independent press, are battling for the rights of the people on this great issue. Tariff reform newspapers are growing in numbers and influence every day because there is a public demand for that kind of literature. Republican papers are decreasing in circulation and influence because they represent only high taxes, war prejudices and the political Bourbonism of the day. Yes, Mr. Clarkson, "these are significant facts."

ENGLAND AND OUR TARIFF.

An instructive and pithy communication from ex-Congressman George L. Yaple to the Lansing Journal says:

The tariff upon a commodity is a bounty which the manufacturer is thereby enabled to collect from the purchasers (consumers) thereof in his own country, but not elsewhere. (1) When such commodity is sold in the manufacturer's country to home consumers, at a price equal to the same kind and quality imported, and paying the duty upon it, the home producer collects a bounty from the home consumers equal to the amount of said duty. (2) When the imported article, in such a case, sells for more than the domestic, the bounty paid for the latter equals what it brings above the natural level of the price it would command if subjected, or left to the free competion, of the world at large.

In the present industrial condition of our country these tariff bounties are wrung from the public at large by gigantic monopolies controlling enormous aggregated corporate capital.

There is free trade in capital and labor, and foreign capital now has control of all our leading industries and enterprises, and sends its own laborers to carry on and operate them. These foreign capitalists, by ocean telegraphs and the means of rapid ocean transit and communication between countries, have full supervision and control over their investments through American and their own local agents on the ground. They are our home manufacturers in reality, and we pay them, the foreign capitalists, the tariff bounties, and our own laborers give way to the foreign laborers whom they send to take their places. The capital of Europe is "pooled" in London. The investment of the enormous income derived from it is a matter of constant watchfulness and effort. It is employed in every quarter of the globe. By means of it and her free trade, England commands a monopoly of the shipping and commerce of the world, and by reason of free trade in labor and capital in the United States she has come over here and acquired control of all our leading enterprises, and by them England supplies our home markets and puts in her pocket all our home tariff bounties. Our tariff is England's industrial and commercial strength. It enables her to keep the markets and carrying trade of the world, while she comes over here, buys and conducts our leading business, and reapes the bounties our tariff affords—bounties paid by our unfavored millions.

DRIFTING UPON THE BREAKERS.

At the annual dinner of the Butler Club held on May 1st at Boston, Gen. Butler himself made a lengthy speech, which was devoted almost wholly to the agricultural situation. Among other statistics he gave the following:

"Referring to the enormous mortgage debts of the farmers, Gen. Butler said that taking simply the agricultural lands of the western states, the mortgages amount to the stupendous sum of $3,450,000,000, the interest upon which is at the rates averaging from 7 to 9 per cent. The payment of these mortgages is impossible, and they will never be paid, for the simple reason that, as statistics prove, the average profits on farming industries are only between 4 and 5 per cent. The general presented some other startling facts showing the hopeless condition of the farmers, and predicted a "financial cyclone" among them before many years. He ridiculed the project of the government building store-houses and loaning the farmer money on his garnered crops. The storage certificates given by the government would be bought up by speculators who would thus control the market for the grain as they do now.

When the bill was introduced into the senate that the government loan the farmers $3,000,000, to relieve them from their financial difficulties, he calculated that the full amount would only pay two-thirds of a mill on each dollar of western farm mortgage debts alone, or, in other words, would only pay the interest on those mortgages for five days.

The silver bill now pending in congress will not remedy the matter. It would take all the silver that the mints can coin, at the rate of four and a half millions a month, and all the silver that the mines can produce in that time, to pay one year's interest on these mortgages, supposing that no more money is borrowed. The general had no remedy to propose, and seemed to think the case of the farmers hopeless."

No man in the country to-day is more responsible for the present condition of things than Gen. Butler himself. His bunting factory is one of the highly protected industries of New England, and he has been fattening for years upon a tariff tax levied on the stars and stripes. The idea that the farmer could be relieved of his burden by a reduction of war taxes is not found in the general's political philosophy.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismarck, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourists Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5,00 to $25,00 in traveling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accommodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and Northern Pacific.

S. S. S. is the remedy for children because it is a simple vegitable compound prepared from the roots gathered from the forests, and contains no mineral at all nor any poison of any kind. It cures by eliminating the impurities of the blood, thus assisting nature.

If there is or has been any consumption in your family, you should give your children S. S. S. It will gently stimulate the action of the lungs, and enable nature to properly develop the child. If there is scrofula, you should not fail to give S. S. S. It is the only remedy which has ever cured this disease. For boils, pimples, blotches, etc., on children S. S. S. is superior to all other medicines. It acts gently, it forces out the impurities and builds up the child from the first dose.

The Chicago Tribune and the St. Paul Pioneer Press, leading republican organs of the northwest, are making vigorous war on the McKinley tariff bill. The Press says the country will not have it, and predicts in its passage the disruption of the party. It talks about "gulling the farmers" with true democratic consistency.

Delay always induces ultimate trouble and especially is this true in its application to the human system. Laxador always saves time and trouble by prompt use in the beginning of sickness.

Raw sugar is placed on the free list, that is true, but the duty on refined sugar is raised to a prohibitive point. The government will lose its revenue on raw sugar, the sugar trust will be stronger than ever and the people will be taxed six millions a year to raise bounties for the sugar growers. How do the taxpayers like Major McKinley's sugar shuffle?

PROTECTIONIST PAPERS.

THEY PROTEST EMPHATICALLY AGAINST THE McKINLEY BILL.

It Is Riddled Unmercifully in the House of Its Friends—Good Doctrine Advanced by the High Tariff People—A Symposium of Republican Leaders.

Tariff reform newspapers have been delighted to find the task of criticising the McKinley bill largely taken out of their own hands by the protectionist papers themselves. There are very few prominent Republican papers, except such as have been silenced by an office or other favor, that have not found some objectionable feature in the bill. Papers even which have distinguished themselves for their aggressive protectionism have condemned this or that provision of the bill.

The Chicago Tribune thinks that "the bill shows that the ways and means committee has almost wholly mistaken the popular demand for tariff reform. Listening for days and weeks to the representatives of special interests who, on the committee's invitation, hurried to Washington to support their tariff bounties and get more if possible, the committee reached the remarkable conclusion that the country at large wanted such changes as would advance prices on consumers and enable a few persons to pile up great fortunes. * * * The people of the west want, not an increase of the tariff, but a reduction of duties all along the line."

The Tribune, since writing these words, has become even more outspoken, and is now demanding free wool and free raw materials generally. On the general question of protection it argues that protection has made clothing dearer, while at the same time reducing the wages of the mill operatives. Editor Medill is one of the great lights of his party, and the friends of tariff reform are curious to see how he will adjust his relations with the party in the near future.

The American, of Philadelphia, which is edited by Professor R. E. Thompson, always defends protection on what it thinks to be scientific and moral grounds. Professor Thompson enjoys the distinction of being the only prominent college professor in the country who teaches protection. The estimable professor says in The American that the committee ought to have put iron ore on the free list. On the other hand, The Iron Age, which is the principal trade journal of the iron industries and a protectionist of the straightest sect, remarks with cruel bluntness that the professor wants free iron ore because the Pennsylvania Steel company wants to import free Cuban ores, and that it is to "his friends' interest" to have the duty removed.

The Pittsburg Dispatch ridicules the "rather cheap attempt to throw a tub to the agrioultural whale in advance of the duties on eggs, butter and potatoes." The same paper thinks that the sugar duties ought to have been abolished altogether. The Philadelphia Press, on the other hand, thinks that it may be "open to demonstration that not sufficient protection has been given to the sugar refining interests."

It is from New England, however, that the loudest complaints have come. The kind of protection which is crushing many New England industries has received some heavy blows recently from protectionist papers there.

The Boston Journal is the leading paper of its party in New England. It says that the duty on hides is no more defensible than the duty on raw silk, which the committee was frightened into dropping like a hot potato. The duty, it says, would confer no appreciable benefit upon farmers anywhere, which is the opinion of even the New York Tribune. The Journal thinks that "the duty would be a serious injury to the leather manufacturers and the great boot and shoe industry, and would be distinctly and decidedly a step backward;" and it also sees no good reason for the increase of the duty on carpet wools.

In this opposition to the wool duty The Boston Advertiser, which is equally orthodox protectionist, concurs; but its opposition is more pronounced. It says that a large majority of men engaged in woolen manufacturing would undoubtedly prefer to see lower duties on wool. The people, The Advertiser thinks, "are not in a mood, at this period of surplus revenue, to be driven into unreasonable, not to say unnatural, protection."

The Boston Transcript says that New England "does not propose to have its interests sacrificed for the benefit of any of the new or the old states;" and it charges that the hide and wool duties were put into the McKinley bill "to pay off a political debt."

The Philadelphia Telegraph expresses the same view, but with much greater vigor. This Republican paper says: "When the McKinley bill was promulgated the people for the first time were made to understand that the fat fried out of the specially protected firms, corporations, combines and trusts was to be returned, and that it was to be got by congress frying it out of them. If this McKinley bill should become a law there is not a poor devil of a citizen from one end of the country to the other who will not be put into the pan and placed over the coals in order that he may contribute his item of fat to the great quantity which is to be returned to those who supplied the campaign grease of 1888.

"The most disinterested and fair minded man, Republican or Democrat, may go up and down the McKinley list and find thereon not a single thing added to or taken from the present tariff schedule which has not been added to or taken from it for the benefit and behoof of representatives of special interests. The entire scheme rests upon no other or better principle than that of returning their fat to the manufacturers, or of helping the party by the basest partisan methods."

But we will close this delightful symposium by letting The Dry Goods Economist tell what it thinks of the general effects of Maj. McKinley's labors: "Not all the Cobden clubs in Great Britain, backed by all the British gold alleged to have been spent in America by the Cobdenites, ever did one-half as much to spread free trade ideas in this country as has been accomplished in three months by the Hon. J. W. McKinley and his associates."

CANADA WILL HIT BACK.

She Will Not Sit Idle Under the Impositions of the McKinley Bill.

The Canadians are taking steps to retaliate upon us in view of the damage which the McKinley bill will do them. The Tory government, which is in power there, holds the same protection view as the majority in our congress. The Tory ministry in Canada has boldly announced a policy of commercial war against the United States; and the industries concerned are rushing to Ottawa in a way which rivals, on a small scale, the spectacle which Washington has witnessed during the past three months.

The meat packing establishments of Montreal have shown that unless they can get our cattle they will have to close. This is in opposition to the government's intention to raise the duty on cattle, sheep and hogs to 80 per cent. ad valorem. Hatters, hardware men and many other trades have sent deputations to Ottawa to put in their protests. The government, according to its organs, finds it necessary to raise duties in order to strengthen the waning cause of protection. There is a strong feeling in Canada in favor of unrestricted reciprocity with us, and the Liberals, who represent this feeling, have adopted as their platform the principles embodied in the bill of our Mr. Butterworth. The Ohio congressman wants absolute free trade—Cobden free trade—with Canada, and the idea is popular with progressive Canadians. Prominent newspapers in Canada are in favor of "continental free trade."

The government party, however, want to measure their skill with us in erecting tariff walls, and in making their country "commercially independent." The Canadian protectionists speak a language which sounds as if it might have been learned from the high protection orators in our congress. There is the same talk about preserving the national dignity first; and the protectionists shout "Canada forever!" and greet their opponents with groans and jeers.

Mr. Butterworth is right in showing that the trade of Canada is of great value to us, and in advocating a policy of free trade with her. Canada bought from us last year more than fifty million dollars' worth of goods and sold us more than forty-three million dollars' worth, this being almost half the foreign trade of Canada. The trade of Canada with us is considerably larger than with England, and the Canadian market is of great value not only to our manufacturers, but to our farmers as well.

To relieve the American hen from competition with the Canadian hen and to shut out Canadian barley are very slight advantages to a few of our farmers as compared with the loss to other farmers of their Canadian market for wheat and live stock.

But, after all, is not this whole policy of trying to injure one another by refusing to buy or sell utterly unworthy of two intelligent and so called civilized nations? Protection is held up by some people as a great patriotic institution; is it to be used as an instrument to engender international bickering and hate?

NEW AMERICAN SHIPS.

The Falsity of the Assertion That the United States Cannot Carry on the Ocean.

American ship owners continue to add to their ocean tonnage, and to demonstrate the falsity of the assertion that Americans have and can have no part in the carrying trade of the high seas. An English paper reports that a steamer has just been launched at Glasgow on the account of Claus Spreckels, the California sugar king. This steamer will ply between San Francisco and Honolulu, and will sail under the Hawaiian flag. Our laws do not permit Mr. Spreckels to sail his ship under the American flag; and so this American vessel will be put under the protection of the Sandwich Islands. The people of those islands, being much less intelligent and progressive than we are, have not yet learned that it is a ruinous policy to allow an English built vessel to bear the Hawaiian flag.

The same paper reports that a large new sailing vessel, the Puritan, recently sailed out of the Clyde with 3,000 tons of iron pipes for Brazil, proceeding thence to New York, where her owners live, and that another large sailing ship is under construction at Greenock, Scotland, also to be owned by Americans. What flag these two ships are to bear is not stated, but presumably the English.

The New York Commercial Bulletin says that the fine Inman steamer the City of Paris, which recently met with a disaster, and also its twin vessel, the City of New York, are both supposed to be owned by Americans, and that the same is true of the Red Star line.

The Bulletin thinks that if the navigation laws were suddenly repealed it would probably be a surprise to see how many vessels would immediately float the Stars and Stripes.

If these Americans should now hoist the flag of their country on these American owned vessels the government would take their owners in hand and make their punishment fit the crime.

The enlightened policy of our government is that the American ship builder must be protected, although our shipping perish or seek a foreign flag.

The cheap grades of gloves worn by people of modest means will bear a duty under the McKinley bill of from 50 to 72 per cent. greater than the present duty. The lowest grade of gloves pay now $1.43 per dozen; Mr. McKinley raises this to $2.07. The gloves worn by the rich are left at the present figure.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.
"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely Cured Me.
I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.
"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

ADVICE IN TILING AND DRAINING.

This is a good season of the year to lay down tile, and there is probably not an orchard or garden in the South that would not be benfitted by underground drainage, and the time is not far distant when every progressive fruit grower will have his fields underlaid with tile to carry off the excess of water. There are so many good works on this subject we need not go into voluminous details but can sum up the main points of this subject as follows:

1. The ditch is made from 3 to 3½ feet deep and just wide enough at the top to admit the hips of the workman, and from the hips to the feet, the ditch is converged to the width of the tile to be laid. Workman can stand with one foot before the other in laying tile.

2. Expedite the work of digging by using the plow to loosen the soil and subsoil for the first two feet or more. The loosened dirt to be thrown out by hand.

3. Lay off the ditches parallel to each other, and 33 feet apart on an average. For heavy soils, 30 feet would be better, and for light soil 40 may do well.

4. A principal that should be carefully observed in laying out a system of drains is to divide the water as much as possible, and not collect it so as to become of such a volume as to be dangerous or troublesome in washing out gullies, or even in undermining and destroying the main lines of tile.

5. Except in a few cases, run up and down hillsides instead of parallel with the base. In this way, springs can readily be drained.

6. Have the greatest descent near the outlet.

7. In case of a deep valley, where it will likely wash considerable from heavy rains, put main drain on either side of the ditch, or run, and not in it.

8. Avoid sharp or angular turns.

9. Avoid having two laterals empty into the main drain opposite each other.

10. In draining large ponds it is best to put a "silt basin" at the lowest point, in which to run the mains and from which the large mains start. This silt basin is but a small cistern into which dirty water loses its silt before passing into the outlet drain. This silt or mud can be cleaned out every year, and thus prevent clogging up the main.

11. Drain if possible when is wet enough to make the soil and subsoil easily spaded.

12. Tile can be laid on a dead level. It is better, however, to have a fall of half inch to the rod, or more.

13. Drains 40 feet apart take 1,000 tiles to the acre.

14. Commence at the upper end of a ditch to lay tile.

15. Tramp dirt well under and at the sides to prevent displacement when ground settles in the ditch.

16. Never plant near a drain, figs, willows, elms, poplars, mulberries, parsnips, or carrots, or any tree or plant that has a peculiar liking to water.—Southern Horticultural Journal.

THE SIZE OF TILES.

Is a matter of much importance, whether we regard the efficiency and durability of our work, or economy in completing it. The cost of tiles, and the freight on them, increase rapidly with their size, and it is, therefore, well to use the smallest that will effect the object in view. Tiles should be large enough, as a first proposition, to carry off, in a reasonable time, all the surplus water that may fall upon the land. Here, the English rules would not be safe for us; for, although England has many more rainy days than we have, yet we have in general, a greater fall of rain, more inches of water from the clouds in the year. Instead of their drizzle, we have thunder showers in Summer, and in Spring and Autumn north-east storms, when, the windows of heaven are opened, and a deluge, except in duration, bursts upon us. Then, at the North, the Winter snows cover the fields until April, when they suddenly dissolve, often under heavy showers of rain, and planting time is at once upon us. It is desirable that all the snow and rain-water should pass through the soil into the drains, instead of overflowing the surface, so as to save the elements of fertility with which such water abounds, and also to prevent the washing of the soil. We require, then, a greater capacity of drainage, larger tiles, than do the English, for our drains must do a greater work than theirs, and in less time.—Klippart.

DISTANCE BETWEEN THE DRAINS.

Concerning this, there is less unanimity of opinion among engineers than prevails with regard to the question of depth. In tolerably porous soils, it is generally conceded that 40 or even 50 feet is sufficiently near for 4 foot drains, but for the more retentive clays, all distances from 18 feet to 50 feet are recommended, though those who belong to the more narrow school are, as a rule, extending the limit, as they see in practice, the complete manner in which drains at wider intervals perform their work. A careful consideration of the experience of the past twenty years, and of the arguments of writers on drainage, leads to the belief that there are few soils, which need draining at all, on which it will be safe to place 4 foot drains at much wider intervals than 40 feet. In the lighter loams there are instances of the successful application of Professor Mapes' rule, that "3-foot drains should be placed 20 feet apart, and for each additional foot in depth the distance may be doubled; for instance, 4-foot drains should be 40 feet apart, and 5 foot drains 80 feet apart."—Waring.

A NEW OFFICE FOR WOMEN.

As in other things Chicago has been the first to take a new departure in the matter of public officers, even under so steady and conservative a system as that of the Civil Service. A short time ago, Mrs. Minerva K. Elliott, the brilliant Republican lady orator, was appointed to an official position in the Post Office under Postmaster Sexton. The local Civil Service Examining Board here had never been fully organized—that is, an acting secretary, Mr. Maher of the postal service, had been on duty—and his time was so much occupied in other respects that the reports of the examinations had got considerably behind hand. At Postmaster Sexton's suggestion and on his recommendation, an order was made by the National Civil Service Commission appointing Mrs. Elliott a member of the local examining board and designating her to be secretary of the board.

The dûties of this place require a high order of intelligence, expertness in business methods and a correct knowledge of the methods by which the Civil Service act is administered. Mrs. Elliott is the only woman in the United States who is a member of any Civil Service Board, and performing its most important official duties. She is said to have easily acquired the requisite familiarity with the law, and her record is giving excellent satisfaction.

To a Journal reporter Mrs. Elliott gave a few hints as to her experience. She says that lady applicants for examination, as a rule—that is, those of real intelligence and fitness—pass at a higher percentage than men supposably of similar abilities, acquirements and station in life. The usual average of superiority is from 3 to 5 per cent.—Chicago Evening Journal.

GARDNER-SPAULDING WEDDING.

We clip the following notice from the Sheboygan, Wis, Telegram of April 28th.

The denoument of one of Cupid's many little plots, which occurred yesterday at Sheboygan Falls, very happily resulted in the marriage of Miss Minnie E. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gardner of that village, to Mr. Fred O. Spaulding of Milwaukee, The wedding, which was a quiet one, only the immediate relatives and a few friends being present, took place at three o'clock P. M., the Rev. E. Dresser officiating. The bride is well known in social circles at Sheboygan Falls, and her departure from the home of her childhood will be a source of regret to her many friends there, as deep and sincere, as are their good wishes for her future welfare and happiness. The groom Mr. Spaulding is a genial and enterprising young gentleman, formerly of Chicago, but for some time past of Milwaukee. Mr. and Mrs. Spaulding will depart this evening for Milwaukee, which place they will make their future home, residing at 181 Pleasant street. The Telegram joins with their friends, in wishing them all happinesss, and "bon voyage" on their life's future journey.

PROF. DEWEY'S VENTILATOR.

[From the Alpena Pioneer]

Prof. F. S. Dewey of this city some time ago secured a patent on an apparatus for ventilating and equalizing the temperature of buildings. It is especially adapted to large rooms, such as schools, halls, etc. Mr. Dewey has placed fifteen of these ventilators in the public schools of this city and another in the Methodist church, and all are working admirably.

At the sanitary convention held at Vicksburg Dec. 5 and 6, under the direction of the State Board of health, Prof. Dewey made an address on the subject of ventilation, illustrating the subject by means of a model applied to a house with a fire in it, smoke being drawn into it to illustrate to the eye the circulation of the air. Prof. Vaughan of the University, Dr. H. B. Baker of the State Board of Health Prof. Estabrook and others, highly complimented Mr. Dewey's invention. Prof. Estabrook has sent Mr. Dewey the following testimonial:

OLIVET, Mich., Dec. 16, 1889.

I have carefully examined Prof. Dewey's system of ventilation. It is in all respects the best I have ever seen. The stove may be placed in one corner of the room and the heat be evenly distributed in all parts of the room. It can be used equally well with furnace. Its working is simple, the expense is moderate and it meets all the requirements of perfect ventilation. I should like to see it in every school building in Michigan.

J. ESTABROOK,
Supt. Public Instruction.

ANOTHER OLD HERALD.

"I see you were bragging last week about an old copy of the HERALD," said Lew Waldron, as he came into the office last Monday and laid a dingy looking sheet on the table. "Here is a relic which will discount your last week's paper over two years." Sure enough, it did. It was volume three, number forty-four, dated August 29th, 1853. Richard, Baxter and Demott were the publishers. One-half of the sheet had been torn off and destroyed, leaving only the first and second pages. The general make-up and contents are very similar to the paper described last week. We append two or three articles clipped from the second page.

TECUMSEH CEMETERY LOTS.

We are requested to state that the sale of these lots was adjourned on Saturday last, to be continued on Saturday next, upon the ground, at one o'clock P. M. Quite a large number of lots were entered, yet so many of our citizens were not upon the ground it was thought best to continue the sale, that all who desire to select a location for individual entry and improvement may have an opportunity to do so. The chart of the ground is with E. B. Wood, Esq., the Village Clerk, and those desiring to make private entries without again going upon the ground, can do so at the minimum prices. The terms of payment are extended to six months and one year.

It is very much desired that the citizens generally should unite in making at once a purchase of such lots as they shall be likely to desire, that we may thus have in our hands, at the commencement, a liberal fund with which to enclose and improve the grounds, and so proceed to make them at once, everyway more desirable and valuable than they now seem to be. These lots, when once improved, can not be expected to be long held at the mere nominal value at which they are now offered to the public; those therefore desiring to secure them will do well to do so without delay.

JACKSON RAILROAD MEETING.

We learn from the Evening Expositor that the Railroad Meeting at Jackson on Saturday last was numerously attended, and was of a spirited and determined character. We are pleased to see that the northern counties were also numerously represented. Peter Morey and A. J. Comstock, of Lenawee, Wm. Howell of Hillsdale, and G. W. Peck of Ingham were among the speakers. Some facts were brought to light with regard to the aims and management of the Central monopoly, which elicited much mirth and were deserving of notice. From the pervading spirit of the meeting we are only more confirmed in the belief, not only that the speedy completion of the Tecumseh branch of the Sauthern Railroad, not only to Jackson, but also to Lansing and Grand Haven, may now be regarded as a fixed fact, but also that the over-weening selfishness of the Central Road is fast hastening them to a more direct antagonism with the public will, and a most mortifying popular rebuff and check.

MELANCHOLY EVENT.

Mr. Philip M. DePuy, of Raisin, three miles east of Tecumseh, on Monday morning, the 23d inst., in a state of mental aberration, took a fatal dose of laudanum and died the same day. He had recently sold his farm preparatory to a removal east. He was in good circumstances, a worthy citizen, and respected by all whose acquaintance he had formed during the short period of his location among us. This had been short, having only removed from the east last fall.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Morris Fox died of heart disease April 26th, 1890, at 6 A. M. Funeral services were held at his residence Sunday at 3 P. M., Rev. H. R. Williams of Clinton officiating. The deceased was born in Colrain, Franklin county, Mass., January 20, 1825. With his mother and two sisters he moved to Michigan in the year 1837, where he lived until his death. He was one of a family of four children, only one of whom is now remaining, the wife of Oscar Smith of Jackson county, Mich. Mr. Fox was married April 19th, 1852, to Sarah A. Smith, the daughter of Moses and Violettie Smith, of Tecumseh. His faithful wife, five sons and three daughters and six grandchildren are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband, father and grandfather.

The Standard.

"I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla as having passed above the grade of what are commonly called patent or proprietary medicines," said a well known physician recently. "It is fully entitled to be considered a standard medicine, and has won this positon by its undoubted merit and by the many remarkable cures it has effected. For an alterative and tonic it has never been equalled."

Deformity From Bright's Disease.

S. D. Van Buskirk, of Demarest, N. J., says Aug 20, 1888: "Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., has cured our daughter of Bright's Disease, after all other means had failed. She was so swollen that she measured 45 inches around the waste, and 18 inches below the knee. To say that we feel thankful for such a boon as Favorite Remedy is but a poor expression of the feelings of grateful parents.

THE MAY PARTY.

The fourth annual May party, given by the Tecumseh Bi. Club, was held at the Opera House last Friday evening. The music was furnished by Wolff & Leon's orchestras, of Toledo, and surpassed all previous efforts of the club in that direction. The concert, which began at 8 o'clock, was listened to by a crowded gallery, and was given exactly as published in last week's HERALD. The selections were all excellent, and when Prof. Richards gave his piano solo with the keyboard covered, it brought down the house, and he was obliged to respond to a hearty encore. The programme continued about an hour, and the promenade then began.

Forty couples entered the grand march, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Eccles. Owing to the lateness of the hour the march was shortened, and the dancers were soon tripping the fantastic to the notes of a lively quadrille. About fifty couples participated in the dance during the evening, and there was a good attendance of spectators also. R. C. Van-Antwerp acted as caterer. Covers were laid for one hundred guests in Armory Hall, and those who partook of the midnight lunch said that Van never served a better dance supper. The committee on decoration acted well their part, too.

The walls about the room and platform were neatly ornamented with curtains, bicycle wheels, Japanese ornaments, etc., presenting a very tasty appearance.

Adrian and Clinton were both well represented on the floor, while our own dancers turned out in goodly numbers. The various committees in charge, which we give below, have reason to congratulate themselves on the success of their fourth annual May party.

COMMITTEES.

Arrangements—Walter C. Burridge, Will H. Hayden, Geo. S. Field, Fred Rosacrans, Henry McClure.

Invitation—A. J. Cummins, Tom McClure, C. F. Patterson, Lynn Hardenburg, John Anderson.

A FINE MUSICALE.

A very pleasant musical rehearsal was given by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Orr at their residence last Thursday evening, in honor of Miss Dora Grayson and her guest, Prof. Richards. A large company of invited guests assembled, who participated in an evening's unalloyed enjoyment. The following program was rendered:

Piano Solo, Grand Polka De Concert —Prof. Richards.

Song, The Devoted Appeal—Miss Dora Heck.

Piano Duet—Prof. Richard and Miss Ella Jackson.

Song—Miss Dora Grayson

Duet—Clarionet by Will Ingersoll and cornet by Miss Edith Ingersoll.

Piano Solo, Liszt Rhapsodies—Prof. Richards.

Piano Solo, Home, Sweet Home, representing waves in a storm—Prof. Richards.

After which Prof. Richards played a piano selection with the key board covered, which was so finely rendered that he was obliged to respond to an encore.

The company dispersed at a late hour highly pleased with their entertainment.

We made a brief business visit to Ridgeway Tuesday afternoon and found our neighbor right side up with care. F. J. Temple is nicely located in his new drug store, and Postmaster Culbertson has his office in the same corner. H. J. Williams runs the hardware store on the opposite corner and is thriving. Coryell & Smith run the general supply store and undertaking business, and can be classed now with the best firms of the village. S. P. Smith lately sold his grocery stock to Will Clack and Will runs dry goods and groceries at the old Waring stand. S. Helm & Son are making harness for all that section, while Mrs. W. J. Helm furnishes the ladies of the town with new spring bonnets. Mr. Harrison supplies he tables of Ridgeway with the substantials of life. The library is flourishing. We attended the regular meeting of the Circle that evening, but could only listen to a small part of the program as we had to return on the train.

The interior arrangement of the post office has underwent a change of transformation.

We have received a copy of the Oklahoma Daily Capital. It is a seven column quarto sheet and contains an illustrated description of Guthrie, the leading city of the new territory. It is wonderful how newspapers spread in those booming western towns.

The Tecumseh Celery Co. have been rewarded for their search for more water. The borers have struck a vein about 120 feet below the surface, which yields an exhaustless supply of the purest liquid. Manager Hollister, who is a Prohibitionist, is delighted with the well.

We are indebted to A. VanAntwerp of Oakland, Cal., for a late copy of the Oakland Enquirer and San Francisco Examiner. They are fully equal to the metropolitan papers of the East. The former contains twelve pages, two of which are given up to an illustrated description of San Leandro, a suberb of Oakland. The latter is a Sunday edition of twenty pages.

Inspector General Newberry of Coldwater made an inspection of Co. C. Tuesday evening last. He was assisted by Major Woodward. Gen. Newberry expressed himself as highly pleased with the condition of the arms and accoutrements of the company and also with its personel. Capt. Wood was present and the company appeared with full ranks. Gen. Newberry went to Monroe yesterday afternoon.

At a meeting of the Patrons of Industry held at Tipton last evening, after the business meeting was over a lively debate ensued on the tariff question, L. E. Taylor taking the free trade side and Clem Bramble the protection side. The disputants are pretty well matched and there was very some sharp sparing on both sides. The debate will be continued four weeks hence.

There is much speculation in Toledo and elsewhere as to the outcome in the settlement of the estate of the late Frederick Eaton. Final accounts have not yet been submitted to the Probate Court, but it is learned from reliable sources that the debts will aggregate fully $6,000 000, while the assets will not allow the payment to creditors of more than 40 to 50 cents on the dollar. It is to be regretted that one whose energy and push did so much for Toledo should himself be the loser to such extent.—Toledo Bee

The Tecumseh Herald thinks it is time the second district should have a farmer representative in congress—especially a Democratic farmer—and with flattering words brings forward thus early the name of Alexander Richard, a Raisin agriculturist, saying that "if the Democrats wish to redeem this district next fall" they will nominate that gentleman for congress. Now we want to know what's the matter with Seth Bean? Isn't he a farmer, too? Anyway he owns a farm, and when it comes to milking (legal) no one can do a more thoroughly scientific job than he.—Morenci Observer.

The Sheffield, Alabama, Enterprise of the 1st, announces that Mr. and Mrs Harry B. Root and sister expect to leave for their home at Tecumseh this week, Mr. Root having so far recovered that his physician permitted the journey. While making a river landing at Sheffield, the steamer on which Harry was a passenger was swept by the flood current against the dock, doing considerable damage to the upper works and throwing him down the gangway. He was picked up unconscious and carried to the hotel, being well cared for by masonic and other friends until the arrival of his wife and sister. They are expected home this week.

An Adrian correspondent says a suit was decided in the circuit court whereby a party was taught the cost of carelessness. A mortgage had been paid and the mortgagor requested the mortgagee to discharge it. The latter said he would, provided the fees for so doing were paid. He named the amount he wanted and it was paid. Time passed along, yet he did not enter the discharge as he promised. He was importuned, but kept putting off the day, till finally the mortgagor brought suit under the statute, and after a full hearing the jury gave a verdict of $100, the full statutory penalty. It is the first case of the kind ever brought in our court.

The National hotel at Dundee has again changed hands, a former Dundeean coming all the way from California to get a lease of it. What kind of a town could he have left in California?—Saline Observer. Well, he left a good town and came to a good town to run a good hotel.—Dundee Reporter.

DROPPED DEAD!

Death of Senator Beck of Kentucky.

HIS LONG ILLNESS ENDS IN A FATAL TERMINATION.

Sketch of His Life—His Distinguished Public Service—Was the Law Partner of ex-Vice President Breckenridge—Carlisle His probable Successor—His Family History—The Funeral.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Senator James B. Beck, of Lexington, Ky., dropped dead suddenly in the Baltimore and Potomac depot at 4 p. m., Saturday.

Mr. Beck's death was not unexpected by those who knew him in the Senate, although he and his friends had assured everyone of late that he was growing better rapidly. The illness which ended fatally began a little less than two years ago, when he was threatened with heart trouble.

[Senator Beck was born in Scotland, February 18, 1822, and coming to this country as a youth, graduated in law at Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky., in 1846. He practiced law in Kentucky for many years and held no office until he was elected to Congress in 1869. He remained a member of the House of Representatives for eight years, when he was elected to the Senate. He took his seat in the Senate March 5th, 1877, and he was twice re-elected.

In the Senate Mr. Beck was for many years a member of the committee on appropriations and the committee on finance, and he was admittedly the best informed Democrat in the Senate on the Tariff question and always a leader in the debates on silver.

All Eyes Turn to Carlisle As the Kentuckian Most Competent to Take Senator Beck's Place.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The death of Mr. Beck has started discussion on the question of his successor in the Senate. Mr. Carlisle is by common consent conceded to be the most prominent Kentuckian for the place, but there are a number of Democrats who do not approve of his transfer from the House, where he is, and has been such a leading figure.

While this point is a good one, other Democrats argue that Mr. Carlisle is more needed in the Senate than in the House at this time. Mr. Beck was the mainstay of his party in the Senate on financial and tariff questions. During his illness there has been no one to take his place, and with the certainty of the passage of the tariff bill in the House under a limited debate, the Senate will be the battle-ground on that subject, and Mr. Carlisle, it is insisted, will be a most valuable acquisition in the upper body.

The silver question, on which Mr. Beck was a leader, will also be more prominent in the Senate than in the House, and Mr. Carlisle's views and powerful ability of expression, it is said, will fill the requirements of the Democratic party to better purpose there than in the House.

Opinion in Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 5.—The Transcript contains the following editorial concerning the contest that is to come for Mr. Beck's seat in the Senate:

"Who will succeed Beck?" was the frequent inquiry after the fact of his death had been made known. Nearly all were of the opinion that Carlisle is the next in point of statesmanship and ability to the dead Senator. In many respects he was the first choice of all who spoke of the matter of succession. Some spoke of one insurmountable objection, but all bore testimony to his overshadowing greatness of mind. A good many Lexington people spoke of Colonel Breckinridge as the best man in Kentucky to succeed Mr. Beck. Breckenridge stands high as a statesman, and the people of this section as well as the people of Kentucky, recognize his great ability as a legislator. He is next to Mr. Carlisle in ability; he is superior in eloquence, and the people of his district in particular will be delighted to see him become a Senator. He is not a good mixer, however and may not be much of a factor before the present legislature. Speaking of "mixers," ex-Governor McCreary fills that character much better than Colonel Breckenridge. He would be popular with the legislature, and if a little boodle were necessary to help things, he could open a "bar'l" or two. No one pretends, however, that McCreary is the equal of Carlisle or Breckinridge in anything. He is more of a politician than statesman; he would take care of his Kentucky constituents on all occasions, and, as the people know this, he has popular favor accordingly. Governor S. B. Buckner has also frequently mentioned as a possible candidate. Some asserted that Governor Buckner was desirous of succeeding Blackburn, and, as a matter of course, he would make an attempt for Mr. Beck's seat. It is doubtful if Governor Buckner wants to be United States senator. If he does, he will have a strong following, but his recent vetoes will bring him opposition where he would otherwise have had support. To offset this is the feeling that he is an honest man, who will do what he believes is right, regardless of consequences. Governor Buckner is a man of wealth and will be able to make a strong fight if he enters the race.

Another possibility is Hon. James A. McKenzie, who is said to have a desire to go to the senate. He is a man of acknowledged ability, but no one here is able to form an opinion as to his strength. J. Proctor Knott and Judge William Lindsay are also mentioned as aspirants for a seat in the Senate.

In all probability Governor Buckner will immediately appoint a successor to Mr. Beck, and notify the legislature to proceed to elect a senator to fill out the unexpired term. As the legislature has decided to adjourn on May 14, it will in all probability extend the session, probably indefinitely. There will be a great contest for Mr. Beck's seat.

Beck's Home Life—His Public Cares Not Allowed to Burden the Home Circle—His Family.

LEXINGTON, KY., May 5.—The news of Senator Beck's death was received here at half-past five o'clock. It came with such suddenness that many people discredited the announcement. Although he was quite an invalid when here last November, nobody believed that it would be his last visit to his old home.

When the people finally realized Senator Beck was surely dead much sorrow was expressed. While not so popular with the masses as many of Kentucky's great politicians, Beck was a man who made many staunch friends who deeply mourn his loss. Mr. Beck's wife was Miss Jane Thornton, of Virginia, and two children bless their union. George is now on his large ranch in Montana, more than one hundred miles from any telegraph office, and Elizabeth is the wife of Major Green Clay Goodloe, paymaster of marines.

While Mr. Beck's public duties were of a most laborious character his home life was singularly beautiful. He was devoted to his wife and children, and when the former died a few years ago the senator's grief was unusually severe. Since then his daughter has been almost constantly with him, and her devotion to her father since his health broke down, a few months after her mother's death, was a subject of comment.

The deceased was a law partner of the late John C. Breckinridge, and so devoted was he to that distinguished Confederate leader that it is stated he wished to accompany him to the South, when Breckinridge left this city to accept his commission in the Confederate army. Breckinridge persuaded him to stay here and watch his interest in the west. Beck did this and so well was his work done that Breckinridge's sons John C. and Cabel, owe their present great wealth to their father's friend Beck.

Senator Beck's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The remains of Senator Beck are at the residence of Congressman Breckenridge. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral. It is expected however to occur in the Senate chamber on Tuesday next.

JEALOUSY

Causes a Bloody Tragedy at Waterbury, Connecticut.

WATERBURY, CONN., May 5.—Arthur Jackson, colored, of Bristol, while drunk last night, at 12 o'clock, went to the Bristol house where his wife is a waitress, and demanded that she go home. She got up and dressed to avoid a scene and went home. First he made her hold a light while he killed his dog with an axe; then, with a razor, he began operations on the woman. He cut her throat horribly, so she cannot live, as many veins and arteries are severed, besides cutting off several of her fingers. But for the arrival of a neighbor, Jack Fish, who found the man kicking the dying woman, he would probably have cut her in pieces. Jackson had saturated the room with kerosene oil, and it was evidently his intention to burn the residence. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause. Jackson was arrested at Plainville, while eating dinner. Jackson and his wife have been married four years and have one child.

PUBLIC PRESTIDIGITATORS.

Forecast of the Congressional Solons' Proceedings This Week.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The great tariff debate opens in the House this week. It is to begin Tuesday, if nothing occurs to interfere, and it will extend through the week at least. No limit has been set upon the general debate, but an effort will be made during the week to pass a resolution placing a limit upon it, and that limit will be short. The Republicans talk of setting it at one week, and the Democrats ask two weeks. An effort is being made to bring about a compromise on ten days, but with what success remains to be seen. The leaders of the Republican side have consulted among themselves; they have consulted with the speaker, and they have consulted with the Democratic members of the ways and means committee, but always with the same unsatisfactory result. The matter now rests in the hands of the committee on rules, and a resolution will doubtless be reported from that committee at an early day. The only other important business to be considered in the House is the business which may come up under suspension of the rules today. The Republicans are anxious to call up the river and harbor bill, and they claim that they have pledged the two-thirds vote necessary to take it up, but the speaker has not said that he will recognize a member of the committee to make the motion to take up the bill, and so its fate is still a problem. What other business may be called up under suspension is a matter of speculation and of no certainty. On Saturday afternoon the House will listen to eulogies on the late Representative Wilbur, of New York.

The Senate business is pretty well mapped out for the week, although several important changes in the programme may take place. The bill for the admission of Wyoming to the union is down for consideration Monday, and the Jones silver bill for Wednesday. If the Jones bill should be taken up as per programme and the Wyoming bill should not have been disposed of, the latter will likely be taken up in the morning hour each day, while the Jones bill is considered after 2 o'clock. The consideration of the Jones bill may be postponed if there seems any probability that the Republican caucus can come to an agreement, but as matters now stands the Senate will go into the silver debate without any caucus action binding the Republican members. And if this condition remains unchanged it is altogether likely that the Senate will pass a measure which will be in substance a free-coinage bill; or rather a bill for the free purchase of bullion. On Saturday the Senate will consider measures on the calendar. One day during the week will be given over to the funeral of the late Senator Beck.

DR. CRONIN'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Final Obsequies of the Murdered Irish Patriot in Chicago on Sunday.

CHICAGO, May 5.—All that is mortal of Dr. Patrick Henry Cronin, who a year ago Saturday night was lured to the den of death, now known to history as the Carlson cottage, was laid to rest in the afternoon in a grove on the cold and desolate beach-front of Calvery cemetery. Over a thousand men and women, who had known him in life, braved the bleak wind and pelting rain to witness the obsequies. The Sheridan Guards acted as guards of honor and the Illinois drum corps, with muffled drums, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, in their green regalia, and the Catholic Foresters turned out a large number. When the casket was placed on the edge of the grave, the brief offices for the interment of the dead were read by Bishop Muldoon chancellor of the diocese, and after it had been sprinkled with Holy water, it was lowered into the tomb. Then the members of the ladies committee began to strew flowers upon the coffin lid, and before the two wagon loads which they had brought with them had been exhausted, the grave was filled to the brim. The drum corps beat at tattoo as the heavy stone was rolled over the tomb, sealed and cemented; the office for commital was read by the priest and the ceremony was at an end. It is intended to erect a monument over the grave at a cost of not less than $5,000, and so to beautify the surroundings until the present dreary waste is converted into a garden.

AT HIS OLD TRICKS.

Fred Newburg Charged With Embezzling $5,000 of His Employer's Funds.

COLUMBUS, O., May 5.—In 1882 a great sensation was created in this city by the discovery that Frederick W. Newburg, till that time a trusted clerk in the office of the Board of Public Works, had embezzled thousands of dollars from the state. He was a bright young married man, universally popular and well connected. Numerous indictments were returned against him, and when arraigned to answer the first he pleaded guilty and was given a six-year sentence. Futile efforts were made to secure his pardon, but a parole was granted him in 1886.

Believing that his reformation was complete, Lazarus Bros., an extensive firm of this city, gave him employment, and as he was an expert accountant he was rapidly promoted. In December, 1886, he was formally discharged from the penitentiary and the remaining indictments nolled. Recently his employers learned that he was living in the most extravagant manner, giving wine parties to the demi monde and spending money freely. They discharged him, and with his wife he at once left the city. An investigation was made, and his late employers state Newburg has embezzled over $5,000 of the funds of Lazarus Bros. and the Columbus Base Ball club, of which he was secretary.

St. Jacobs Oil Cures

PROMPTLY AND PERFECTLY

BRUISES, SWELLINGS, CUTS, &c.

A bruise is a contusion; swellings are inflammations; cuts and wounds are alike disturbances to natural action, through which the veins are clogged, circulation impeded, congestion sets in and pains ensue. Nature is impatient—it tries to right itself and pain impatient—it tries to right itself and pain insists. Bruises and swellings need a soothing influence, but in cuts and wounds hardly any one would pour a liquid remedy into a gaping wound. So soon as nature brings the parts together, almost at once,

St. Jacobs Oil soothes, clears away obstructions, heals the injured tissues and restores. Used according to directions, it helps nature and cures

PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY.

A HURRICANE

Kills Two Outright and Injures Three Others.

THE TERRIBLE EPIDEMIC IN TENNESSEE OF Spotted Fever—The Awful Contagion Near Franklin—Seventeen Deaths in a Few Days—The People Fleeing for Their Lives—Timber Fires—Awful Devastations.

WILLSPOINT, TEX., May 5.—A hurricane struck here at noon and every house in town is more or less damaged. Two persons were killed outright and several injured. The killed are Mrs. Bowen, caught under a falling wall and crushed to death, and a negro girl, fourteen years old, daughter of Sam Mitchell. The injured are Jack Ballard, internally, dangerous; a son of E. McManus, arm broken in two places; Mrs. Mitchell (colored), mother of the girl killed. Mrs. Freeman's residence was blown over, the family just getting out in time to escape injury. The Methodist church and public building were demolished, while other churches were blown off their foundations. A number of stores and residences were blown down. The hurricane also visited Mesquore, Thornton, Terrell and other points, doing great damage.

Spotted Fever.

CINCINNATI, O., May 5.—Additional reports of the ravages of the spotted fever near Franklin, Tenn., have been received confirming and augmenting the horrors briefly reported Friday night. The disease is unusually fatal, nine out of every ten persons attacked dying. The fever had a brief run in Tennessee and western countries, about two months ago, but disappeared and people were greatly elated at their seeming escape, but last week it reappeared and within forty-eight hours of its coming had taken five lives. Since then a dozen more have died and the people of the stricken districts have about concluded to abandon forever, as this is the fifth visitation of the fever. Farms and all kinds of stock can be bought for a song. The origin of the disease is not known. It comes without warning and goes as suddenly.

Through a Burned Bridge.

ST. CLOUD, MINN., May 5.—Timber fires along the Hinckley Branch of the Great Northern railway yesterday set fire to the bridge across the ravine between Holley and St. Francis stations. When the west bound regular approached the burned structure, the engineer, Ryan, noticed the bent rails, and, apprehending danger, reversed the lever, and together with the fireman jumped from the engine. A moment later the engine, tender and ten box cars plunged through the burned bridge a distance of twenty feet and were entirely consumed. No one was injured although the escape of the engineer and firemen was miraculous.

Terrible Prairie Conflagrations.

STILLWATER, MINN., May 5.—Millions of feet of pine are being consumed in the St. Croix valley by forrest fires. For miles the air is so filled with smoke that breathing is almost impossible. Hundreds of men are at work ploughing about their meadows to prevent the spread of the forest fires. The woodland cannot be saved, and the fire will cease only after exhausting itself. Many woodsmen have deserted their homes and gone southward.

The Great Northwest Fires.

HAZELHURST, WIS., May 5.—This village had a narrow escape from fatal destruction. Fire started in some lumber piles, and driven by a terrific wind swept down upon the village, carrying everything before it. Ten dwellings were burned before before it was gotton under control.

Alarming Forest Flames.

HUDSON, WIS., May 5.—Reports to this point from New Richmond, Wis., are of the most alarming character. Forest fires are burning on three sides of the village, and the last dispatch states that the depot of the Omaha company was on fire and asked that the Hudson fire department be rushed to that point at once.

Burning the Country Up.

MOORHEAD, MINN., May 5.—The prairies are ablaze in Clay county and several small towns are in danger of distruction by fire.

A $250,000 STEAL.

How the Farmers' Alliance of Texas Was Bled by Stock Sharpers.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., May 5.—The Picayune's Austin, Tex., special says: "The farmers alliance of Texas is in trouble and sensational developments are rumored. In 1887 the leaders organized an exchange with a capital of $500,000, the stock being taken by the subordinate lodges. The exchange lasted about two years, during which time, it is alleged, nearly a quarter of a million of dollars was handled, and there is nothing to show for it but about $40,000 worth of property. Farmers who contributed the money are anxious to have an investigation, and will institute suit to receive certain properties in Dallas, now occupied as an alliance and commercial agency.

A GUSHER.

Oil Struck at Terre Haute—The Miners' Strike Over.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., May 5.—The third oil well has been obtained here. The well is located within a block of the center of the city. The capacity of the well is not yet known. Operations were suspended to provide for the gusher which is expected. Great excitement prevails. The oil rock was reached at less than at any other well drilled in this field. This is regarded as a strong indication of a very large flow.

The Bituminous operators and miners reached an agreement and the seventy cents scale was signed. It does not apply to Washington and Ayeshire mines. This settles the strike.

PISTOLS FOR TWO.

Mysterious and Fatal Encounter at Atlanta.

ATLANTA, GA., May 5.—Two days ago a man registered at Folsom's restuarant as J. M. Howard, of St. Louis. Yesterday another man came and registered as M. J. Goldman. The two went to a room. In a few minutes two pistol shots were heard. Howard was found wounded in the bowels and shoulder. Goldmand had fled. The wounded man refuses to talk except to say his real name is E. S. Skinner. He may die.

M'COMAS BILL.

Points of the Measure as Described.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION REGULATIONS.

The Objections of the Democrats—Gerrymandering of State Legislatures to be Nipped in the Bud—The Greatest Political Legislation of the Age.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Mr. McComas, of Maryland, submitted to the House the views of the majority of the house committee on the election of the president, vice president and representatives in Congress on his bill to regulate in part the time and manner of holding elections of representatives in Congress, on which the committee authorized a favorable report some weeks ago. The majority of the committee believe in the light of recent history that the power conferred by the constitution on Congress to make or alter such regulations should now be exerted to restrain abuses in the re-districting of the states, to secure first a stable and equal representation of the people in Congress, add then to prevent intimidation or bribery at elections for representatives in Congress.

As the country grows more anxious to secure fair elections, congress is justly urged to pass national election laws to guarantee fair voting, counting and return of the election of congressmen. In states hostile to the exercise of the suffrage by the colored citizens the enforcement of such laws is difficult indeed. Subject of a national election law is involved in the negro problem. This anti-gerrymandering bill may be effective in the white states where powerful minorities of white voters are today suppressed by shameful gerrymandering. It will check reckless gerrymandering in the black belt and make it easier for representatives elected there to obtain certification of election. The minority of the committee also submit a report in support of their views.

The bill, they say, purports to be aimed at the vice of gerrymandering, and seeks to cut out by the roots this system, as alleged to be practiced by the states, when, in fact, it only transfers the system to the national theater, where, we may expect, in this enlarged field, to witness its highest development and reap its ripest fruits. It professes to prohibit gerrymandering by the states, but invites its adoption by congress. It denies to the states the right to change their districts for members of congress except once in ten years, and reserves the right exclusively to congress, to be exercised at its pleasure, or upon the demand of party.

Mr. Frank, of Missouri, signed neither of the foregoing reports. He has drafted a second minority report, in which he sets forth his views. He takes the ground that the bill is very wide in its range, but very narrow in its purpose. It was intended to cover a political exigency for the purpose of perpetuating a party in power. It had never been designed by the constitution to take away the rights of the state legislatures to district the states, and the exercise by the national legislature of that power (except in the event of a state refusing to exercise its constitutional right) had not been contemplated. Not that such an exercise by a national body would be invalid when the state legislature had exercised its powers; but the framers of the constitution had not contemplated that action except in a failure to act on the part of the state. Mr. Frank maintains that the bill, being retroactive, is not the "making or altering" of the alteration already made, but is the repealing of regulations made; and the right to this may be very seriously questioned.

The most cogent reason for his refusal to give assent to the views of the majority is that the measure will be very unpopular and distasteful to the minds of the people who are not lawyers and who are unable to draw a distinction between an expost facto and a retroactive law under the constitution of the United States. Under the constitutions of all the states no expost facto law can be passed; and under some of them no retroactive law can be passed. A retroactive law is always regarded with great disfavor and the people will sustain congressional action in the way the bill proposes.

THAT DOUBLE MURDER

At Baltimore—Details Of the Finding Of the Bodies.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 5.—From the condition of the bodies of the Blaney woman it was judged the murder must have been committed ten or twelve hours before. The women had not retired and were fully dressed. The crime was committed in the kitchen where the bodies were found and the assailants must have faced his victims as the wounds were chiefly on the forehead and on the top of the head. The younger woman bore evidence of a struggle and marks on her throat indicated that she had been choked. The murderer probably failed to secure any booty, as nearly a thousand dollars was found carefully concealed in the old lady's dress. Blaney claims the blood on his clothing was the result of nose bleeding. Mrs. Blaney was nearly eighty years of age and was supposed to be in very comfortable circumstances. She and her daughter resided alone. They recently sold the former home for $1400 cash. Young Blaney knew his grandmother had money from the sale, somewhere in the present home, and it is supposed he murdered her to secure possession of it. The house was found turned upside down and ransacked evidently in search of money.

A DROP OF JUSTICE.

Workmen Killed By a Falling Derrick.

PITTSBURG, May 5.—Saturday afternoon while workmen were hoisting the statue of "Justice," weighing four tons, to the fifth story of the new government building on Fourth avenue, the derrick broke letting the statue fall to the ground. Thomas Carey, a laborer, was struck by the falling derrick and instantly killed. A large ornamental stone was also broken and the side wall damaged. The statue however, is uninjured by its fall of five stories. The derrick was partly rotten where the break occurred.

California Crops.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—The Chronicle has reports from all the counties of the state, giving an estimate of the crop prospects for this season. While the grain has suffered in many of the large counties owing to the excessive rains, the dispatches show that the quality of the wheat and barley will be good and the yield of all kinds of fruit will be enormous.

FEEDING THE MULTITUDE.

LESSON VI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 11.

Text of the Lesson, Luke ix, 10-17—Commit Verses 16, 17—Golden Text, John vi, 35—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

The sending forth of the twelve, and the beheading of John the Baptist, briefly referred to in the opening verses of this chapter, are more fully recorded by Matthew and Mark. In connection with the first, it is worthy of note that He had just taught them to pray that the Lord of the harvest would send forth laborers into His harvest; then He called the twelve and sent them forth to answer their own prayers. When we pray let us remember that God expects us to be willing to be used by Him in answering our prayers.

10. "And the apostles, when they were returned, told Him all that they had done."

"And He took them, and went aside privately." There were so many coming and going that they had no leisure even to eat, and He took them aside to rest awhile (Mark vi, 31). While we continue in these mortal bodies we cannot work unceasingly, but the time will come when we shall be able to serve unwearedly (Rev. vii, 15). To be often alone with Jesus is another essential to faithful service, for He Himself spent whole nights in prayer to God.

11. "And the people, when they knew it, followed Him." John says that Jesus crossed the Sea of Galilee, and the people followed because they saw His miracles. Matthew and Mark say that Jesus went by ship and that the people followed on foot and outwent Him. In the boat He would be an hour or two alone with His disciples, and they would have a little rest; but what a busy life He lived; it was true of Him "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (Ps. lxix, 9; John ii, 17).

"And He received them." Matthew and Mark both say that He was moved with compassion toward them. No pity for Himself, but full of pity for these sheep without a shepherd, even though he knew their motives in following Him. How unwilling we are to be intruded upon by thoughtless people, our time is so precious. Oh, how unlike our Master!

"And spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing." Both body and soul He attended to, for He is a Saviour for both, and the time will come when every saved soul shall have a redeemed body in which to dwell.

12. "Send the multitude away." So said the twelve as the day began to wear away, and as they, weary and hungry, saw no prospect of rest, and not much prospect of even a bite for themselves from their few loaves and fishes, if that hungry crowd remained. Not all the glorious things of the kingdom, of which Jesus had been speaking, could make even the twelve forget that they were hungry men. They had seen Him still the storm and raise the dead, but they seemed not to consider that the same power could feed these hungry thousands. Their wisdom was to let them scatter where they might, and find food and shelter as they were able in the towns and country round about. The old question still lived, "Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?" (Ps. lxxviii, 19).

13 "But He said unto them, Give ye them to eat." He had asked Philip, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" and Philip had replied that they would need about two hundred pennyworth to give every one a little.

"We have no more but five loaves and two fishes." When He asked Philip, He did it to prove him, for He Himself knew what He would do (John vi, 6), just as He so often lets us get into a strait place to prove us, while all the time He knows the way out and just what He will do.

14, 15. "And He said to His disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company. And they did so, and made them all sit down." Mark says: "Upon the green grass." John says: "There was much grass in the place" (Mark vi, 39; John vi, 10). The thousands were all now orderly arranged and seated in companies upon the green grass. Matthew says there were 5,000 men besides women and children (Matt. xiv, 21); so there may have been 120 companies of 50 each, or ten companies to each of the twelve disciples. But observe the order, and remember the precept, "Let all things be done decently and in order," for God is not the author of confusion (1 Cor. xiv, 33, 40). A disorderly home or room or wardrobe or bureau drawer or office or store is no credit to a Christian. Confusion, disorder, tumult, unquietness are none of the doings of the Holy Spirit. Our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit, and the life of Christ is to be manifest in us. Let us lay it to heart.

16. "Then He took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to Heaven, He blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude." He took just what they had and used it. He took the rod that was in Moses' hand and wrought wonders with it. He took the widow's pot of oil and multiplied it.

17. "And they did eat, and were all filled." Philip thought that two hundred pennyworth might be enough to give every one a little, but Jesus does not give that way. His invitation is, "Eat, O friends; drink, yea drink abundantly, O beloved" (Song of Sol. v, 1). And even these poor shepherdless sheep He delights to fill. As the disciples pass around from company to company pressing more food upon them the answer comes from all directions, Satisfied, abundantly satisfied.

"And there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets." Instead of a little for each disciple, which would have been all that twelve men could obtain from five loaves and two fishes, here is a basketful for each. And they selfishly kept what they had for themselves, how little they would have had, but by giving it away what abundance becomes theirs. Afraid to give to God lest we have not enough for ourselves, we continue poor; but when we cheerfully give Him that which is all His own any way, then He makes us to enjoy His fullness, and our cup runneth over. "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich; and He addeth no sorrow with it" (Prov. x, 22). He gave Himself to be broken and poured forth for us; why should we hesitate to place ourselves in His hands most unreservedly, that we may be broken and passed round by His hands for the life of others? It may not be pleasant to the flesh, but it will be wonderfully profitable. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit" (John xii, 24). Who is willing to be passed round for the good of others, not loving his life here, so that he may keep it unto life eternal? Some miracles are recorded by three of the evangelists, some by two and some by only one; but this one is recorded by all four, and it is, I think, the only one so recorded. May the reason be to teach us that having received Jesus as the Bread of Life for ourselves, our great work now is to pass the same bread to others. If all Christians everywhere would seek above all things to do this, the Gospel would soon be preached to every creature and the kingdom would come.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. —Get a free trial bottle at

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so speedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Bright's Disease Cured!

About two years ago our daughter had congestion of the kidneys, which developed into Bright's Disease. Her body was swollen to an enormous size—measuring 45 inches around the waist and 18 inches below the knee. After physicians had given up her case I determined to have her try Dr Kennedy's of Rondout, N. Y. Gradually the swelling was reduced from 45 to 29 inches. She began to gain strength and was able to walk without fatigue. We do not know how to express our gratitude for what it has done for our child. We are confident the Favorite remedy will do all that is claimed for it—surely God has blessed it in this case, and we earnestly recommend it to all suffering from kidney disorders.—S. D. Two of our Clinton young men accompanied by Old Bourbon had a very large time last Thursday night. They first took E. R. Smith's horse and buggy from his barn, then went to the livery barn and traded the buggy for a dog-cart and started out for a drive. They broke the cart up badly and took another buggy and returned home, not finding Mr. Smith's buggy where they left it, took a carriage which was near, and returned the horse. A young man writes the Gazette from Ohio to inquire if the proposed Hudson Business University will be equal in excellence to longer-established institutions. Inasmuch as the Hudson school will be under the personal supervision of a gentleman who has devoted his whole life to the work, it is safe to say that the advantages of his instruction will be as practical, thorough and comprehensive as any course can be.—Hudson Gazette.

As news items elsewhere show, a party of Toledo gentlemen have been this week passing over the proposed route, through this section, of a new railroad to be called the Toledo and Chicago Air Line, and presenting the interests of that project at various points along the way. They affirm that the road is not a paper scheme, but an actual certainty, and it will run not far south of our village, in Ohio. Perhaps a sufficient inducement could be made to have it come near enough to us for practical convenience and benefit. If Morenci can derive any benefit from this enterprise our citizens should not be indifferent in investigating the matter and acting with promptitude.—Morenci Oberver.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessarry to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Send for our book treating on catarrh. FOSTER, MILBURN & CO., proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in Tecumseh, Mich., by C. A. Wright & Co., druggists.

Facts Worth Knowing

In all diseases of natal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes becaus they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

And now comes H. E. Parshall, the night operator at the Wabash depot, a man of undoubted truth and veracity, and says that on Saturday morning, about two o'clock, he was startled to hear, rising above the storm, gentle strains of music, coming from the northeast. Wonderingly he went out with his lantern to see what the strange sounds meant. He could see nothing, but the music continued, and during a lull in the storm the tune and part of the words were distinctly made out. It was, "A Life on the Ocean Wave." Mr. Parshall, overcoming somewhat his timidity, resolved to investigate. So donning a rubber suit and taking the office washtub and a pike pole he launched his novel craft, and poled himself toward the point of darkness from which the sounds seemed to come. Imagine his surprise when he had reached the sawmill, there to find anchored to the smoke stack a raft, seated upon which, and playing an old fiddle, was what he at first took to be a mermaid, but as his eyes became more accustomed to the darkness he saw that it was an army ghost; while seated on the rear end of the raft, fishing with a bent pin fastened to a bit of waxed end, was—"Mine golly!" Whom do you suppose? But just at this moment the treacherous tub which carried Mr. P. upset, and so we are not able to give you any more of this eventful night's doings, but you will probably hear more about it in the future.

LIFE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Many lives, Histories, or Biographies of the late Jefferson Davis, purporting to be written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis, are being advertised throughout the country. The only genuine work of the kind written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis is that to be published by Belford Company, 1822 East 18th Street, New York, entitled "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States, A. Memoir, by His Wife." All other works claiming the authorship of Mrs. Jefferson Davis must necessarily be injurious to her, personally and pecuniarily. The book is sold by subscription, and territory is being rapidly assigned. The work promises to be one of the most popular ever published, and those desiring to canvass for it should applv at once to the publishers, who will furnish circulars and information.

A REMARKABLE WORK.

Sir John Lubbock's famous list of the World's Best Hundred Book's, which has attracted so much attention in England, and of which there has been over 50,000 copies sold in book form, has been recently republished in this country. It contains not only the above mentioned list, but also criticisms upon it and original articles on the Choice of Books by Carlyle, Ruskin, Gladstone, Farrar, Lowell, and other distinguished literateurs.

It also contains a revised price list covering all the works mentioned, and given the American editions and prices at which they can be obtained, instead of the English list which has been giving in all previous editions.

To all who wish to know what is the world's best literature and have no time to waste in useless reading, this work will be sent, postage paid, on receipt of 25 cents, by the Publisher DeWolfe, Fiske & Co., Box E 1340 Boston, Mass.

A Dressmaker's Experience.

DEAR SIR:—As Mr. Hinman, the druggist told you I am a great friend of your remedy. I have used it at intervals during the past 12 years. It carried me safely through the critical period of life without a single sick day and it did great things for me in many ways.

I always recomend it where I see a case that needs it. It always does ever claimed for it, and more than any one would readily believe who did not personally know the cases.

I now consider my self well, but I work hard at my business—dressmaking—and when I am tired and nervous a small dose of Zoa-Phora quiets and rests me. I always have it in the house.

Yours truly.

MICHIGAN CROP REPORT.

For May reports have been received from 822 correspondents in 629 townships. The wheat improved in condition but very little in April and the reports indicate that of the area seeded to wheat last fall 10 per cent in the southern counties, 13 per cent in the central and 1 per cent in the northern will be plowed up because winter-killed or otherwise destroyed.

The best wheat is in the Counties of Berrien, Cass, St. Joseph and Van Buren. In these the condition ranges from 92 in Berrien to 100 in St. Joseph.

The second best wheat is in Kent, Ottawa, Allegan, Kalamazoo and Branch, where the dondition ranges from 85 in Kalamazoo to 89 in Allegan. In the remaining seven counties of the two southern tiers, viz., Calhoun, Jackson, Washtenaw, Wayne, Hillsdale, Lenawee and Monroe, the range is from 66 in Monroe to 79 in Jackson, and the average condition for the seven counties is 74.

The poorest wheat is in the remaining counties of the third and fourth tiers, or in the twelve counties lying east of Kent and Allegan. In this group the condition ranges from 47 in Eaton to 73 in Ionia. In only five counties in this group is the condition better than 60, and the average for the entire group is 60, or 14 points below the average in the third group named.

Clover meadows and pastures, like wheat, were damaged by the dry weather of last fall and the open winter. It is estimated that 15 per cent of these will be plowed up. The average condition in the southern counties is 80, in the central 78, and in the northern 92.

The outlook is yet favorable for a fair crop of apples. The estimates indicate nearly nine-tenths of an average crop.

Judged by the sectional averages alone, the outlook for a crop of peaches is not discouraging, but it must not be overlooked that very many of the reports are for very small orchards, or for only scattering trees. It is noticeable that in a number of the western counties, where the orchards are large, the averages are low, as Van Buren 20, Allegan 28, Ottawa 27, and Kent 36.

THE PUBLIC WILL APPRECIATE IT.

The public are indebted to the Royal Baking Powder Company not more for having perfected and prepared a leavening agent that is pure and wholesome beyond a question, than for its exposures, so boldly made, of the numerous impure, adulterated and injurious articles that are sold under the name of baking powders, bread preparations, etc., throughout the country. In making these exposures the company has, of course, made itself the target for all sorts of counter attacks, but the animus of these attacks has been perfectly understood by the general public, and by their very virulence have served to more prominently call attention to the good work of the Royal Company.

Ordinary adulterations such as are found in coffee, spices, etc., although they are swindles in a commercial sense, are often tolerated because they do not particularly affect the health of the consumer. But when an article like baking powder, that is relied upon for the healthful preparation of almost every meal, is so made as to carry highly injurious, if not rankly poisonous, elements into our daily food, it is the duty of the public authorities to take cognizance of it.

In the fight for pure food made by the "Royal" Company, it is to be noticed that the most trustworthy scientific authorities are emphatically upon its side. In all the contests of this company with the alum and other impure baking powders the result has proved that every statement made by the Royal Baking Powder Company, both as to the purity of its own and the adulteration of other baking powders in the market, was fully authorized by the most competent chemical and medical authorities of the country.

In this contest two facts have been pretty conclusively settled in the minds of the public—the first that the Royal Company has found the means, and uses them, to make a chemically pure article of food; and the other, that the market is full of poisonous, alum and other adulterated baking powders which, no matter how strongly endorsed by "commercial" chemists, are to be studiously avoided.

A pure baking powder is one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. The recent controversy in the press has left it no longer a question with those who desire purity and wholesomeness of food what baking powder they shall use.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 15

The big tariff debate in the House is now fairly on and the wind-mill will run for about two weeks.

The recent floods in the lower Mississippi Valley have shown the necessity of having the National government adopt some permanent plan for improving the river levees.

Do the Democrats of this district expect to elect their nominee for Congress this fall? If so, they will place a farmer on the ticket. And where can they find a better man than Alex. Richards of Raisin?

If the workingmen would strike with their ballots against high taxation they would accomplish more than all the increase obtained by striking against or arbitrating with employers. Millions can be saved by such a strike.

The debate on the new tariff bill was opened by Major McKinley in the affirmative and Roger Q. Mills of Texas in opposition. They both made very able speeches. Mr. Mill's speech was considered the best one he ever made in Congress.

The Republican party organs that defend the McKinley bill are all shouting in chorus that it is a "republican measure." Yes, that is very true. It is a measure to pay republican party debts. But the chances of its becoming a law are exceedingly small.

When the venerable sage of Democracy, Allen G. Thurman, said that the tariff was a tax, people ridiculed him. But Mr. Thurman's neighbor, McKinley, has demonstrated the truth of the statement beyond all controversy. No public man will be foolhardy enough to dispute it hereafter.

The Ann Arbor Argus favors C. F. Cook, of Hillsdale, as the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district. Mr. Cook is an able man and would make a strong candidate. But we need a farmer candidate in this district this fall, and the best man to make the race is Alex. Richards of Raisin.

The Chicago Tribune, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and the St. Paul Pioneer-Press are the three ablest Republican papers of the Northwest, and they are all jumping on the McKinley tariff bill with both feet. It is'nt very strange that Mr. Clarkson thinks the Republican party is in need of more newspaper support.

At the City election held last week in St. Paul, Minn., ballot reform got in its work to good advantage. It was the first trial of the Australian system, and resulted in a Waterloo for the Republicans. In a vote of 25,000, the largest ever cast, Smith, Democrat, was chosen Mayor by a majority of 2,700.

The increase of duty on wool, the shutting down of New England's woolen mills, and the fact that those running are refusing orders beyond July 1, will result in higher-priced clothing, blankets and carpets for consumers. And this is how the people are protected. If they wear cotton and shoddy instead of wool, the wool grower will fail of his anticipated bounty.—Toledo Bee.

Chauncey Depew's 'diversified crop' remedy for the agricultural depression recalls the story told of a son of Erin who lived in the Back Bay district of Boston, and awoke one morning to find his cellar flooded and his chickens drowned. Under the advice of a friend, he went to the Mayor with his grievance. When he came back the friend met him and asked: "Well, what consolation did his honor give you?" Mighty little," said Pat; "all he said was 'Why the divil don't ye kape ducks?'" Chauncey is just about as consoling when he asks the wheat-growing and mortgage-ridden farmer "why the divil" he doesn't raise oats—or oranges.—Detroit Free Press.

It gives an idea of the extent of the Mississippi flood to read the statement that thirty counties in the States of Mississippi, Louisana and Arkansas were under water and that thousands of acres of cotton plantations will not see the sun light during this month of May. This is an area of territory equal to about one half of the lower peninsula of Michigan. When the water is drained off it will be too late to realize more than a quarter of a crop.

SECRETARY RUSK'S MESSAGE.

Secretary Rusk is clearly entitled to the reputation of being the humorist of the Harrison administration. He has lately issued a message to the farmers of America, in which he essays to discuss the present agricultural depression, its causes and its remedies. It is not a report to the President, as this is not a proper season of the year for presenting department reports. The law does not provide for messages from Cabinet officers, directed to Congress. But agriculture is depressed; that is a self evident fact. The farmers are making a noise about it; that is another self evident fact. So Uncle Jerry buttons up his official coat, takes the "bull by the horns," and soaring over the heads of President and Congress alike, fulminates a public manifesto to the suffering farmers. And what is the occasion for such an unprecedented performance? Why should the Secretary of Agriculture issue a public message any more than the Secretary of War or of the Navy? The reason can be easily seen upon reading the document, which is simply a labored effort to defend the McKinley tariff bill.

On the subjects of transportation, middlemen, gambling in grain etc., the Secretary draws some very sensible conclusions, and then launches out upon the all-absorbing topic of "protective taxation." This subject is "so vast," he says, that he cannot "dismiss it briefly." The Republican leaders for the past twenty years have been preaching the doctrine to the farmers that our present war tariff was a measure in their interest, for it built up a "home market" for their protection. But the Secretary knocks this argument in the head with one blow of his axe. He admits that tribute has been exacted from the farmers for the benefit of the manufacturing barons, and that they have patiently borne the burden which the war tariff has laid upon them. And what is his remedy for this evil? To reduce the tariff taxes? Not at all. But he would double the farmers' dose of tariff taxes. Although the war ended a quarter of a century ago, he tells them they should meekly submit to the same burdens, and even heavier ones, and consoles them with the assurance that they should seek relief "in the application of the principle of protection to the development of new industries on the farm." Just so. He must stop raising wheat and corn, and raise peppermint oil and other specialties. He has been paying tribute all these years for the benefit of other people. Now let Congress pass a law taxing other people for his benefit.

The Secretary says that the farmers are overrun with $260,000,000 annually of agricultural imports which should be produced at home. If the sugar tax is to protect the farmer, why are $93,000,000 worth of raw sugar imported in spite of it? And why is raw sugar put on the free list in the McKinley bill? If the duty on animal products protects the farmer, why was the 15 per cent duty on hides, originally put in the McKinley bill, finally stricken out of it? And of what benefit are most of the tariff taxes to the farmer? We tax wheat now, and if the tariff was raised to $1,00 a bushel we should still have to sell our surplus at the foreign market price. We tax corn in the name of "protection," and the Kansas farmer is burning his corn for fuel. We tax wool, and the only result is to put a tax on the farmer of nearly 100 per cent on all the woolens he buys. This policy is gradually bankrupting our own woolen mills, and driving the manufacture of woolen goods across the Atlantic, thus reducing the demand for domestic wool and hammering down its price. Raising the tariff tax on those farm products that must seek a foreign market for the surplus will have no more effect on prices than the Pope's bull against the comet.

On the other hand, under the provisions of the McKinley bill, tariff taxes would be raised all along the line upon everything which the farmer has to buy. His lumber, brick and paint with which to keep his buildings in repair and build new ones; his forks, rakes, mowers, threshers, wagons and other farming tools and implements; his table and tinware, bedsteads, blankets, sheets and pillows and other articles of household use; his own coat, his wife's dress and his childrens' frocks, are taxed from 25 to 125 per cent; and many of them are taxed even higher under the McKinley bill than by out present war tariff. Setting aside all sophistry, the great question for the farmer to decide is simply this—How will increased tariff taxes on his own export crops, which cannot benefit him one single dollar, compensate him for the extra taxes laid upon those manufactured goods which he has to buy? If any of the farmer readers of the HERALD can answer this question, our columns will be freely opened to them for that purpose.

IT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE.

The New York Sun, which claims to be a Democratic newspaper, but which devotes considerable space to the defense of our war tariff and to the abuse of Grover Cleveland, has this to say about the McKinley tariff bill. Such a confession from such a source means something. The Sun is probably right. The bill has been introduced simply for buncombe, without any expectation that it will ever become a law:

"The Treasury expert employed to calculate the effect of the McKinley tariff bill on the Government's revenue, estimates that if the bill should become a law it would probably increase instead of diminishing the annual surplus.

That is to say, instead of cutting off forty or fifty millions of dollars of unnecessary taxation, the McKinley schedules would add twelve millions net every year to the present income of the Government.

This opinion may be right or it may be wrong. No human being can foretell the exact result of a complicated revision of tariff rates. Lower duties may increase revenue in some cases and diminish it in others. Nothing short of actual experience can show the merit of any such tariff bill as a measure of tax reduction.

But the practical working of the McKinley bill has merely a speculative interest. However much in earnest the Major may be in his cogitations and computations, his efforts will end in empty figures. The bill is for buncombe. It will be put forward next week to make a show of redeeming a Convention pledge, not with a serious view to passing it and settling the tariff question. The Republican leaders in Congress are equipped with heads too long and broad to desire a settlement of the tariff question before the Presidential election of 1892.

Brother Harrison's Administration has put the grand old party in pretty bad shape for the next fight; and Republican partisanship can look forward to no greater good luck than the continued agitation of the old issue, and continued activity in William street near Wall.

That is why it makes no practical difference whether the bill proposed by Major McKinley would reduce the revenue by sixty millions or increase it by twelve."

ANOTHER TARIFF SPECULATION.

It is yet fresh in the memory of the public how the silk importers paid six or seven millions of excessive tariff duties on silk trimmings under protest, sold the goods to consumers, collected the high tariff taxes from their customers, and then recovered the millions back to go into the pockets of the importers. The consumers had paid the excessive tariff taxes once to the importers, but consumers have no relief, while the importers recover the tax back and pocket it.

Soon after the inauguration of the present administration new Custom Appraisers were appointed who understood that they were expected to put a largely increased duty upon worsteds by construction, in obedience to campaign contracts. Appraiser Leach, of this city, promptly revised the tariff law, in accordance with the new political necessities and largely increased the tariff duties upon worsteds. The importers paid and protested as they did in the silk case, but they, of course, sold their worsted goods to consumers with increased tariff taxes added. The question was appealed to the United States Courts, and the Circuit Court of New York has just decided that the tariff taxes on worsteds are as made by Congress and not as made by Appraiser Leach and his associates.

For one year the importers of worsted goods have paid the increased tariff taxes and received the same from consumers. Now the Court declares the added tax to be unlawful, and the worsted importers will recover the excessive taxes back from the government, pocket them as additional profits, while the consumers who really paid the unlawful taxes are without remedy. And all this comes from campaign promises for campaign contributions and the appointment of Custom Appraisers to execute campaign orders. So we go.—Philadelphia Times.

THE WAY TO PROMOTE COMMERCE.

Speaking of the possible results of the Pan-American Conference, the Detroit Evening News says:

"Any delegate not ignorant of trade will say to his brothers in the Pan-American conference, "Let us give our countrymen free permission to trade where and how they will, abolishing all the petty restrictions and impertinences that now discourage commerce. Then if the citizens of the United States want any of the products of South or Central America, or if the citizens of South or Central America want any of the products of the United States, there is no reason to believe that profitable bargains will not be made for all of the parties in the transactions."

The only objection to this plan is its simplicity. It doesn't require custom houses, or steamship subsidies, or ministers to foreign courts, or snooping committees to see just how much coloring matter there is in a cargo of sugar, or appraisers to talk owlish wise concerning things of which they are profoundly ignorant. None of this. It only requires that each person shall attend to his own business and leave every body else to do the same.

The way to promote trade is to remove the artificial barriers.

WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT.

1. Tax Reform; the destruction of taxes which fatten monopoly greed, which oppress our industries by needless cost of raw materials, and which increase the price of the common necessaries of life.

2. Ballot Reform; the sacredly guaranteed secrecy of the ballot; the assured independence of the labor voter, and the scrupulous honesty of all elections.

3. Civil Service Reform; the overthrow of the sale of offices to campaign contributors; the destruction of the power of bosses to command political service for rewards of public offices and the maintenance of honest administration in every department of State, national and local government.—Philadelphia Times.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismarck, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourists Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5,00 to $25,00 in traveling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accommodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and Northern Pacific.

It is now largely used as a preventive and cure for Malaria. There are many remarkable evidences of its merit in this section."

Rev. L. B. Pain, Macon, Ga., writes: "We have been using Swift's Specific at the orphans' home as a remedy for blood complaints and as a general health tonic, and have had remarkable results from its use on the children and employees of the institution. It is such an excellent tonic, and keeps the blood so pure, that the system is less liable to disease. It has cured some of our children of Scrofula."

"While suffering from a severe bilious attack in March, 1888, a friend in Peoria, Ill., recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla. I tried the remedy, and was permanently cured." J. A. SHEPARD, travelling agent for Devoe & Co., Fulton Street, N. Y.

THE REFORM CLUB.

AN ORGANIZATION WHICH IS MAKING WAR ON THE TARIFF.

A Home for Reform—A Campaign Without Candidates—Printing Presses Spreading the Tariff Reform Gospel—A Mammoth Reading Circle.

The Reform club of New York city, which has been frequently heard of in the agitation for Tariff reform, evidently regards itself as having come to stay. It has just bought a large building on the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, in New York, paying for it the sum of $240,000, and the improvements now being added will run up the total cost to about $300,000. In the immediate vicinity of this building are the Fifth avenue, the Hoffman, the Albemarle, the Victoria, the Brunswick, the Gilsey and other well known hotels, as well as the famous restaurant known everywhere as Delmonico's. The club, which was organized only two years ago, now occupies a rented house at No. 12 East Thirty-third street.

The new club house has a frontage of 80 feet on Fifth avenue and extends back 125 feet on Twenty-seventh street. Fronting on Twenty-seventh street, an addition, 25 by 100 feet, will be built, in which will be a hall for lectures and public addresses, having a seating capacity of 400. Above this will be the club's library, with a capacity of 10,000 volumes.

The old building now occupying the site is being completely overhauled and remodeled. The Fifth avenue entrance will be taken out and a spacious, airy front will be built on the avenue. A new entrance will be built on Twenty-seventh street. There is to be a restaurant for the accommodation of the members, with seats for about 100. In the upper stories there will be fifteen or twenty rooms to be rented to members of the club. The house will be lighted throughout by electricity. The work of remodeling will be finished by the 1st of July, and the addition is to be built by the 15th of September. The club will take possession as soon as the house is ready.

The immediate aim of the Reform club is effective agitation in favor of Tariff reform, by reduction or abrogation of certain so-called "protective" taxes. Accordingly, the principal committee of the club is the committee on Tariff reform. Besides other general committees, there are committees on civil service reform, municipal reform and ballot reform. The general committee on Tariff reform has under it several important sub-committees, the most important being those on New York state, on the distribution of literature and on the press.

These sub-committees are constantly active, and some of the best work of the club is done through them. The sub-committee on New York state has undertaken two very valuable forms of work. The first of these is a poll of all the votes in New York outside the large cities. There are 750,000 such voters in the state, and about 400,000 of these have been polled. Blank forms are sent out to trustworthy persons and are returned with the name and address of each voter, stating also his politics, his attitude on the tariff question, whether he is a Grand Army man or not, and what his occupation is. In this way the sub-committee gets into its hands definite and detailed information about each voter. It has just the facts which are necessary in order to distribute literature most effectively. With these lists in hand every shot from the sub-committee will tell, because it is intelligently aimed. The farmer will be bombarded with shot especially prepared for him; and the manufacturer will not be treated to a charge of agricultural ammunition.

The club has been preparing its ammunition for several years in the form of exhaustive studies of the effect of the tariff on particular industries. These have appeared every two weeks in Tariff Reform, the publication of the club, established especially for this purpose. But more will be said about Tariff Reform later on.

The other important work of the sub-committee in New York state is a speaking campaign in the interior counties of the state, which was begun Jan. 13 and is not yet completed. The plan has been to organize a campaign for a single county at the time. An organizer goes into the county in advance and arranges for evening meetings in the smaller towns. In all cases where it is possible local sympathizers are induced to hire a hall and bear the necessary expenses of the meetings.

A series of meetings having been thus arranged in a single county, the club sends out several effective speakers to meet the appointments, and every night for a week or ten days one or two meetings are held. A number of counties in central and western New York have in this way been successfully invaded, as many as sixteen meetings being held in some of them. The total number of meetings held has been nearly one hundred, and there are demands from other counties still to be met.

Some of the meetings were joint discussions, the American Protective Tariff league sending one of its speakers to enter the lists against those from the Reform club.

The interest awakened by these meetings has been very great. They have been discussed in the local and county papers, and prominent protectionist organs like The New York Tribune, The New York Press and The Rochester Democrat have undertaken to alarm the country voters and to prevent them from attending the meetings. The last named paper made an elaborate editorial attack on the movement, which has been fitly described as a "scream of warning;" and the local protectionist papers descended to the usual slanders, such as that the speakers were paid from 3,000 miles east of New York—a modest way of crying "British gold."

But all this free advertising served an excellent purpose, and in many cases the last meetings in a county were much better attended than the first ones. Some of the speakers noted the fact that the farmers became so interested that in several cases they followed the meetings from town to town—the same faces being seen at the last meetings as at the first. The meetings were largely attended by Republican farmers, and on several occasions Republicans presided or otherwise took part in the meetings.

These meetings were especially designed to reach the farmers, and, as the farmers were attentive and interested listeners at every meeting, it is hoped by the club that its labors will produce good results. These campaigns were organized at this time under the conviction that voters are more accessible now than in the heat of a political contest, when partisan interests prevent calm discussion and deliberate weighing of argument. The personality of candidates is lacking in a campaign like this, and so the one great question is held to the front from first to last.

Another important sub-committee of the committee on Tariff reform is that on the distribution of literature. This sub-committee is actively engaged in circulating the publications of the club, which are addresses delivered by distinguished Tariff reformers, and the semi-monthly periodical, Tariff Reform, already mentioned. There have been many calls for the more important numbers from all over the west, and recently a single order was filled for $30 worth for a western organization. Some of the numbers most in demand are "Dairy Farming and the Tariff," "Small Fruits and the Tariff," "Farming and the Tariff," "Wool and the Tariff," William Lloyd Garrison's address on "The Wool Question" and the "Comparison Item by Item." The last named is a sort of tariff dictionary, which takes up the tariff in detail, giving in parallel columns the equivalent ad valorem duties according to the present tariff, the Mills bill and the senate bill of two years ago.

There is a very wide demand for this Tariff Dictionary. A new edition of it is now in course of preparation, in which the McKinley bill will be substituted for the senate bill and the comparisons brought down to date. This work will prove an invaluable handbook for public speakers and for all persons who wish to study the tariff for themselves. The estimated ad valorem rates given in it are made up in New York by merchants of all shades of political opinion; and every effort is made to have the figures absolutely impartial and, therefore, trustworthy and authoritative.

All publications of the club can be had by addressing "The Tariff Reform Committee," John De Witt Warner, chairman, 52 William street, New York city.

The sub-committee on the press is also engaged in an important work. It is officered by practical newspaper men, and has in its employment an editor who gives his whole time to the preparation of Tariff reform matter for the press. A large part of this matter is distributed in plates by the American Press Association, and through this channel alone not less than half a million readers are reached. The demand for this matter through the Press Association has been much greater than was at first expected—greater than it could have been two years ago, in the heat of the presidential election. This fact has been most gratifying to the club, and afforded one of the most striking indications of the growing interest in tariff reform.

The editor for the sub-committee has recently opened up relations with the A. N. Kellogg Newspaper company, of Chicago, which makes "ready prints" for some 2,000 western papers, besides supplying matter in plates to others. This company is now regularly supplied with Tariff reform matter by the editor for the sub-committee. Negotiations are in progress with other western companies, and the sub-committee hopes to be able to claim in the near future that it has a circle of not less than 2,000,000 readers.

From the foregoing sketch it will be seen that the Reform club is in earnest. It proposes no backward step in the war for tariff reform. It is rapidly growing in influence and in numbers, its applications for membership averaging about fifty each month since the club house was bought.

The members of the club are fully convinced of the evil effects of the present tariff, of the still worse effects of the proposed McKinley tariff bill; and under that conviction the club proposes to extend the fight against this wrong with all the means at its disposal, into every quarter possible, and with all the earnestness of those who have in them, according to Chauncey M. Depew, "the fire of the crusaders."

The high protection party is not delighted with its prospects in Nebraska. Ex-Senator Van Wyck, who once represented his state at Washington, has advised the Farmers' alliance to put a ticket in the field against the Republican ticket. John M. Thurston, the most prominent Republican politician of that state, says that he stands almost alone in the state for the present high protective tariff. The Nebraska farmers do not believe that it has been settled once for all that the tariff is not a tax; and with the valuable lesson that Mr. McKinley is teaching them they will be prepared for the next election.

Representative William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, has on various occasions demonstrated his ability to hit off happily the absurdities of his political opponents. His latest success in this line is his description of the McKinley bill as "a bill to bamboozle the farmer, pay off the Republican debts of the last election and provide for the expenses of the next."

Mr. McKinley actually has the recklessness to put acorns on the free list. Is that not an unpatriotic discrimination against the American oak tree in favor of the pauper oaks of Europe? Why this needless insult to our American product?

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Our search for newspaper relics is panning out very handsomely. The last one, presented by J. L. Remington, is an old copy of the Tecumseh Chief, vol. one, number one, issued May 16th, 1859. It is a seven column folio sheet published by G. & C. Spafford. As it is the initial number the advertising is rather mesgre. The first page contains a short story and European news. The second page is filled with miscellaneous reading. The third page is mostly given to the By-Laws and Ordinances of the Village of Tecumseh. The fourth page contains the Constitution and By-Laws of the Northern Lenawee Agricultural Society with a full list of premiums. We append the official list of the Agricultural Society and a few extracts from the local page.

Subscribers who have paid us for the Herald, will be supplied with the Chief, unless we receive orders to the contrary. We have made arrangements with the Jackson printers, to issue our paper, job work, &c., until we receive the new office. We are unable to do local advertisers justice this week, and ask their indulgence for a "few days."

A woman called at the residence of John McKinney, in this village, on Friday last, and left a child about five or six weeks old while she went to meet a sister, who was to arrive on the 6 o'clock train. We understand the sister didn't arrive, and the woman concluded to ascertain her place of refuge and took the train for Jackson, since which time nothing has been heard from the woman or her sister.

Mr. Wm. Hayden, formerly of this city, has purchased the "Globe Mills," which has seven run of stone, and is one of the largest mills in the State. It was built during "wild-cat times," probably with Tecumseh wild-cat money, and $180,000 is said to have been expended in its construction. The building is six stories high; has a firm stone foundation, and is constructed in the most durable and finished style, regardless of cost. Mr. H. has thoroughly renovated the mill; adding all of the latest improvements for flouring, and can now manufacture three hundred barrels of flour per day. He is an experienced miller, an enterprising business man, and we congratulate the citizens of Tecumseh that the mills are now in so reliable hands.—Jackson Patriot.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Hough, who departed this life on the 25th of April last, was born on the 2d day of February, 1805, at Schuyler, Herkimer Co., N. Y. She passed her youth and early womanhood in the town of her nativity. On the 26th of January, 1830, she was united in marriage with Olmstead Hough, and in the month of July, 1831, the couple started for the far west to seek a home. Arriving at Tecumseh, they settled on a farm in the eastern part of this township, on the old Saline road, where they continued to reside for thirty-four years Here they battled with hardship, poverty and toil for many years, enduring all the privations incident to pioneer life in those early days and carving out of the wilderness a home of their own. During this period of a third of a century they reared a family of children, improved a beautiful farm, and became respected and influential residents. Mr. Hough was honored by his fellow citizens with many offices of public trust and for four years he filled the position of sheriff of Lenawee County. His faithful wife was the light and joy of the domestic circle, a true helpmeet to her husband, a model wife and mother.

In April, 1865, the family moved into the village, and in December of that year the husband was called to the higher life. Since then the widow has continued to live here, making her home with her daughter, Julia A. Three children blessed her married life, one of whom died in infancy. The survivors are Lucius L. of Saline, and Julia A. of Tecumseh. Flavius J. Hough, of Adrian, is a son of her husband's by a former wife.

For the past few years the deceased had been in feeble health and her friends saw with pain during the past winter that her days on earth were drawing to a close. On the 25th of April, after an illness of several weeks' duration, she went to join her husband on the other shore. The funeral services were held on the 28th and were conducted by Rev. F. Adkins, of this village. She had lived almost a generation beyond the allotted period of life, and has now left her earthly habitation for a better and brighter home in Heaven.

THE W. R. C. ANNIVERSARY.

Last Saturday evening, May 10th, was the first anniversary of the establishment of the Tecumseh W. R. C. and the officers concluded that it would be a very proper thing to hold an anniversary supper and reunion. As Saturday evening is an inconvenient one for the men to leave their business, the affair was fixed on Friday evening. It proved to be one of the stormiest evenings of the season. This fact undoubtedly interfered very much with the attendance, but nevertheless about one hundred and fifty supper tickets were sold and the purchasers were made happy by an excellent repast. The supper was served in the W. R. C. hall. After supper the audience passed into the G. A. R. hall, which was well filled, and the following interesting program was presented. Considering the inclemency of the weather the affair was very successful and all voted that a custom had been inaugurated which ought to be kept up in the future.

ALLEN'S VIEWS ON A RENOMINATION.

F. H. Hosford, the Washington correspondent of the Free Press, has interviewed the Michigan congressman as to their intentions this fall. As to Capt. Allen, the Free Press dispatch says:

Capt. Allen says he is not seeking a renomination, but that if the convention should happen to name him as its choice he would be ready to make a fourth race. He says that he thinks the democratic nominee will be Mayor Bean, of Adrian, although this will be a departure from precedent, as heretofore he has had to run against three soldiers. "Why, in 1888, I had to try conclusions with William Stearns, who was a queer combination, democrat, soldier, and teetotaler," said Allen, smiling widely at his joke. "While I got my largest vote against him, I think in many respects he was the strongest man ever opposed to me." Capt. Allen thinks that the district will be closer than two years ago, but refuses to see that the fact that there is now a democratic board of supervisors in every county of his district is any indication of peril. It is understood here that Gen. George Spalding, of Monroe will try conclusions with Allen in the convention, but St. John, of Hillsdale, who has been named as a possible candidate, has written Allen that he favors his renomination.

F. E. C. MEDICINE Co.—My wife has suffered from lame back ever since 1836 During this long period she has worn plasters upon her back incessantly, and tried many remedies, but found only temporary relief. Acting upon the advice of acquaintances, I purchased a bottle of F. E. C. Five bottles have restored her to better health than she has enjoyed in fifty-three years.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

Mr. O. P. Bills gave us a call Thursday morning.

Several of our Seniors expect to attend the Teachers' Association in Adrian, on Saturday next.

Prof. E. A. Wilson was absent from school Friday morning and afternoon. "When the cat is away the mice will play."

"Give me a penny for my friendship ring," has been the popular cry for last few days. Even our Professor has not escaped.

Last Friday was a gloomy day for the juniors. Rain, rain, rain, all day long, and only nine in the room in the afternoon.

Mr. Deb. McQueen, an Ann Arbor student, spent Sunday with Miss Mabel Jenkins, attending chapel exercises Monday morning.

We are glad to welcome back to our ranks Miss Anna Osborne, who has been detained at home for the last two weeks by the serious illness of her mother.

Last Friday the geometry class were congratulating themselves on their escape from the daily recitation, when to their intense disgust, they were informed that a written lesson would be required of them at the close of the session.

Methinks a faint perfume of orange blossoms is gently wafted through the air of our beautiful village. When a young gentleman visits his lady love five nights in one week, nd seven nights in the next, things begin to look serious. R. F. H.

WHO IS DR. BENNETT?

A graduate of the University of Michigan, a practitioner for years thereafter, and now lives at 48 Bagley Ave., Detroit, where he confines his attention to the treatment of chronic difficulties and has been making this a specialty for seven years. The success which he now gives is wonderful, to those who know nothing of how it is done. He has learned that there is but one power that drives the machinery of this body, and this power has been impaired through that one word—constipation—which is not the liver or stomach, much less the womb fever, that causes the constipation, and there is a result left from that fever. Books tell us nothing of that, but we who can see and prove these things by actual experiment should not rely on books, for this fever is not piles, Our books call everything down here under the name of piles—itching, bleeding, blind, external and true piles. These first four are not piles at all—only the fever that now is and used to be. Piles, are bursted blood vessels—nothing more. This does not create fever, nor does fever create bursted blood vessels. We may have piles inside, and also bleeding or itching, but when there it comes from the fever that is therein, for we find many of this kind and not a vestige of a pile to be found. All can be made well, no matter how bad or how long standing, or what complication, and no cutting or tying nor an hour laid up from work. We will tell you more of these things when you come to see us, and more, before we come next time here. We come every four weeks, as we have been coming for the past seven years. This means something and we shall continue to come for years. So come. Go and see him. Consultation free in German and English.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House, Wednesday, May 21st, 1890.

A card received from G. R. Boardsell states that we were wrong in our item about the fish dying at Devil's Lake. Mr. B. also sites improvements at Manitou, two new stores, the Eliott resturant, a new cottage under way, and four more to be erected soon by Bryan parties, and a lumber yard. In the meantime Mr. B. is hard at work making improvements at Lake View, of which he does not give particulars.—Hudson Post.

We had the pleasure of attending a tea party last evening at Dr. N. H. Kimball's in Adrian. Nearly one hundred guests had assembled at seven o'clock, and an evening's collation was served at once. After the tables were cleared the remainder of the evening was spent at cards and social amusements. The affair was gotten up to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Doctor's marriage and was highly enjoyed by the favored ones who were present.

We are pleased to announce to the readers of the HERALD that Walter Thomas Mills will speak here again on Thursday evening, June 5th, in a joint debate with Hon. Albert Griffin, chairman National Committee Anti-Saloon Republicans. Subject: "The respective claims of the Republican and Prohibition parties to the support of the enemies of the Saloon rule." As Mr. Mills has spoken here before, and has always had a crowded house, we shall look for a large turnout to hear this interesting discussion. Mr. Griffin is also spoken of as a very interesting and able speaker.

We spent a few hours between two trains at Britton the other day, and found that lively little burg in apple pie order. J. B. Coller has recovered from his illness and is again on deck. He and Labe Babcock make a strong team. The postoffice is running very smoothly now. Osgood Bros. are prospering, with their hands full of business. F. Brown and son will soon move into one of the new stores on the West side and add boots and shoes to their stock. We didn't have time to visit all the business houses in town. We made a short call at Joseph Exelby's. The strong healthy man of a few short months ago is rapidly nearing the end of his earthly journey. He is stricken with creeping paralysis and the sands of his life are slowly ebbing away. It is a sad household there now, but we were glad that we called, for it is always a comfort to a sick man to think that his friends remember him.

Last month we visited Washington through the pages of Demorest's Family Magazine, and enjoyed the very interesting views of the exterior of the White House and its surroundings. This month, in the June number of this popular Magazine (which has just arrived), we enter the Executive Mansion, are treated to a ramble through its corridors, its executive and private apartments. We thus participate in the special favor shown to Demorest's Magazine, as we are introduced to many features not usually seen by the general public.

Rising, the minister said: "My hearers, I shall have to ask your indulgence for a few minutes. I forgot my manuscript and have sent my little boy for it." A moment later Johnnie came in and in a half audible voice, exclaimed, "Ma couldn't find the writin', but here's the book you copied it from." CYCLONES!

Tear Through the City of Akron,

Doing Damage Which Cannot be Estimated,

And Leaving Wreck and Ruin in their Pathway.

Over 100 Buildings Utterly Demolished,

AND MANY MORE ARE SHATTERED INTO SHAPELESS MASSES.

The Fifth, Fourth and Second Wards Visited by the Dread Wind Spirit—Many Injured by Falling Debris—Broken Electric Light Wires Threatening Death on Every Hand.

AKRON, O., May 12.—At 5:30 Saturday evening, in the midst of a terrific cloud burst this city was struck by the worst tornado, beyond comparison, which has ever been known hereabouts, excepting, perhaps, the Sharon cyclone of just a month ago. The storm struck the southern part of the city and tore through the fifth, fourth and second wards, doing damage which can not be estimated at this writing, but fully one hundred buildings were completely demolished. Hundreds more are badly damaged and a stretch two miles long is razed of trees and buildings of all sorts. The full force of the tornado developed just west of Main street, following a northeasterly course through Wolf Creek valley. The house of Dominick Greader, and Cross and Washington streets, was unroofed, and Mrs. Greader slightly injured. The front of John Van Alts house was torn off and carried across the street, and John Heller's house, a few doors north, was almost demolished, as were Jos. Biggers and Louis Shaffler's houses. Julius Roepkes shop was turned around on its foundation and the Shaffler house was turned upside down. At this point tremendous excitement was caused by the broken electric light wires, which killed a horse and threatened to do serious damage to the bystanders. Passing along Brown, Kling and Wheeler streets, a dozen or more houses were more or less damaged, some being moved bodily from their foundations and others completely unroofed. Thomas Gilligan's house on Kling street was smashed in as if a tremendous weight had fallen upon it from above. Tony Mennett's house on Grant street was turned topsy-turvy and practically ruined. At Grant and Cross streets a portion of Louis Nauchbauer's house was blown to atoms. The wind struck Gebhart Herman's house. The family of nine persons had just sat down to supper. The tornado struck the house in all its fury and hurled the dining room like a flying top, landing it fifty feet away. All the occupants were more or less bruised. Mr. Herman was pinned down in the debris, and only the energy of despair when he smelled the odor of the fire near him enabled him to extricate himself. Recovering, he found his little girl burning by the overturned stove, and before the flames could be extinguished she was frightfully burned about the back and limbs. His house is ruined beyond hope of repair. Leaving the Herman house the hurricane then struck the Barkhardt brewery squarely, wrecking it utterly. The next building struck was the residence of Charles Sanford, which was removed from its foundation and badly wrecked. Next to Sanford's place was John Miller's which was damaged to the extent of several hundred dollars. The new house of A. C. Miller was completely obliterated. Mrs. Ellen Coupse's residence was also torn to pieces. The house of Charles Augne, D. E. Humphrey, H. H. Hemminger, John Klinger, Geo. Roussart, K. D. Chrisman, Bert Carran, C. A. Post and others were wrecked and torn but not demolished. At the corner of Brown and Exchange streets O. C. Baker's grocery was to pieces. His wife and daughters were in the building at the time, but they fled to the cellar and were saved. Mr. Baker is missing, and it is feared that he is dead in the ruins. E. S. Harrington's house was crushed in upon his four children, but all escaped. Thomas Thompson's family heard the roar of the storm and managed to reach the cellar before their house was lifted over their heads and landed upsidedown many feet away. Mrs. Nash's house was utterly demolised. Philip Weber and John Spicer's house was careened and smashed. The Gibbs pottery, a brick block 150 by 60 feet was levelled to the earth with its kiln and belongings. Frank Knapp's big stable and large barn was brought down and injured several horses. The barn of Mr. Hunsicker was carried away with his two cows. James Whittell's barn and orchard were demolished. The family of Melvin Irish had just seated themselves at supper, when Mrs. Irish, warned by some intuition cried: "Run to the cellar; a cyclone is coming." She and her two children managed to reach the cellar before the crash, but Mr. Irish was caught by a heavy timber and his spine was seriously injured. The house was completely broken to pieces. Mr. Irish was probably fatally injured. Passing on the storm demolished almost as utterly the houses of Alvin Alexander and Mrs. Kate O'Connell, in passing unroofed W. E. Fricks and Mrs. Jewell's residences. It expended its force on Robert Watts' house and Mrs. Elizabeth Baker's home, and passed into the open beyond. The extent of the tornado is at this time unexplored, and the damage can not be stated. All descriptions of the storm show that it was rotary in its motion, and this is shown by the skewing of the buildings it struck and the twisting of the big trees in its path. The track was between fifty and one hundred and fifty feet wide.

THEIR CYCLONE CELLARS

Saves Many Missouri People From Death.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., May 12.—A special to the Tribune from Burlington, Iowa, says: Further information from the cyclone at Blythesdale, Mo., confirms the first report in the extensiveness of the storm. Mrs. Jane Moore and Mrs. Henry Young were fatally injured and a dozen or more others received more or less serious injuries. At least a dozen houses were wrecked, and as many barns and outbuildings, while fruit trees and fences were leveled to the ground. Most of the people in the track of the storm saw it coming and fled to their cyclone cellars in time to save themselves. The steamer Sidney had a rough time at Keithsburg, Ill., on the Mississippi river last night from this storm. The waves were so high that they threatened to overwhelm her, but by building a barricade of sacks of grain about her guards she was saved.

KANSAS CYCLONE.

Two Persons Killed and Property Badly Damaged.

FREDONIA, KAS., May 12.—Two people are reported to have been killed and others injured in a cyclone which prevailed in this county Saturday afternoon. The wires are prostrated, and it is hard to get news. It is reported, however, that the killed are Mrs. Frank Gledden, Harvey Wilts, and injured Mr. Gledden and child.

Terrible Loss of Life and Property in Cedar Valley, Kansas.

CHANUTE, KAS., May 12.—A cyclone struck Cedar Valley, Wilson county, at 4 p. m. Friday. Joseph Whitsay's house was demolished, his youngest son killed and two other children hurt. The dwelling of Frank Glidden was destroyed, his wife killed and two children injured. The dwellings of Peter Pierson, Alec Russell and the widow Star were leveled to the ground, and Pierson and wife so badly injured that they are not expected to survive. A scantling was driven completely through the body of Mr. Star. He is still alive but will die. The wife and babe of Rev. J. R. Chambers were blown in different directions out of a buggy. A second blast picked the mother up and deposited her along side of the child.

Terrible Storm in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Reports are received that a terrific hail storm visited Grand Isle and vicinity a few days ago, doing damage roughly estimated at $30,000. The hail-stones cut up the cabbages, tomatoes, stripping the fruit tress and breaking every pane of glass on the island.

FRANKFORT, IND., May 12.—During the at night lightning struck the electric plant here, completely ruining the dynamo of the street service. The damage done is about $2,000, besides leaving the city without light.

BIG FAILURE.

The Iron Car Company of Huntington, Pennsylvania.

HUNTINGDON, PA., May 12.—The Iron Car company, doing business principally in this city and Carlisle, Pa., and composed of New York capitalists, has made an assignment through its president, G. W. Dithridge, for the benefit of its creditors. The assignee is Thomas C. Ritch, of Stanford, Conn. The assignment is due to the inability of the company to meet its matured paper. President Dithridge, of the Iron Car company, is also president of the Huntingdon Manufacturing company. The two companies were closely allied in business. The announcement of the failure of the New York contingent precipitated a deluge of claims against the Huntingdon Manufacturing company. The majority of the claims were foreign attachments. The sheriff seized the property of the company and the works are now closed. The amount of claims recorded today is incomplete, but reaches over $150,000. This is exclusive of a $100,000 mortgage and $15,000 in labor claims today. The assets of the company amount to $250,000, not half this amount could be realized at a forced sale. 450 men are thrown out of employment.

THE M'CALLA COURT MARTIAL.

The Decision is in the Hands of Judge Advocate Ramey.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The record of the McCalla court martial has been received at the Navy department, and Judge Advocate General Ramey is busy making a full synopsis of the case for the consideration of the secretary of the navy, who will have final jurisdiction in the matter, unless the sentence is dismissal, in which event he President alone can act. The result of the trial will not be known officially until the secretary is prepared to promulgate the action of the department. The impression prevails among naval officers, however, that the court found Commander McCalla guilty of several of the charges and sentenced him to suspension from duty and to be reprimanded by the department. It will be several days before the case will be ready for the secretary.

BLEW HIS BRAINS OUT.

Suicide of a Cleveland Barber on Account of Family Trouble.

CLEVELAND, O., May 12.—Richard Bitterlich, a boarber employed in Kellar's shop at 201 Broadway, committed suicide Saturday morning while the shop was full of customers and his fellow-workmen were busy at their chairs. He had quarrelled with his wife while intoxicated a few days ago, and about 10 o'clock in the morning she called at the shop, where a reconciliation between them was effected. Shortly after the wife's departure Bitterlich placed a revolver to his temple and fired. Nearly half of his head was torn away. He left his wife and two small children in destitute circumstances.

Pennsylvania Primaries.

FRANKLIN, PA., May 12.—A terrible rain storm raged throughout Venango county all Saturday, the wires are down and election returns come in slow. So far indications point to the election of Mattern and Cooper, Delameter's delegates.

ERIE, PA., May 12.—In the Erie County Republican primaries, Delamater's delegate, E. B. Carter, secured every district in Erie but one. In the county Delamater's delegates were also elected.

CORPSE IN A BOX.

A Ghastly Find in the Depot at St. Louis, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, May 12—At the Union Station Saturday morning, in a pine box two feet long was found the horribly mutilated body of a woman. Almost all the flesh had been cut from the bones and the head and face was mutilated beyond recognition. The body was packed in charcoal and from all appearances life could not have been extinct for more than thirty-six hours. The box was checked over the Wabash from St. Louis last night and arrived here early in the morning. The coroner will examine the remains.

The Methodist Conference.

ST. LOUIS, May 12.—Bishop Hargrave presided at the fourth day's session of the general conference of the Methodist church. Bishop Galloway, who had been fraternal delegate to the conference of the M. E. church in Canada, made a report of his visit to the conference and was cordially received. The committee on itinerancy reported adversely on a memorial to change the discipline that traveling preachers might be ordained after two years' probation, instead of three as at present. The report was adopted. A delegate from Mississippi introduced a memorial for the appointment of a deaconness in connection with the work of the board of missions. Referred. The woman's auxilliary of the missions issued a strong appeal to the women of the church to take speedy measures to provide means for the building or otherwise furnishing residences for preachers and their families.

KEMMLER.

FIRST LEGAL SKIRMISH UNDER THE HABEAS CORPUS WRIT

By Which He Has Secured a New Lease on Life—A Few Formalities Are Gone Through With and the Case is Laid Aside Until June.

AUBURN, N. Y., May 12.—The habeas corpus writ in the case of the murderer William Kemmler, sentenced to death by electricity, issued by Judge Corlett on the application of Charles S. Hatch, came up before Judge Underwood here Saturday. By stipulation of the counsel, Kemmler was not present. W. Bourke Cochran, of New York, and Charles S. Hatch, of Buffalo, appeared for Kemmler, and Attorney General Tabor represented agent and Warden Durston, to whom the writ is issued. The proceedings were very brief. The writ and answer of the attorney general were filed, and Mr. Cochran stated that the point raised was: Whether the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Erie county had jurisdiction to pronounce the sentence imposed. The particular point made is that legislature had not the constitutional power to take from the sheriff, who is a constitutional officer, his power to inflict capital punishment, that having been one of his powers from time imemmorial, and to confer those powers upon another not a constitutional officer. He said the contention was that such a course was unconstitutional. The object of the proceedings was not to delay the execution, but to submit in good faith the question to the courts. He was willing and hoped that the case could be disposed of speedily. By stipulation no argument was to be made on either side and it was agreed that Judge Underwood should enter judgment pro forma, denying the writ and remanding the prisoner to the custody of the warden, which was done. Mr. Cochran also entered a demurrer to the answer of Warden Durston and the demurrer was overruled. Mr. Cochran stated that the same course would be taken before the general term and it was expected that the case could be brought before the court of appeals for argument in June.

KEMMLER.

Heading Them Off.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 12.—A dispatch from Chambersburg, Pa., states that a corps of engineers are surveying a line of railway from a point on the Pennsylvania road to a point on the Cumberland Valley road. It is thought this scheme will head off the proposed alliance of the Reading with the Baltimore and Ohio, and prevent the new trunk line scheme of those companies.

Tuthill, James McMahn, and others.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessarry to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. THE CANONS OF TAXATION.

Ear Marks Whereby to Distinguish Good From Bad Taxes.

All taxes must evidently come from the produce of land and labor, since there is no other source of wealth than the union of human exertion with the material and forces of nature. But the manner in which equal amounts of taxation may be imposed may very differently affect the production of wealth. Taxation which lessens the reward of the producer necessarily lessens the incentive to production; taxation which is conditioned upon the act of production, or the use of any of the three factors of production, necessarily discourages production. Thus, taxation which diminishes the earnings of the laborer or the returns of the capitalist tends to render the one less industrious and intelligent, the other less disposed to save and invest. Taxation which falls upon the processes of production interposes an artificial obstacle to the creation of wealth. Taxation which falls upon labor as it is exerted, wealth as it is used as capital, land as it is cultivated, will manifestly tend to discourage production much more powerfully than taxation to the same amount levied upon laborers, whether they work or play, upon wealth whether used productively or unproductively, or upon land whether cultivated or left waste.

The mode of taxation is, in fact, quite as important as the amount. As a small burden badly placed may distress a horse that could carry with ease a much larger one properly adjusted, so a people may be impoverished and their power of producing wealth destroyed by taxation, which, if levied in another way, could be borne with ease. A tax on date trees, imposed by Mohammed Ali, caused the Egyptian fellahs to cut down their trees; but a tax of twice the amount imposed on the land produced no such result. The tax of 10 per cent. on all sales, imposed by the Duke of Alva in the Netherlands, would, had it been maintained, have all but stopped exchange while yielding but little revenue.

But we need not go abroad for illustrations. The production of wealth in the United States is largely lessened by taxation, which bears upon its processes. Ship building, in which we excelled, has been all but destroyed, so far as the foreign trade is concerned, and many branches of production and exchange seriously crippled, by taxes which divert industry from more to less productive forms.

This checking of production is in greater or less degree characteristic of most of the taxes by which the revenues of modern government are raised. All taxes upon manufactures, all taxes upon commerce, all taxes upon capital, all taxes upon improvements are of this kind. Their tendency is the same as that of Mohammed Ali's tax on date trees, though their effect may not be so clearly seen.

All such taxes have a tendency to reduce the production of wealth, and should, therefore, never be resorted to when it is possible to raise money by taxes which do not check production. This becomes possible as society develops and wealth accumulates. Taxes which fall upon ostentation would simply turn into the public treasury what otherwise would be wasted in vain show for the sake of show; and taxes upon wills and devises of the rich would probably have little effect in checking the desire for accumulation which, after it has fairly got hold of a man, becomes a blind passion. But the great class of taxes from which revenue may be derived without interference with production are taxes upon monopolies—for the profit of monopoly is in itself a tax levied upon production, and to tax it is simply to divert into the public coffers what production must in any event pay.

But all other monopolies are trivial in extent as compared with the monopoly of land. And the value of land expressing a monopoly, pure and simple, is in every respect fitted for taxation.

Taxes levied upon the value of land cannot check production in the slightest degree until they exceed rent, or the value of land taken annually, for, unlike taxes upon commodities, or exchange, or capital, or any of the tools or processes of production, they do not bear upon production. The value of land does not express the reward of production, as does the value of crops, of cattle, of buildings, or any of the things which are styled personal property and improvements. It expresses the exchange value of monopoly. It is not in any case the creation of the individual who owns the land; it is created by the growth of the community. Hence the community can take it all without in any way lessening the incentive to improvement or in the slightest degree lessening the production of wealth. Taxes may be imposed upon the value of land until all rent is taken by the State, without reducing the wages of labor or the reward of capital one iota; without increasing the price of a single commodity, or making production in any way more difficult.

But more than this. Taxes on the value of land not only do not check production as do most other taxes, but they tend to increase production, by destroying speculative rent. How speculative rent checks production may be seen not only in the valuable land withheld from use, but in the paroxysms of industrial depression which, originating in the speculative advance in land values, propagate themselves over the whole civilized world, everywhere paralyzing industry and causing more waste and probably more suffering than would a general war. Taxation which would take rent for public uses would prevent all this; while if land were taxed to anything near its rental value, no one could afford to hold land that he was not using, and, consequently, land not in use would be thrown open to those who would use it. Settlement would be closer, and, consequently, labor and capital would be enabled to produce much more with the same exertion. The dog in the manger who, in this country especially, so wastes productive power, would be choked off.

There is yet an even more important way by which, through its effect upon distribution, the taking of rent to public uses by taxation would stimulate the production of wealth. But reference to that may be reserved. It is sufficiently evident that with regard to production, the tax upon the value of the land is the best tax that can be imposed. Tax manufactures, and the effect is to check manufacturing; tax improvements, and the effect is to lessen improvement; tax commerce, and the effect is to prevent exchange; tax capital, and the effect is to drive it away. But the whole value of land may be taken in taxation, and the only effect will be to stimulate industry, to open new opportunities to capital, and to increase the production of wealth.

SINGLE TAX IN TENNESSEE.

The Trades Council Comes Close to the Single Tax—Star Center Alliance Adopts It.

R. G. Brown, Memphis—The trades council, an organization composed of representatives of all the trades unions in Memphis, has come as near the single tax as it could without hitting it. The council held a meeting in the criminal court room on the evening of Washington's birthday for the purpose of considering the eight-hour movement. Mr. Bolton Smith and myself had been invited to present the relations between the single tax and the eight-hour movement. We met with some opposition from some advocates of eight hours pure and simple, but found, to our surprise, an able and earnest single tax advocate in the person of Mr. S. W. Harmon, who represented the Cigarmakers' Union in the council. Mr. Harmon gave some facts in his experience in his trade which showed that not even under the eight hours could the workingmen secure the relief they so much desired. At the conclusion of his speech he offered the subjoined resolutions and urged the meeting to adopt them as the expression of the sentiments of the trades council, stating that they had been unanimously adopted by his own union at a recent meeting. The following are the resolutions:

Whereas, As workingmen and mechanics, we feel that the distribution of the products of labor is such that it gives to us an inadequate and unjust proportion of what we produce; and

Whereas, We see that capital engaged in active production, and that the employers themselves, who risk their money, are frequently losers, we are led to look for other causes for the inadequate and unjust distribution of the products of our labor, of which we complain; and

Whereas, We believe we find such causes in an unjust system of taxation, in the locking up of great sums in land held for purposes of speculation which interferes with production of wealth; and

Whereas, The value of property belongs rightfully only to those who create it; and

Whereas, It is injurious to the interest of the whole people that land should be held for speculation; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That all unoccupied land shall be taxed at the price for which it is held for sale; that it shall be the duty of owners of such lands to fix their selling price to the authorized officers, and that the first comer who offers the amount so fixed shall be entitled to such property.

Resolved, That as all increased value given to unimproved land comes by virtue of settlement, and improvement in the neighborhood by the community at large, all such increased volue in justice belongs to the community, and we demand of our representatives in the legislature that they pass laws which will secure this value to the community.

Resolved, That we recognize in its entirety the principle that all men have an equal natural right to the benefits of all natural opportunities; be it further

Resolved, That for the surer and quieter obtaining the above amendatory legislation it is the sense of this council that a more perfect connection should be established with similar organizations in this State with the object of concentrating our efforts and energies to attain these ends.

About ninety per cent of the Knights of Labor here are free traders and single taxers, a result due mainly to the efforts of Mr. Bolton Smith, who is a member of the local assembly.

We were officially notified last Thursday that our doctrine had been indorsed by the Star Center Alliance of Carroll county, Miss., in these words:

Resolved, That this lodge is in favor of the single tax, that we may more fully understand the work of the single tax association, the secretary is instructed to write to Mr. Bolton Smith and ask that he furnish us with tracts.

The constant demand for tracts and sample copies of the Standard which we receive every day is rapidly exhausting our stock. We have heard from a number of the legislators of Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas indorsing the single tax, and have letters from ten or twelve leading men in the Farmers' and Laborers' Union to the same effect. The Memphis Single Tax Association is making itself felt in this section, and considering its numbers and means is doing a tremendous work.—New York Standard.

STRAWS THAT SHOW THE WIND.

e action of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, at the meeting just closed at Atlanta, regarding the land question, is an important one, more especially at this time since the strength of the order now lies in the country and small towns. . . . A few years ago the Knights would not have dared to put such a plank in their platform, and its adoption now proves that the workingman has begun to study political economy and the science of government.—Detroit Sunday Sun.

The single tax men appear to be quite active in this city. Where a multiplicity of taxes is the rule the single tax notion ought to be popular.—Troy Morning Telegraph.

TRANSFIGURATION.

LESSON VII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 18.

Text of the Lesson, Luke ix, 28-36—Commit Verses 33-35—Golden Text, Luke ix, 35—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.)

28. "And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings." These sayings evidently refer to what is recorded in this chapter from verses 18 to 27, including the testimony of Peter concerning Christ, Christ's own testimony concerning His approaching sufferings and death and resurrection, and that those who follow Him must be content to suffer with Him; but that there is a future glory awaiting all such which will more than recompense for all the suffering, and that some of them would not die till they had seen the glory of that kingdom. He also testified that if any preferred their life in this world they would lose the world to come, but if willing to renounce this world for His sake they would receive and forever enjoy the glory of the kingdom of God.

"He took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray." These are the three whom He took with Him to see Jairus' daughter raised to life, and the same three He took nearest to Him in the garden of Gethsemane. He saw fit to elect these to be with Him on these occasions, He elected twelve out of all His followers whom He might qualify for special service, He has an elect nation through whom He yet purposes to make Himself known to the world, He is now gathering an elect church out of all nations which shall reign with Him as priest-kings when through His elect Israel He will subdue the world unto Himself. Election, when understood, is glorious.

29. "And as He prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistering." Matthew and Mark say that He was transfigured; Matthew says that His face did shine as the sun; Mark says that His raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow, as no fuller on earth can white them; Matthew says his raiment was white as the light. Here was for a brief season the outshining of that glory which was hidden in that mortal body during His humiliation, reminding us of the garden of Eden when man made in the image of God was clothed with light as with a garment (Ps. civ, 1, 2; Gen. i, 27); and pointing us forward to the resurrection and the time of the Kingdom, when we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is; and the righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom.

30. "And, behold, there talked with Him two men, which were Moses and Elias." Moses, the servant of the Lord, died on Mount Nebo 1,480 years before this, and the Lord buried him in a valley in the land of Moab (Deut. xxxiv). It was about 900 years since Elijah was translated without dying (II Ki. ii); and yet here are both alive and well, and if Jude ix refers to the resurrection of Moses' body, then both stood here in their immortal bodies. Blessed be God for the life eternal and for the assurance that if we are in Christ we shall be alive and well 1,000 years hence, 2,000 years hence, yes, to all eternity, in increasing fellowship with Him. This is a foreshadowing of the coming of the Son of Man in His Kingdom, and tells us that in that day Christ, who once lived on earth in humiliation, shall come in His glory and that He shall be accompanied by all His risen saints and those who shall have been translated without dying, both represented here by Moses and Elijah. That the dead shall rise and the living be instantly changed at His coming, see I Thess. iv, 16-18; I Cor. xv, 50-52. We would like to know how Moses and Elijah had spent all these hundreds of years since they left the earth; where have they been and what have they been doing? But we must wait.

31. "Who appeared in glory, and spake of His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem." This verse and the next are peculiar to Luke, Matthew and Mark, simply saying that Moses and Elijah talked with Jesus, and omitting all reference to the disciples being heavy with sleep.

"And when they were awake, they saw His glory, and the two men that stood with Him." The R. V. says, "When they were fully awake," and in the margin "Having remained awake." He was gracious unto them and suffered them not to lose all. They saw His glory, and they saw Moses and Elijah. Peter refers to it as "The power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and says "We were eye witnesses of His Majesty" (II Pet. i, 16). At the same time Peter tells us that we have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto we do well to take heed.

33. "And it came to pass, as they departed from Him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here; and let us make three tabernacles; * * * not knowing what He said." Had he been wide awake and heard the conversation between Jesus, Moses and Elijah he would probably have talked more wisely and have known what he was talking about.

34. "While He thus spake, there came a cloud: and overshadowed them, and they feared as they entered into the cloud." All through the wilderness "the Lord went before them in a pillar of cloud." When the Tabernacle was erected "a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the Tabernacle;" and when the Temple was dedicated the house was filled with a cloud and with the glory of the Lord (Ex. xiii, 21; xl, 34; II Chr. v, 13, 14). In the vision of Isaiah (vi, 4) the house was filled with smoke, and Ezekiel (i, 4) saw a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness about it. At His ascension a cloud received Him, and when He comes again it will be in the clouds of Heaven (Acts i, 9; Matt. xxvi, 64). So also when the risen and translated saints meet Him in the air, it shall be in the clouds (I Th. iv, 17). As to their fear, so earthly are we and so little awake to Heavenly realities, that anything unearthly or even unusual is apt to fill us with awe.

35. "And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is My beloved Son: hear Him." Matthew adds, "In whom I am well pleased." The R. V. says, "This is my Son, my chosen; hear ye Him." At His baptism the voice from Heaven said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. iii, 17; Mark i, 11; Luke iii, 22). On a third occasion when Jesus prayed, "Father, glorify Thy name," the voice from Heaven said, "I have both glorified it and will glorify it again" (John xii, 28). So that we have three distinct testimonies from the Father concerning His Son. We have also the Son's own testimony to this effect, "He that sent me is with me; the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please Him" (John viii, 29). When we accept Jesus and delight ourselves in Him, the Father is well pleased with us for His dear Son's sake. We are accepted in the Beloved and in Him have redemption (Eph. i, 6, 7).

36. "And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone." Matthew says that when the disciples heard the voice they fell on their face and were sore afraid; but Jesus came and touched them and said, "Arise and be not afraid," and when they lifted up their eyes they saw no man save Jesus only. Not even Moses or Elijah may be put on a level with Jesus. There is no salvation in either.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Bright's Disease Cured!

About two years ago our daughter had congestion of the kidneys, which developed into Bright's Disease. Her body was so swollen to an enormous size—measuring 43 inches around the waist and 18 inches below the knee. After physicians had given up her case I determined to have her try Dr Kennedy's of Rondout, N. Y. Gradually the swelling was reduced from 45 to 29 inches. She began to gain strength and was able to walk without fatigue. We do not know how to express our gratitude for what it has done for our child. We are confident the Favorite remedy will do all that is claimed for it—surely God has blessed it in this case, and we earnestly recommend it to all suffering from kidney disorders.—S. D. Vanduskirk, Demarest, N. J.

Mrs. George Gardner, of North Morenci, took two ounces of laudanum Wednesday. The excessive quantity taken produced vomiting, and that result, with medical assistance by Dr. Butler, saved her life. Ever since train No. 5 has been run over this branch of the Lake Shore our citizens have been trying to have it stop at Hudson, and two petitions have been sent in asking for this stop. As a result the officials have decided to make the new time card. A dispatch from President Newell gives the date as May 11th, but a private letter to J. C. Boles from the Superintendent's office at Cleveland states that passenger train No. 5, known as the "flyer," will stop at Hudson on and after May 18th. The new train will be a benefit to this place, as it will be very convenient for traveling men and others who are bound westward, and want to stop over for a few hours.—Hudson Post.

A TESTIMONIAL.

TECUMSEH, May 16, 1890.

To the Editor of the Herald:—We, the undersigned, members of the building committee of the M. E. Parsonage of Tecumseh, desire in this public manner to express our high appreciation of the work of putting lighting conductors upon our new parsonage by Mr. John F. Hicks. The conductors have been erected in the most satisfactory manner and in accordance with the most scientific rules, as laid down by all the scientific men of the day, both in our own country and in Europe. And why should they not be erected in the most scientific manner? Mr. Hicks has made this his life's work. For over thirty years he has been engaged in the erection of lightning conductors in our midst, and we have never known or heard of any building receiving any damage that was provided with his improved galvanized conductors. We are well pleased with the work and do not hesitate to recommend Mr. Hicks to every one wishing lightning conductors placed on their buildings as perfectly reliable and trustworthy in every respect.

Facts Worth Knowing

In all diseases of nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes becaus they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

Quinsy troubled me for twenty years. Since I started using Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil have not had an attack. The Oil, cures sore throat at once. Mrs. Letta Conrad, Standish, Mich., Oct. 24, '83.

NEGLECT a constipated condition of the bowels, or serious results surely follow, such as piles, impure blood and many chronic complaints. Burdock Blood Bitters is the remedy.

LIFE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Many lives, Histories, or Biographies of the late Jefferson Davis, purporting to be written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis, are being advertised throughout the country. The only genuine work of the kind written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis is that to be published by Belford Company, 18 22 East 18th Street, New York, entitled "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States, A. Memoir, by His Wife." All other works claiming the authorship of Mrs. Jefferson Davis must necessarily be injurious to her personally and pecuniarily. The book is sold by subscription, and territory is being rapidly assigned. The work promises to be one of the most popular ever published, and those desiring to canvass for it should apply at once to the publishers, who will furnish circulars and information.

DECORATION DAY.

The Procession will form on Chicago street, at 2 o'clock P. M. sharp, and march to the cemetery where the following program will be observed:

Dirge by the Band. During which Beers Post will decorate the graves of the dead Comrades.
Song by the Male Quartette.
Prayer by Rev. Lemon Barnes.
Music by the Band.
Oration by Rev. J. S. Joslin.
Song by Quartette.
G. A. R. Memorial Service.
Benediction.

It is hoped that the citizens of the village will close their places of business from 2 to 4 o'clock P. M., and that all patriotic citizens, both old and young, will join in the observance of the day, that we may do honor to those who gave their lives in the defence of our country. All old soldiers are invited to join in the procession. The official orders, promulgated by Beers Post, appear elsewhere.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismarck, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourists Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this yast territory without incurring an expense of from $5,00 to $25,00 in traveling on local tickets from point to point.

Insure for yourself comfort and safety by having the best accommodations afforded, thereby avoiding change of cars, re-checking of baggage, transfers and lay overs en-route. Money can be saved by purchasing tickets via St. Paul or Minneapolis and Northern Pacific.

DEAR SIR:—As Mr. Hinman, the druggist told you I am a great friend of your remedy. I have used it at intervals during the past 12 years. It carried me safely through the critical period of life without a single sick day and it did great things for me in many ways.

I always recomend it where I see a case that needs it. It always does ever claimed for it, and more than any one would readily believe who did not personally know the cases.

I now consider my self well, but I work hard at my business—dressmaking—and when I am tired and nervous a small dose of Zoa-Phora equiets and rests me. I always have it in the house.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 22

This year is making a record of calamities that bids fair before its closeto rival that of 1889.

Mr. Butterworth made a tip top tariff reform speech, but how will Mr. Butterworth vote? That is the leading question now.

The question, "Why was Paul favored and Peter turned down?" cannot be propounded to Major McKinley too often, and the people are in no mood to accept an evasive answer.

Only four ex-speakers have been elected to the United States senate—Henry Clay, J. G. Blaine, Robert C. Winthrop and John Bell. Ex-speaker Carlisle is now the fifth one.

The Chicago Tribune is putting in some sturdy blows now for tariff reform. If its zeal was equally effusive just before election time, people would have more confidence in its sincerity.

In a recent interview, Assistant-Postmaster General Clarkson expressed himself thus: "The government of the United States is a political, not a business machine." Mr. Clarkson is consistent, at least. He has used his official position unsparingly to enforce that theory.

John F. Andrew, the son of the old war governor of Massachusetts, honors the family name. He now represents the third district of that state in Congress. His excoriation of the McKinley bill is said to have been one of the best tariff speeches ever delivered in the House.

The Buffalo Courier expresses the situation in these few words: "McKinley prices" is a phrase that will stick to the Republican party like a burr. A McKinley price is just about twice a fair price. When McKinley gets his bill made a law almost everything one has to buy will cost "McKinley prices."

Even the sugar trust, so savagely denounced by the Republican press last year, is protected in the McKinley bill by a duty higher than the whole cost of refining. Mr. David A. Wells, in his book on 'Recent Economic Changes,' says that sugar can be refined in the best American establishments at a cost of one-sixteenth of a cent per pound. The McKinley bill allows the trust four-tenths of a cent per pound. There is no other trust in the whole list as to which the smallest pretense exists of protecting the people against their exactions.—New York Evening Post.

The Philadelphia Telegraph is a Republican paper published in the midst of ultra protection sentiment, but it looks abroad, outside of its own dooryard, and remarks:

If nothing should be done by the present congress about the tariff, it is confidently believed that not only New York will be a doubtful state in 1892, but Illinois, Iowa and Massachusetts also. The defection in the latter state with respect to free raw materials is serious, and it must be offset by gaining the favor of the masses for a tariff law which, while fully protecting capital and labor, shall not gorge the pockets of an over protected class. The western farmers, who want lower duties, must be considered; and all duties which are a hair's breadth above the point of real protection should be reduced. The worst mistake that the majority of congress could make would be that of neglecting to revise the present unpopular tariff law.

Major McKinley's "cabbage head" bill is catching it from all quarters. We have lately received a circular from the Mineralized Rubber Co., of New York, giving a few facts that were entirely new to us. We quote one paragraph only:

We supposed that our present reckless Congress would abstain from touching the pockets of the Press, and that our opposition to the one domestic mill who manufacture Woolen Felt Printing Blankets was in no danger, but such proves not to be the case. The "McKinley Bill" now before the House of Representatives at Washington, proposes to strike out Section 379 of the present Tariff, which admits Printer's Felts at a duty of 20cts per lb. and 30 per cent ad valorem, (equalling about 53 per cent on value), so that this article will be forced in future to pay duty as Woolen Cloth at 44cts per lb. and 50 per cent ad valorem, (equalling over 105 per cent on value), necessitating a rise on the trade of over 45 per cent on present rates.

CURRENT COMMENT.

PROFESSION VS. PRACTICE.

The McKinley bill increases the protection enjoyed by the Sugar Trust 14 per cent., and yet certain Republican papers have the polite and elegant gall to tell the people that the party is the enemy of Trusts.—Houston Post.

MUST HAVE BEANS IN THEIRS.

Bars are barred in Boston, under a new law every drinker being required to sit at a table and take beans in his'n. After a while nobody will be able to get a drink there unless he belongs to a literary society and wears glasses on his eyes.—Pittsburg Press.

AN ELEQUENT ADVOCATE.

James M. Beck, a Philadelphia orator, at the recent Jefferson birthday dinner in Boston, said that the most eloquent advocate of tariff reform in his city was the sheriff, who had, since the election in 1888, closed sixty-eight woolen mills.—Ann Arbor Argus.

HAVE GOT AN OVERDOSE.

There was a meeting of New York importers in the metropolis yesterday to protest against the passage of the McKinley tariff bill and strangely enough, some of the men on the association's committees are men who shouted themselves hoarse for Harrison. They've got an overdose of their own medicine.—Toledo Bee.

HAS CEASED TO BE USEFUL.

There has seldom been a year in the history of this country when so many outward, direct evidences of the dissolution of a party could be seen as now evidence the fact that the Republican party has lost its hold on popular regard. It has ceased to be useful except as an instrument of torture to the mass of the people.—Norfolk Virginian.

A SPECTACLE TO JEER AT.

When the Republican party gets its silver inflation under full headway and its pension roll up to double the cost of Germany's standing army, and a new army of officials appointed under its Federal election law, and McKinley prices on every imaginable article of use—then this once free country will be a spectacle for gods and men to jeer at.—Buffalo Courier.

A TRYING POSITION.

A great deal of fault has been found with the grandson because he has subsidized Republican editors. He has bestowed more offices on them than has ever before been given the fraternity. An editor who will undertake the defense of the grandson, or of the Congress now in session, or of the last and worst state of the g. o. p. earns a half dozen offices, and each one of them a fat one.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

THE PEOPLE ARE THINKING TOO.

When we see such a narrow partisan creature as Mr. Clarkson bewailing the entrance of Democratic literature in Republican homes, he expresses not merely the fact that brains, and with them intellectual literature, are forced by the misguided Republican policy into the Democratic cause, but the larger fact that people are doing a great deal more non-partisan reading than in the old days.—New York Evening Post.

PREPARING THE PEOPLE.

A firm of Chicago glass dealers has sent circulars to their customers, announcing the increase in price they may expect if the McKinley bill becomes a law. They have studied the matter thoroughly. The retail dealers will follow suit and the consumer will pay it at last. Flint glass tumblers, now 75 cents per dozen, will be $1.15; and all through the list in proportion. It is suggested that other dealers do the same and thus prepare the people for the advance in prices and the prosperity that is to come of it.—Chicago Times.

A LOG-ROLLING SCHEME.

According to the Hartford Courant, the attitude of the new Tariff bill on tobacco will make Connecticut a sure Republican State this fall. The Courant is altogether too confident. McKinley's Tariff bill may have been devised as a sort of log-rolling scheme to help the Republican party in different States, but it is not having that effect. The revolt of leading Republican manufacturers of New England and the denunciation of Butterworth show that the crazy quilt bill cannot keep the Republican States in line, let alone capturing Democratic strongholds.—N. Y. Star.

DR. SANGRADO MC KINLEY.

The theory and practice of the tariff tax cure for stagnant circulation and depressed industries clearly originated with Dr. Sangrado. The McKinley doctors always prescribe higher and still higher taxation, on the theory that the sooner the blood of the nation is drawn off the better for the sinking patient. They assure the people that all they have to do in order to prosper is to keep quiet. They tell them that they are all right as long as they breathe and have a pulse that may be felt. To candid lookers-on this appears like arrant quackery, for at each recurring visit of the tariff doctor more copious blood-letting is prescribed than was thought necessary for a cure at the preceding one.—Jackson Courier.

THE ISSUE DEFINED.

The report of the minority on the McKinley bill, though bearing some marks of haste in preparation, is a straight forward and refreshing attack upon the policy of protection. At last we have an end to the chatter by co-called democrats about the rate of tariff that is essential to the protection of American labor. The minority declares that the question at issue is whether tariff taxes "shall be imposed upon the people for the primary purpose of raising money for the payment of the ordinary public expenses and the public debt, or be imposed for the purpose of increasing the cost of production and the prices of certain articles of domestic consumption." On this question it declares that the differences between the two great political parties are irreconcilable, and it insists that the majority in congress has, by this bill, committed itself to the "policy of unjust and unequalled taxation of the many for the benefit of the few."

The line is here clearly drawn between a tariff for revenue and a tariff for what is called protection; between a tax to meet obligations and a tax to increase prices for the benefit of manufacturers engaged in private business. Not a word is said and not a thought is suggested as to the "extent of the protection" that shall "incidently be afforded by a system of taxation." On the once great question of "the protection of American labor" the minority report is equally explicit and emphatic. It declares that the minority are as anxious as the majority can possibly be to promote and encourage American industry and advance the interests of American laborers, but they believe that these objects are to be accomplished by reducing taxation, and that the benefits thus achieved will be more secure and satisfactory than any apparently brought about through the system advocated by the majority. The minority further declares that so far are they from finding themselves protected by high duties, the workingmen have found themselves compelled to organize trades unions to maintain even the existing rate of wages, while numerous capitalists have insisted that they must have higher taxation of products or lower taxes on raw materials if they are to continue in business. Thus, says the report, capital and labor combine in declaring the failure of the protective policy.

The report further directs attention to the fact that we pay for our imports with our own products, and that the condition of the producers would be far worse if the tariff had succeeded in preventing the trade that leaves at least some market for our surplus products. The report abounds in such suggestions, and is marred nowhere by the wretched concession that, somehow, some protection is to be got out of a tariff tax. The democratic party in congress is to be congratulated on its representation on the committee of ways and means. It is beginning to reach the position that entitles it to success, and when it is entitled to success the people will see to it that it gets its due.—The Standard.

A CHINESE WALL.

Mr. R. W. Gilder, editor of the Century, has written a letter to the Tribune, commending the ways and means committee for proposing to abolish the present thirty per cent duty on works of art, and urging that an international copyright law be passed at the same time. The Tribune in an editorial commenting upon it, commends Mr. Gilder's suggestion to couple the two propositions. It says:

One of his pungent sentences might wisely be blazoned before the eyes of every member of both houses of congress, as an indictment to which this great nation should be no longer obliged to plead guilty: "We steel foreign literature, and put up a Chinese wall against foreign paintings and statues." Happily, works of art are transferred to the free list in the McKinley tariff bill, and are likely to remain there.

This sounds like an outburst of the old free trade enthusiasm of Mr. Grosvenor, one of the editors of the Tribune. "A Chinese wall against foreign paintings and statues!" "A Chinese wall!" Think of it! The Tribune, founded by Horace Greeley and edited by Whitelaw Reid! A tariff, too, of only thirty per cent is "a Chinese wall." Could the rankest free trader say more? A thirty per cent duty on foreign paintings and statues—things that the rich people, and the rich people only, can afford to buy—is a Chinese wall that keeps these good things out and prevents the rich and cultured from enjoying them. The McKinley bill puts them on the free list, and therefore the Tribune is glad.

Let the workingmen of America, the great body of consumers, note the admission, and remember it for all time. Thirty per cent on foreign paintings and statues, according to the high priests of protection, constitutes "a Chinese wall" preventing their admission, yet a tariff, ranging in some instances from 30 to 120 per cent, is levied on the necessaries of life, increasing the cost of every article of consumption, whether made at home or abroad. We join heartily with the people who want, and who properly demand, the free admission of foreign paintings and statues, but how can those who admit the propriety of this demand insist on a tariff on the tin that enters into the workman's dinner pail, on the coal that warms his hearth and cooks his food, on the woolen cloth that constitutes his clothing, and the wool from which that cloth is made? Against all these things the Tribune asks that "a Chinese wall" may be built higher and higher, for it is not possible for it, now that it has accepted the free trade definition when applied to a tariff on art, to draw back and deny that the higher tariff on the necessities of life also erects "a Chinese wall," against other importation. Does the Tribune imagine that the American people will much longer consent to the continuance of a policy that monstrously increases the cost of living to the great mass of men by a tariff averaging forty-seven per cent and hastens to take a tariff of thirty per cent off of works of art because it constitutes "a Chinese wall" that, by enhancing their cost, prevents their importation into the United States?

A Sad Condition.

I suffered for five years with the worst form of Blood Poison, during which time I was attended by the best physicians I could find, and tried numbers of proprietary medicines without any beneficial results. I continuld to grow worse all this time, until my whole system was destroyed by the vile disease; my tongue and throat having great holes caused by it. I then commenced taking SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.), and in a few months I was entirely cured, and to this great medicine do I attribute my recovery. This was over two years ago, and I have had no return, or any effects of the disease since, and my skin is to-day as smooth and clean as anybody's.

WOOL AND WHEAT.

AN IMPORTANT WARNING FROM EDWARD ATKINSON.

Dangerous Competition for Our Wheat Growers—The Wool Tariff at Fault—A Strong Rival in South America—"Pauper Labor" for the Farmer to Meet.

Mr. Edward Atkinson has written a letter to Bradstreet's containing facts about wool and wheat which will prove of great interest to the growers of these staples. He states that when the wool and woolen tariff of 1867 was under discussion he was invited by the late Edward Harris, of Rhode Island, to accompany him to Washington to oppose the measure. The attitude of Mr. Harris is specially worthy of note, as he was at that time one of the most intelligent and successful manufacturers of men's woolen goods in the country; and the wool and woolen tariff of 1867 is the foundation of all subsequent legislation on this subject.

Mr. Atkinson, re-enforced by Mr. Harris and other manufacturers, went to Washington and showed the ways and means committee that we were then importing very freely the fine wool of the Argentine Republic in South America, and that by mixing this wool with our own product our manufacturers were able to compete on fairly equal terms with their European rivals. It was claimed even then, just as during the past two years, that the importation of the fine South American wools would benefit the American wool growers also; for the best results in woolen manufacturing are reached by mixing these wools with our own. This being the case, it was claimed that all classes—growers, manufacturers and consumers—would be benefited by free wool.

The grounds on which these gentlemen based their opposition to the wool tariff were very far sighted, and subsequent events have proven the soundness of their reasoning. They argued that if the markets of the United States should be closed to the South American wools, those wools would not for that reason cease to be grown. The production of them would continue, but, instead of coming to us, those wools would go to the two great European markets of London and Antwerp. The prices there would decline by reason of the great production and by reason of the further fact that Europe furnished the only free market for those wools. Furthermore, with an abundant supply of cheap wools of this kind, the European manufacturer would invent special machinery and processes for working them to greatest advantage. In this way the cost of manufacture would be constantly lowered, and our own manufacturers would suffer an ever increasing competition from the very men into whose hands we had put a great advantage by not taking it for ourselves.

The increased production of these high grade wools in Australia and at the Cape of Good Hope has operated still further to the advantage of the European manufacturer. The results have been as predicted. After twenty-three years of this kind of protection Mr. McKinley still finds it necessary to place higher duties on many classes of woolen goods. The manufacturers clamor to have worsteds classed as woolens in order to get higher protection, and the Ohio sheep raisers besiege the ways and means committee in their eager haste to get greatly increased duties on wool and to threaten the Eastern woolen manufacturers with a ruinous dose of free trade unless they get this higher duty.

Meanwhile the American consumer, for whose benefit neither manufacturer nor grower seems especially concerned, goes on paying for his clothing nearly double the European price and getting more and more shoddy for his money. The rich man still imports fine English goods for his coat, paying an enormous duty into the treasury as a penalty for importing it; the poor man contents himself with a "home market" coat, paying his tribute to the protected manufacturer.

But Mr. Atkinson and his friends used a further argument in 1867, which is especially worthy of attention at this time.

They predicted before the committee that if we refused to take the South American wools free not only would the price of them be depressed in Europe by means of a narrower market, but that this depression of the price would force the South American farmers to turn their attention to wheat and cotton, and thus to begin a course of successful competition with other classes of our farmers. This part of Mr. Atkinson's forecast is just now being verified as correct. He cites a very interesting series of letters now appearing in The New York Tribune from an intelligent correspondent in South America. The statements of this correspondent are well worthy of the attention of our wheat growers, and should open their eyes as to how protection is conjuring up a dangerous competition for them outside of the home market, and where the laws of the American congress to "protect the farmers" cannot reach.

This correspondent writes from the Argentine Republic, and his statements apply to the single province of Buenos Ayres, which is almost as large as the three great states of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio combined. This province is one vast plain called "The Pampas," and is somewhat less than one-thirteenth of the entire area of the Argentine Republic.

The most interesting statement in the letters of The Tribune's correspondent is this:

"In 1875 there were 825,492 acres cultivated, and now there are 5,899,895 acres, mainly in wheat; but, amazing as the ratio of increase is, there is only 1 per cent. of the entire area under tillage."

Mr. Atkinson calls attention to these striking figures and then goes on to show that these 120,000 square miles of Buenos Ayres alone would suffice for the production, at our standard per acre, of 500,000,000 bushels of wheat and 7,000,000 bales of cotton, with one-third of the land even then left over for other purposes.

The development of agriculture in this energetic republic will be something enormous in the near future. Mr. Atkinson knows of a single firm which has received an order for 25,000 steel plows for that country. The immense grassy plains of Buenos Ayres have been fertilized for years by the enormous herds of sheep, and cattle that have been grazing on them. Immigration has been pouring into the country at the rate of 200,000 a year—the "pauper labor" of Europe, which our farmers will have to meet on another ground and from whose competition no possible high tariff can protect our wheat growers.

As a further indication that a great increase of trade with this part of South America is expected in England, it is only necessary to state that one of the principal causes of the activity in shipbuilding on the Clyde during the past two or three years has been the demand for ships for trade with the Argentine Republic. That country will evidently get even with us for our adverse legislation.

We have excluded their wool, says Mr. Atkinson; we have depressed its price in foreign markets, we have protected foreign manufacturers to the detriment of our own, and now our great manufacturers of agricultural tools and machinery are sending plows, harrows, harvesters and the like in huge numbers to be applied to the cultivation of the wheat under such conditions that there will be no present limit to the product except the amount of labor and capital which can be secured for it.

Mr. Atkinson is everywhere recognized as one of our very ablest writers on economic subjects. In the treatment of statistics he is perhaps the first authority in the country. In view of this fact, and of the correctness of his predictions as stated above, the following words from him deserve the most serious attention of American farmers: "In the vain effort to keep up the price of wool, the whole product of which is not equal to 2 per cent. of the aggregate product of our farms, we have forced the attention of these most dangerous competitors to the facilities with which they can supply Europe with grain, and when that has been accomplished the next step may be competition in cotton.

"Perhaps the farmer may presently ask himself if it would not have been better to leave things to their natural course rather than to force competition in other countries on our most important staples by refusing to buy from them wool, which is one of the least important products of our agriculture; especially since the more foreign wool we buy the better market and the better price we develop for our own."

The price of wheat with us is now so low that distress among growers is almost universal. The "home market" is fully supplied and the foreign market is in great danger. Do our farmers want any more of such "protection?"

LABOR NOT HAPPY YET.

The Protectionists Have Done Nothing Remarkable So Far.

Our high protectionist law makers have for years been talking about the protection of American labor, and have been diligently laying on high and higher duties to accomplish that end.

One would think that at some point in the struggle they would succeed and labor would be happy and quit going off on strikes. But it is not so. The election two years ago brought victory to the protection party that always makes such high sounding pretensions about protecting labor; and one would have thought that now, when the tariff wall is about to go up higher than ever, labor ought to be smiling serenely and forgetting the days when it was so discontented as to strike.

But the protection of the past and the still higher protection of the near future has not yet succeeded in soothing the discontent of labor. Labor goes on striking as if there had never been any such thing as protection. Evidently the panacea has failed to work.

Hundreds of manufacturers have been before Mr. McKinley's committee pleading for labor; but for all that Bradstreet's report for the last week in April says: "The industrial outlook has not improved at all this week. In fact signs of restlessness among the wage workers have become more conspicuous, the number of strikes reported this week being larger than in any previous week for nearly two years past."

And this condition of things grows worse, as is shown by Bradstreet's comparison with the strikes of last year, as follows:

"The total number of strikes in April is 126, involving 28,353 employes, whereas last year in April there were only 61 strikes, involving 12,193 employes. Since Jan. 1 this year there have been 303 strikes, involving 66,142 men, while in the first four months of last year there were only 221 strikes, involving 48,924 persons."

It is quite evident that labor does not believe it has yet reached the happy time promised it in the last presidential campaign.

A Petty Swindle.

One of the meanest swindles for its size in the McKinley tariff bill is the proposed duty on printers' and paper makers' felts or blankets. These articles are used in all the large printing houses and newspaper establishments in the process known as stereotyping. There is only one man in the whole United States who makes them, and yet the good Mr. McKinley raises the duty from 53 per cent. to 105 per cent. ad valorem for the private benefit of that one man. We are told that protection is "a broad national policy" which does not concern itself about individuals, but looks only to the general good of all. But here one man is picked out for enrichment at the expense of hundreds of printing houses all over the land. Or is the aim of protection in this case to make this fellow compete with himself and so beat down his own prices? It would be very interesting to the public to learn just what private "pull" that man had on the committee. Did he make liberal promises of "fat" for the next campaign?

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge, Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Tex. says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

This great remedy will ward off, as well as cure Malarial Diseases, and for all Kidney, Liver and Stomach Disorders stands unequaled. Price 50c and $1, at

A Few Hints on the Proper Method of Putting Them up and their Utility.

That lightning rods are a sure protection to property against the destructive forces of lightning, when properly set up, is a scientific fact that is no longer disputed by any well-informed person. Lightning can be conveyed from a cloud to the earth just as surely and safely down a metal conductor attached to a building, as a message can be sent over a wire from one town to another by the agency of electricity. And the operation in the one case, no less than in the other, is governed by fixed scientific laws. Metals, as a rule, are conductors of electricity; some substances, like wood, are imperfect or partial conductors; other substances, like glass, are absolute non-conductors; while the earth is the readiest conductor of electricity known. The experience of centuries has proven that when a bolt of lightning leaves a cloud it always descends to the earth, the most powerful attractor of electricity. But if a large tree or building stands in the pathway of the bolt it may be drawn aside from its direct course by these partial conductors, and strike them before passing into the earth. With these facts in mind, let us examine the methods which ought to obtain in attaching lightning conductors to buildings.

1st.—How should the rod be attached to the building? The old plan, which for many years was the one in general use, consisted in attaching the rods to the walls by insulating supports. This is not only unnecessary, but is entirely wrong in principle, and liable to invite damage, instead of insuring safety. These insulators are practically useless for the purposes for which they were intended. The force that can pass through a stone wall five or six feet thick is not likely to submit to imprisonment by means of two or three inches of porcelain or glass. The intervention of these insulators may do mischief in another way. They lead to the retention, by the agency of induction, of slight charges of opposite kinds of electrical force. They tend in this way to produce exactly the disturbed state of electrical condition which it is the primary purpose of the lightning conductor to prevent or remove. For these reasons insulating supports are now entirely abandoned by the best posted constructors. The report of the London Lightning Rod Conference says: "Insulation may be regarded as unnecessary and mischievous. The essentials are that the rod be attached to the building by fastenings of the same metal as itself; that the fastening be of adequate strength; that they be of such form as not to compress or disturb the rod; that they allow play for the expansion and contraction, and that they hold it firmly enough to prevent the weight falling on any one bearing." Copper and iron rods are both used as conductors, but the galvanized iron rod is now generally conceded to be the best. The principle to be kept in view is that the rod should be made of some metal, which is a better and easier conductor of electricity than the building to which it is attached.

2d.—How should the ground connection be made? Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of leading all lightning conductors down into moist earth, or as it is technically called, until they make "good earth." In fact it may be said that the part of the conductor above ground is a mere appendage to that part under ground, the essential function of the conductor being in reality accomplished by the subterranean portion. For of what avail is the fastening of the very best rod, in the best manner, to a building, if that part beneath the surface of the ground cannot convey the charge of electric fluid safely into the earth? The clear understanding of Benjamin Franklin perceived this at the outset, but it seems to have been forgotten or not heeded in subsequent years by some lightning rod constructors, the result of which was that buildings having conductors were struck by lightning, and thus the practice of using conductors was brought into disrepute. Probably, in nine cases out of ten, whenever a building provided with a conductor is struck by lightning, it is because the ground connection is imperfect or insufficient, that is, for want of "good earth." This condition is indispensable and it is this one particular which especially taxes the judgment and skill of the constructor. Moist earth is needed, for it is a better conductor of electricity than dry earth. When it becomes necessary to attach three or more points on the building, then a larger ground connection becomes essential, which can be obtained by digging a ditch extending eight or ten feet out from the building, and attaching the prime conductor to a rod leading through this ditch, this latter rod being enclosed in a perforated gas pipe, extending into the earth five or six feet, the ditch being filled with odl scraps of iron, tin cans, etc., covered with a layer of wood ashes. The most successful constructors now are those who take especial pains and know how to secure a sufficient ground contection, for herein lies the entire practical utility of the conductor.

SOME FACTS ABOUT RAILROADS.

The following communication, addressed to the editor of the Fowlerville paper, is given insertion in our columns by request of the Patrons of Industry. The writer of the article is a member of the order and has personally investigated the subject upon which he writes. He was assisted by Judge Cahill in looking up the facts:

MR. EDITOR.—From a short conversation had with the D. L. & N. R. R. ticket agent at Fowlerville, just before my departure last Saturday, I conclude he must think the P. of I. and especially the writer, are unjustly severe in our strictures upon R. R. methods and their relations to the people and the State. He asked me several questions in regard to the L. Shore and M. Central, to which I could not reply positively, therefore I admitted that I could not. I have since then looked up the matter at the State Law library, and request that you publish the facts which you will find in this article.

The Lake Shore, or more properly the Mich. Southern R. R. was built by the State, and for a time owned and run by the State. In 1846 the State unfortunately sold the road to a private corporation for $500,000, payable in installments running twenty years with interest at 6 per cent. The State also exempt the road from all taxes except a special tax of three-quarters of one per cent. on the paid up stock only. The road then refused to pay this tax and contested it in the courts until 1862. Notwithstanding the road was sold by the State for 500,000, it was capitalized for three millions and bonded for two and one-half million more. The bonds, issued as I informed the ticket agent, were of four kinds. First mortgage bonds, income bonds, plain bonds and Jackson branch bonds. This road, all can see by the above figures, was used by sharks to swindle the State out of God only knows how many millions.

The Michigan Central R. R. was also built and run for some time by the State, and the operators swindled the State and sold its credit until its bonds would bring only 18 cents on the dollar in the New York market. This was about 1842; the bonds were afterwards redeemed by the people at par. This road was also sold for a nominal price finally to a private corporation. Both the above roads are now owned principally by the Vanderbilt family.

The D. G. H. & M. was started by the State and built as far as Pontiac. The money the State put into it was finally paid back in State script of more or less uncertain value. Parties then completed the road to Grand Haven in the interests of the Great Western. The road was bonded for $6,457,000, which it never paid and was finally placed in the hands of a receiver, who sold it to the Great Western for the nominal sum of $1,850,000. Although the State did not lose very much by this enterprize, it proved the biggest swindle the people along the line ever encountered. If the above facts do not serve to tame the firey ardor of your local ticket agent, there are plenty of astonishers where these came from.

The Atlantic Monthly, March 1881, said: "It is the railroads that have bred the millionaires who are now buying newspapers and getting up corners in wheat, corn and cotton."

In 1880 the New York Sun said: "One of the most odious features of the railroad system is its unjust discrimination between business houses."

Jay Gould admitted before the Legislative investigating committee of New York, that railroads systematically bribed members of Legislatures and of Congress. Garfield said the "land given to railroads reaches an aggregate of 250,000,000 acres, a territory equal to nine times the area of Ohio." Judge Black said all our agriculture and commerce is at the mercy of the railroads. A committee of Congress composed of Windom, Sherman, Norwood, Johnson, Davis and Conklin, in its report to Congress, said: "No Congress would dare exercise so vast a power as the railroads now exercise." Horace Greeley said in 1871, "If they own the whole country, and all who live in it, they could not lord it over us more tyranically, and perhaps they will proceed next day to make a scrip dividend, or additional issue of stock representing nothing but their own rapacity so as to conceal from dull and careless eyes the fact that they are exacting from their customers an annual profit of fifteen or twenty-five per cent. on their actual investment.

I commend these sayings to the uninformed and misinformed persons who, on every occasion think it smart to defend the hand that enslaves them. If to express opinions which have hitherto been expressed by the brightest minds in the country is ignorance and bigotry, then I am both ignorant and a bigot. F. M. FOGG.

REV. W. H. BABBITT'S ANNUAL.

A goodly congregation for a rainy day greeted the Pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rev. W. H. Babbitt, as he arose to deliver the eighth Anniversary Sermon of his pastorate last Sabbath morning. His text was 1 Th s'ns 1:19.

After alluding to changes that had taken place in the room and audience since he first ascended the platform from which he was speaking, he spoke of the unity that had prevailed in council and harmony in action all these years; a harmony which had been secured by a spirit of mutual concession and forbearance.

The duty of a church to the community in which it is located was dwelt upon. It should exert an influence on the morals and manners of the people, and should advocate and promote every needed reform. The relation of the church to the cause of Temperance was specially mentioned and dwelt upon. At the same time it was held that the full aim of church effort was the conversion of men rather than the mere outward reform from evil habits.

There was to be a spiritual power in a Christian church which would enable it to accomplish more than any mere secular organization. The aggregate of the additions to this church in the past eight years had been, it was stated, one hundred and forty-one. No less than forty members had died in that time. Eminence in the Christian life it was affirmed could not be obtained except by diligent, persevering efforts. One of the great objects of preaching was held to get people to act in the same earnest way in matters of religion that they do in other affairs of life.

Comfort and joy in the Christian life are the fruits of faithfulness in the performance of Christian duties and the improvement of Christian privi lees. The uniform kindness and courtesy with which he had been treated by his people was acknowledged by the Pastor, and his desire to repay this kindness by discharging well the duties of his office. One cause for deep regret had been, that while the messenger had been well received and treated, the message he brought had been by some of them refused. His desire was that all might receive it as the word of God.

OUR NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

Supt. E. A. Wilson having resigned, the Tecumseh School Board have engaged Prof. H. C. Rankin, for the past four years Supt. of the schools at Lapeer, Mich., as Superintendent of the Tecumseh Schools for the coming year. Prof. Rankin served in the Union army four years during the war, after which he lived on a farm in Jackson county, Mich., for seven years; then to State Normal School, from which he graduated in the classical course in 1876; then to Olivet College four years, where he graduated receiving the degree of A. M. He taught four years at Cassopolis, three at Leslie, Mich., and this is his fourth year as Superintendent of the Lapeer School. Below is a letter from Supt. of Public Instruction Estabrook, regarding Mr. Rankin.

LANSING, April 18, '90.

MR. A. W. MILLS—My Dear Sir:—Yours of the 16th is rec'd. In reply I would say that I have known Mr. Rankin during the past thirteen years. He is a graduate of the State Normal School, and also of Olivet College, from which he has received the degree of A. M. He is a thorough scholar, and especially strong in discipline. He is well informed in the best methods of school organization and teaching, and is thoroughly enthusiastic in all the work of his profession. He has never failed to secure a strong hold both upon his pupils and co-laborers. I do not know where you could get a better man. Yours truly,

J. ESTABROOK.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood aud mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

What It Costs

Must be carefully considered by the great majority of people, in buying even necessities of life. Hood's Sarsaparilla commends itself with special force to the great middle classes, because it combines positive economy with great medical power. It is the only medicine of which can truly be said "100 Doses One Dollar," and a bottle taken according to directions will average to last a month.

There are two forms of chronic rheumatism: one in which the joints are swollen and red without fever; in the other the joints are only stiff and painful. In either form Salvation Oil may be relied on to affect a cure. It kills pain. 25 cents.

The canine exhibition given by the Rice Brothers last Saturday evening, at the opera house, was well attended, and was a very creditable show indeed, for the kind. They have a good variety of the canine family, all thoroughly trained, and many of the tricks they performed evinced almost human intelligence. It was a great show for the children.

We have established headquarters for the HERALD in Britton at Osgood Bros, store. Our budget will come from there hereafter. People wishing to send news items or business letters to the HERALD can leave them at this store and they will be promptly forwarded.

While driving down through Raisin the other day, we stopped at the Tecumseh Celery Co's farm to examine their new artesian well. It is running continually and will doubtless afford a stream of living water the year round. It will be a big bonanza for the farm, especially in a dry season.

The name of Alex. Richards, of Raisin, is brought forward by the Tecumseh Herald, as that of a farmer capable of representing his class in congress. Should the demand of the district this year be for a farmer for congress, no abler champion of agricultural interests could be named than Mr. Richards.—Adrian Press.

A sad and fatal accident occurred last Monday at Manchester. Flora Adam, a young girl working for Wm. Lehr, was standing on a chair near the railing hanging out clothes from his back stoop, fifteen feet from the ground, when the line broke and, having hold of the line, the weight of the clothes jerked her over the railing. She fell head downward on the stone pavement, fracturing her skull and breaking her neck.

In the course of his article on "The American Burlesque," which will appear in the June number of Harper's Magazine, Laurence Hutton mentions the very clever parodies seen of late years upon the amateur stage, and refers especially to Katherine and Mephistopheles, by John Kendrick Bangs. Mr. Hutton says that these two parodies show "a power of invention upon the part of Mr. Bangs which proves him to one of the most original of burlesque writers."

Lippincott's Magazine for June is a brilliant and eminently readable number. The complete novel is contributed by Mary E. Stickney, and is entitled "Circumstantial evidence." It is a story of the misunderstandings, jealousies, and final reconciliation of a young couple, told in a natural and charming manner. The story is full of good situations, and here and there verges upon the tragic, but "all's well that ends well." The character of the impetuous, passionate "Nitta," the young wife, is capitally drawn, as is also that of her husband. Altogether it is a very bright and entertaining story, and though no moral obtrudes itself, it certainly points one, and a good, strong, healthy one, too.

Albert Boyce, of Chicago, is spending a couple of weeks with Tecumseh friends.

Memorial services will be held in the Presbyterian church next Sunday evening.

It is likely that there will be a liberal supply of lilacs for Decoration Day this year.

Horatio Keyser and Geo. W. Frazer have been appointed village board of review.

Rev. Kerridge, of the M. E. church, will deliver the Memorial Day address at Clinton.

The city band had a special rehearsal last Tuesday evening to prepare some special music for Decoration Day.

Miss Fannie Stocking started her select school Monday, and has had a very good attendance for the first week.

Look out for travelling barb wire fence swindlers. They offer to put up an eight wire fence with iron posts for eight cents a foot. When the victim comes to settle with them he finds that it is eight cents a foot for each wire.

"The proprietors of the straw-board factory at Adrian are thinking about transferring their $50,000 plant to Muskegon." It is about time this item was called in. Adrian has no straw-board factory, and if she had, it would know better than to let it go way off, to Muskegon.—The Times.

The following corrections should be made in the list of Decoration Day committees as printed last week:

Floral Com.—W. R. C., with the President as chairman, the Commander of Beers Post, H. W. Stevens, B. J. Bond.

Transportation Com.—Thos Hanley, L. B. Thompson, Wm. Jay.

A private letter from our old friend, John R. Clark, contains good tidings. He has just closed a most successful season of thirty-seven weeks in 18 states. He is still under the sole management of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau, and a good portion of his time is already booked for next season. He expects to be out this way in June and will doubtless take a few days' recreation in his old home.

One of the dishes in the exquisite lunch which Mrs. E. H. Cogswell served to the Friday Club last week, was literary salad. It consisted of green paper, cut lettuce shape, with some interesting question attached to each leaf. The ladies acquired a large amount of desirable information through the answers. They are reading Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico" at present.—Hudson Gazette.

The business portion of Chicago street should be better lighted than the present arrangement of lamps will afford. Two more lamps should be placed, one at the intersection of Chicago and Ottawa, and one at the intersection of Chicago and Pearl. They will both be called for inside of six months and they might as well be placed at once. In making this suggestion to the Council we believe we echo the general sentiment.

Buy A Buckeye.

Thos. R. Kyle has received the Agency for this vicinity of the Buckeye Harvesting Machinery. The Buckeye light mower has been a standard article of farm machinery for over a third of a century. It is the most perfect mower ever sold in this country. It has remained unchanged in its mechanism for thirty-three years, and no mower of late years has ever surpassed it. The Buckeye Binder is the lightest, strongest and most durable. Dynamometer tests always prove it to be the lighest draft binder ever made. Its knotter is adapted to the use of all kinds of twine, and it never fails to tie. Farmers wishing to buy a new mower or binder should examine these machines.

SILVER SALVE.

The Continued Senate Debate This Week.

THE HOUSE TO VOTE ON TARIFF ON WEDNESDAY

When the Great Flow of Human Gas Will Cease—Senatorial Eulogies on Kelly Tomorrow—The Contested Alabama Case Up for Thursday—General News from the Seat of Government.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—In the Senate this week this discussion of the silver bill will be continued indefinitely. Several of the western senators are down for long speeches and the end of the debate is not yet in sight. An effort will be made to hold a Republican caucus during the week to come to some agreement on the silver question and to determin upon a limit to debate; but the discussion is likely to fill out the week at least. Tuesday after 4 o'clock is to be devoted to eulogies on the late Representative Kelly of Pennsylvania and Saturday as usual will be given over to the calendar.

WM. D. KELLY.

The House will conclude the tariff discussion this week. Twice the River and Habor has been postponed by action of the Republican caucus of the House, and it was understood that that it would be called up as soon as the tariff bill had been disposed of. The tariff bill will be placed on its final passage on Wednesday and it is the intention of the Election Committee which has right of way, to call up the contested election case of McDuffie (Rep.) and Turpin (Dem.) from the fourth district of Alabama on Thursday so that the River and Harbor bill will not come up before the following week at the latest, unless a caucus should decide to allow it to be brought forward this week.

The election committee has reported in favor of the seating of Mr. McDuffie, the contestee, and a minority report has been filed by the Democrats favoring Mr. Turpins retention of the seat. Friday will, as usual, be devoted to the consideration and passage of private bills.

Sergeant-at-Arms Canaday to Resign—His Successor.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.—It is settled finally that Sergeant at-Arms Canaday of Senate is to resign. This action was anticipated in the United Press dispatches yesterday. It is now determined that Col. Canaday will hand in his resignation to take effect probably July 1st. His successor is to be chosen at a caucus of Republican Senators. It is likely that Mr. Leeds, of Philadelphia, ex-Representative Valentine, of Nebraska and Col. Swords, of Iowa, will be put in nomination in the caucus, but it looks as though Mr. Valentine had a clear field after the first ballot. He has the backing of the West and he will get a few votes on the first ballot from New England.

Deputy Sergeant-at-arms Reade was a strong candidate to succeed Col. Canady, about the strongest in fact; but last night at a late hour he withdrew from the race in favor of Mr. Valentine. This withdrawal probably settles the fight for succession. Mr. Swords will receive a complimentary vote from Iowa on the first ballot, but he will likely be withdrawn after that, leaving the contest between Mr. Leeds and Mr. Valentine.

The position of sergeant-at-arms and door keeper of the Senate pays $4,320. It is considered particularly desirable because of the patronage connected with it. The sergeant-at arms is the executive officer of the Senate. Colonel Canaday has held the position for nine years. He was appointed from North Carolina to succeed "Dick" Bright at the instance of Senator Sherman who has used his influence ever since to keep him in office. Determined efforts have been made for more than a year to have Colonel Canaday removed, and a great many charges against him have been published in the newspapers; but they have all been disproved. The political pressure for the place has been very great, and the fact that North Carolina is a Democratic state has rendered Colonel Canaday's tenure of office very insecure for some time. Nothing but his personal popularity would have kept him in the place for so many years.

OUTHWAITE

Casts His Spear Against the McKinley Bill.

BYNUM, OF INDIANA, IS HIGHLY INCENSED.

And Uses Language on the Floor of the House That Shocks Even the Gentlemen from Texas.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—In the tariff discussion, on motion of Mr. McKinley, an amendment to the tariff bill was adopted imposing a duty of 50 per cent. advalorem on bone and horn buttons, and a duty of 4 cents per line—button measure—of one-fortieth of one inch per gross on pearl and shell buttons manufactured or partly manufactured. Also an amendment fixing a duty of 35 per cent. advalorem on dollsheads, toy marbles of whatever material composed, and on all other toys not composed of rubber, china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthenware or stoneware, and not specially provided for. Mr. Washington, of Tennessee, denied that the Southern manufacturers were asking for any largess from the government. They could prosper under any tariff. The amendment was adopted.

Dr. Outhwaite, of Ohio, attacked the drawback features of the bill declaring that it would be for the interest of the Standard Oil company.

Mr. McKinley called attention to the fact that in the Forty-eighth congress the Democratic committee on ways and means had brought in a bill providing for a drawback, not of 99 per cent., but of 100 per cent.

Mr. Outhwaite offered an amendment to the drawback paragraph providing that the rebate shall not be paid on tin used in the transportation of petroleum or coal oil. Rejected, 96-103.

Messrs. Anderson, of Kansas, Henderson, of Iowa, Mason, Cheadle, Kelly, Dunnell and Kerr voted in the affirmative. The drawback section was, on motion of Mr. McKinley, amended so as to read as follows:

Section 24.—Provided that the imported material used in the manufacture of articles entitled to drawback of customs duties, when exported, shall in all cases, where drawback of duties paid on such materials is claimed, be identified, the quantity of such material used and the amount of duties paid thereon, shall be ascertained. The fact of the manufacture of such articles in the United States and their exportation therefrom shall be determined and the drawback given thereon shall be made to the manufacturer or exporter to the agent of either, or to the persons to whom such manufacturer, exporter or agent shall, in writing, order such drawback paid, under such regulations as the secretary of the treasury shall prescribe.

Mr. McKinley offered a long amendment to the internal revenue clause (mainly of an administrative character) which was ordered to be printed in the record, and went over until Monday. This disposed of the committee amendments.

Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, in speaking of a verbal amendment sent to the clerk's desk and had read a letter from James Campbell, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, denying the statements reflecting upon his character made a few days since by Mr. Bynum, of Indiana, and Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia. In his letter he strongly attacks those gentlemen and uses vigor-language in denunciation of them. An attempt was made to have the letter stricken from the record but it was unsuccessful.

Mr. Funston, of Kansas, offered an amendment to the metal schedule, the proviso that silver ore and all other ores containing lead, shall pay a duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead contained therein, according to sample and assay at the port of entry.

Mr. Bynum, of Indiana, rose to a question of personal privilege to speak to the Campbell letter, and when the chair expressed a belief that no question of privilege was involved there was much uproar and confusion. After a half hour had been wasted Mr. Bynum got the floor and explained the conditions under which he had called Campbell a liar and a perjurer. He concluded by reiterating this charge and by saying: "I have as great confidence in Mr. Campbell as I have in the character of the gentleman who makes the attack upon me. (Excitement and uproar.)

On demand of Mr. Cutcheon the words were taken down and reported to the House, and Mr. Cutcheon offered a resolution to censure Mr. Bynum. Dilatory motions consumed a great deal of time, but the previous question was ordered finally on the resolution.

TIT FOR TAT.

England Should First Pull the Beam from Her Own Eye.

LONDON, May 19.—An address to Czar protesting against Siberian outrages and signed by 254 names of persons of distinction is published in the Universal Review. Mr. Gladstone has written a letter on this subject, in which he says the Russian government would be justified in returning any communication concerning the treatment of the Siberian exiles, with a suggestion that the British government direct its attention to the "brutal slaughter of Irish people" at Mitchellstown recently.

PROHIBITION

To be Traced by Legislation in Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Representative Perkins, of Kansas, has introduced in the House, a bill providing that no state shall be held to be limited or restrained in its power to prohibit, regulate, control or tax the sale or transportation, as an article of commerce, to be delivered within its own limits, of any fermented, distilled or other intoxicating liquids by reason of the fact that they have been imported into the state from beyond its limits, whether a tax or duty has been paid on the article.

Poor Postal Cards.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—It is expected that the contract of A. H. Dagget for furnishing postal cards to the postoffice department will be terminated Monday or Tuesday. It is stated that Mr. Dagget is delinquent in three very important particulars—first, as to the quality of the paper furnished; second, as to the quantity, and third, as to the indemnity bond. The deficiency in the bond is due to the failure of Franklin Woodruff, who is one of the bondsmen.

The Gun Bursted.

MT. STERLING, O., May 19.—While hunting, Charles, the ten-year-old, son of William Wolf, was severely injured by the gun bursting, making a wound six inches long across the right side of the face and injuring the left eye.

WOOED AND WON

Stanley Succumbing to Cupid's Darts.

Miss Tennant Captures the Great Explorer.

ROMANTIC ENGAGEMENT OF THE FAMOUS DISCOVERER.

The Lady Who Became Engaged to Him Four Years Ago, Three Days Before He Started to Africa—The Well Kept Secret—Tomsk Torn by Tornado and Nearly Destroyed by Fire—Hundreds of Sick Exiles Roasted to Death in Siberia.

LONDON, May 19.—Stanley has made a new and rapid conquest, a marriage having been arranged between him and Miss Dorothy Tennant. The lady is well known, not only in society, but to the world at large, as a clever artist. She has for some years past been the protege of Baroness Burdett-Couts, and it was at her house nearly four and a half years ago that Stanley met Miss Tennant. Stanley has declaimed times innumerable that his mission in life was not to be able to talk to women, and from the first day he was presented to his future bride by the Baronness, he seemed to find in the quietude of Miss Tennant's society that haven of rest which is now rarely his.

It will, no doubt, be news to the public to hear that three days before Stanley departed upon his perilous mission to find Emin Pasha he proposed to Miss Tennant, and was duly accepted by her. Baroness Burdett-Coutts and some half dozen near friends were informed of the engagement, but all were sworn to the strictest secrecy until such time as the lovers should deem fit to make their engagement public property. How well these few privileged friends have kept their trust may judged from the fact that nearly four years have passed, and not one word has escaped their lips. During the years Stanley has been absent from home in Africa Miss Tennant and her lover have been regular correspondents as far as the difficulties of postal arrangements would permit. Each mail that has brought letters from the explorer to the Emin Pasha Relief Commission has also contained a lengthy budget to Stanley's lady love. In Richmond Terrace it is openly stated that Miss Tennant has now in her possession more written facts of the dangers, privations and discoveries of Stanley's expedition than even the relief committee are aware of or the public can even guess at.

It seemed somewhat strange to some people that Stanley should, when first putting foot on London soil after his return to this country, drive direct to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts' house in Stratton street. The mystery is now explained, as some one precious as existence to Stanley was waiting for his coming. That some one was Miss Dorothy Tennant. It has for weeks past been a noticeable fact that one of Stanley's most interested listeners at his lectures has been Miss Dorothy Tennant, the artist and author.

Among the friends of the newly-engaged couple the question most widely asked is what will the future Mrs. Stanley do when her husband again goes to darkest Africa. On Friday Miss Tennant was lunching with some friends, and the above question was put to her. The only reply she vouchsafed to the query was by asking: "Is he going out again?" Then, it is stated that Stanley will be offered the post of governor of Africa.

Saturday night Miss Tennant was presented at the Turners' company dinner at the Cannon street hotel, with Stanley, and received many good wishes for her future happiness. Miss Dorothy Tennant is a niece of Sir Charles Tennant She is very good looking and will be well dowered. As an artist she paints nude studies generally, but this year she has a wonderful picture of realistic London life, entitled, "Street Arabs at Play," which she shows at the new gallery.

Terrible Calamity—Hundreds of Persons Burned Alive.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 19.—Horrible scenes are reported as having occurred during the burning of Tomsk, the capital of Western Siberia.

The place was visited simultaneously by a conflagration and a tornado, the result of the combined disasters being the destruction of three-quarters of the buildings, which were of wood and the loss of hundreds of lives.

The Cathedral, situated in the high town, is in ashes. The walls of the edifice in falling crushed an adjacent hospital, burying the inmates, which were subsequently roasted alive.

The garrison brutally refused to render the least assistance in saving lives and property, on the plea that they had enough to do to protect the barracks and other Government buildings. They also added added that they had no time to assist "worthless exiles."

As if fire and water were not capable of inflicting misery enough on the unfortunate outcasts, the storm was followed by a sudden fall in the temperature, and soon the devastated city was buried beneath a mantle of snow that added stinging cold to the sufferings of the thousands of shelterless men, women and children.

Boulanger Quits.

PARIS, May 19.—General Boulanger, in a letter to M. Laissant, his devoted lieutenant and one of the leaders of the parti national, announces his withdrawal from politics and dissolution of the political organization which has hitherto supported him. He says it will now be his sole purpose to remain a soldier of France and the Democracy.

THE VILLAGE SCHOOL-BOYS.

Every morning at half-past eight
There passes by my garden gate
A merry crowd—
With laughter loud.
Little school-boys, happy are ye—
Ah! would that you could ever be
From care so free.

Indeed I have learned to love the noise
Of these hearty, happy little boys,
With faces bright,
Hearts so light,
And I can almost see them grow
As in the morning to school they go,
Through rain or snow.

Here comes Tom Brown, the blacksmith's son,
A sturdy fellow full of fun,
With Arthur Roy,
The doctor's boy;
The lawyer's son with ragged Phil,
The parson's John with fighting Bill
Runs up the hill.

No social monarch here holds sway,
True Democrats alike are they;
The high and low,
Together go.
Their happy lives have just begun,
And here the poor and rich man's son
Both feel as one.

And when their faces bright I see,
Often I wonder where they'll be
When years have flown,
And they are grown,
Perhaps the humblest in this band
Among the greatest in the land,
Some day, may stand.

We can not tell as on they glide,
Borne by life's swift uncertain tide
Where time will place
Each happy face.
All with the Father's love are blest,
In His wise hands we leave the rest.
He knoweth best.

A SKETCH FROM LIFE.

Silas Peters and His Wife Institute a Loving Reform.

"I guess I won't go to church this morning, Silas," said Mrs. Peters, while sitting at the breakfast-table one lovely Sabbath in June.

"Why, Mandy! I thought you wanted to hear the sermon. You know Elder Bishop is going to preach to-day."

"I know all about that," replied Mrs. Peters, with a sigh; "but it's nine o'clock now, and with all I have to do I can't possibly get ready to start by half-past ten."

"Let me help you, Mandy. I can wash dishes; yes, and sweep too," he added triumphantly.

"Yes, and probably you can make all the beds, and get the children ready for Sunday school, and clean off the stove, and skim the milk, and wash the pans, and peel the potatoes for dinner, and get the meat cut and in the spider, and lay the fire ready to light when we get home," replied Mrs. Peters, scornfully.

"Now Mandy," said the by this time crest-fallen Mr. Peters, "I meant all right. Can't you let the sweeping and cleaning the stove go for this time? and we can do without potatoes for once. It will make a change," he added dryly.

"Change! Yes, I guess so. If you want a change so bad, you had better go and board with Mrs. Russell. You'll get change there, I reckon," and she smiled grimly. "Why, when I went over there the other morning to borrow a little flour, they had just finished breakfast; and such a breakfast!"

"Why, what was it, Mandy?" asked Silas, with his curiosity aroused.

"What was it? You had better say what wasn't it. That was just exactly it. There wasn't a single bit of pie on that table, nor pickles, nor cheese, nor jelly, nor anything—much."

"Well, they had something to eat, didn't they?" queried Mr. Peters.

"Yes, they had bread and butter, and mashed potatoes and steak, oatmeal and cream, and coffee and cookies," with a sniff of scorn; "but not even one smitch of pie."

"Well, she's a good cook, anyway, for I've eat there," said Silas, decidedly. "And I don't see but what they had as good a meal as we've got, Mandy."

"Humph! Guess you better board there a while, Silas Peters," and Mrs. Peters rose from the breakfast-table.

"Any way," said Silas to himself, as he was harnessing his horse for church, "I'd rather just eat bread and milk for dinner if Mandy would only go with me once in a while. Yes, and for breakfast and supper too," he added, heroically. "There goes Tom Russell now, with his wife and baby. How happy he looks! and well he may, for he's got his wife. She goes 'most everywhere with him. I do wish Mandy would go with me. It seems kinder lonesome;" he mused, getting into the buggy with his two furbelowed children, and chirping to the old horse.

The women of the little hamlet of Ashville had followed strictly in their forefathers' (or rather foremothers') footsteps—tables crowded with every thing set on promiscuously—pickles, cheese and pie for breakfast, pie, cheese and pickles for dinner, and cheese, pickles and pie for supper. And at each "society" or tea party that was held, each lady tried to outdo the one before her. If Mrs. A. had three kinds of cake and two of pie, Mrs. B. would have four or five kinds of cake and three of pie, with perhaps tarts as an addition; while Mrs. C. would by no means diminish the quantity of pie and cake, but would also add dried beef, jelly, cheese, etc.

Elder Bishop's sermon that morning was excellent; so thought every one, with perhaps the exception of Silas Peters. He sat in his pew with his two children, but his eyes kept wandering to the Russell's pew.

"She's 'most as old as Mandy," mused he. "Mandy's a little past thirty, and Mrs. Russell, so Jim Snyder's wife said, is twenty-eight. She doesn't look worried; no wrinkles or lines. Poor Mandy! May be I haven't helped her as much as I might. Mrs. Russell looks so happy and contented. Wonder if she had as much to do as Mandy this morning?" as a sudden thought struck him.

After service, he returned home to find a clean house, beautifully shining stove and a delicious dinner; but a worried and irritable wife.

"It's been so warm," she said; "it tired me all out cleaning up. I haven't sat down a minute since you've been gone;" with the air of a martyr who faces duty at whatever cost.

form, principally gold lace. You must know that her parents were inimical to me, so of course I looked upon them as heartless and sordid beings, whose lives I would spare a little longer in consideration of their daughter, the sun-kissed peach that by some unaccountable freak of nature had ripened on a crab-apple tree.

"I determined on a whaler. Aha! That was my grand opportunity. A three years' voyage would do the whole business. I secretly resolved not to write home, though what I expected to accomplish by that I do not recollect. I have an idea, though, that the dear girl for whom I was to carve out a blubber fortune was to mourn me as one dead; that I would return home bronzed and bearded, indulge in a vast quantity of nautical talk incognito, and in the end disclose myself as her long lost love."

I smiled at the enthusiasm with which Traddles recounted the details of his boyish romance, so very like certain memories of my own; but he merely relighted his refractory cigar, and with his head enveloped in a fragrant blue cloud and his voice involuntarily taking on a gentler tone, resumed:

"For some reason now out of mind, the whaling expedition was abandoned, and the object of my heart's adoration was sent away to a boarding-school. I saw her put on board the train, and, as she was whirled into the distance, every roaring iron wheel ran over my heart. I remember that she had on her first long dress that day, and I can still see the crystal tears that stood on her cheeks when she turned on the platform and moved her lips in mute farewell to me. Oh! the letters we exchanged! I will not try to tell you what we wrote in that long separation. She was away one whole year, and when she returned I was gone from the village and had begun my tussle with the big world. There were no more whalers in it—for me; no gold lace, no romantic and magical acquisition of fame and wealth, but a very earnest, steadfast and plodding devotion to a very prosy and commonplace apprenticeship. At intervals the old dream recurred with painful fidelity, and, now and again, I was seized with spasms of unrest and discontent.

"In the pangs of them I labored chaotically with other grand schemes, one of which involved writing a book and sending a copy of it to my girl lover, with the 'author's compliments' on the fly-leaf. But that, and all my plans for similar grandeur, were rejected one by one in the press of immediate and hard necessity; and when, at the end of my apprenticeship, I went back to the old home for a brief visit, almost the first person I met was the original of the image I had carried in my heart during six mortal years."

"Dear me," I found myself saying (for the story had wrought upon me greatly), "what came of your reunion?"

"I am coming to that," was Traddles's reply, with the rapt manner and the far-away gaze of one whose vision is alight on the rainbow that always bends across the morning sky of life. "She had finished her school course, and been home I think about six months. When I spoke to her of our past and looked at my coarse clothes with a kind of sad humiliation (of which I am ashamed) she adroitly changed the subject. I saw her at church a few times after that, but—well, our story had been told and the volume was closed. The next time I left the village it was forever. About a year later some thoughtful friend sent me a newspaper containing an account of her marriage to the handsome son of the village storekeeper, whom I remembered as a lad chiefly by the circumstance that he always had his hair dressed with something agreeable that we less favored youngsters were unable to achieve."

"Have you ever met her since?" I asked, with genuine solicitude.

"Yes, once," he replied. "She chanced to be passing through the city in which I was living and stopped to spend a day with one of the companions of her boarding-school time. That was something like twenty years after I left the old home. I called on her and found a fine, matronly and most comfortable woman. Four sturdy boys hung over her with a fondness that was beautiful—not unlike the picture Miss Mulock drew of Edna Kenderdine and her sons, all proud of their mother and as careful of her as if they had been lovers. I loved those lads of hers, and told them so, much to their wonderment."

"But the mother: you surely—oh, Traddles!"

"I merely exchanged a few conventional and quite unmeaning commonplaces with her. There was no word of allusion to the romance that glorified our youth and to this hour tinges my life with a sweet melancholy, in which is more pleasure than pain. Good night."

Queer Scenes in a Maine Court.

The Skowhegan correspondent of the Fairfield Journal gives the following description of the homelike appearance of the Maine Suprome Court room during the present term of court: "Ladies in the gallery bring their needle-work and sit out the hours of the session. It is interesting to watch them threading needles, tying knots, basting, occasionally pausing to catch some portion of the evidence and again to confide in a neighbor something relative to some newcomer, interspersed with the slight click of the scissors, all of which tend to impress the lookers-on with the solemnity of the occasion and add perceptibly to the 'homelike' appearance of our judicial residence."

The Great Greenland Whale.

Few, even among the most thoughtful of the genus homo, ever stop to consider the immense size of the great Greenland or Bright whale (Balena mysticetus, L.). Nillson says that it will weigh over 100 tons. Just think of it, 220,000 pounds! At that rate the gigantic creature would outweigh 83 of the largest elephants or 500 grizzly bears. Sliced in chunks of 1,000 pounds each, his carcass would load a freight train of eleven cars to its fullest capacity. The whalebone in such a whale would weigh as much as three of the largest Norman horses, and his oil would fill 150 kerosene barrels

THE SEVENTY SENT OUT.

LESSON VIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 25.

Text of the Lesson, Luke x, 1-16—Commit Verses 8-11—Golden Text, Luke x, 11—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

Many things have transpired in the life of our Lord between the transfiguration and the sending out of these seventy. We will just indicate them and where they may be found. After they came down from the mount, He cast out a dumb spirit which the disciples could not cast out; He again foretold his violent death; He taught humility by the little child; He rebuked the disciples because they forbade one to cast out devils in Jesus' name, simply because he was not of their company; He journeyed through Samaria on His way to Jerusalem, but is rejected by the Samaritans; He talks to several who desire to follow Him. All this is briefly mentioned in Luke ix, 37-62. Matthew and Mark record some things more fully. But according to Mimpriss' Harmony we must insert between the 50th and 51st verses of Luke ix, the whole of Matt. xviii (which is peculiar to Matthew), and the whole of John vii, 2, to xi, 54 (which is peculiar to John).

1. "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place whither He Himself would come." In the previous chapter (v. 51) it is written that "When the time was come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem." It would seem, therefore, that the sending forth of these seventy was a last appeal ere His crucifixion.

2. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest." The same words concerning the greatness of the harvest and the need of laborers He spake before He sent out the twelve; and on another occasion He said "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (Matt. ix, 37; John iv, 35). Is not the same cry with greater power than ever wringing in our ears today? Open doors everywhere in all the world, but where are the laborers? True, there are more going forth than ever before; but one mission alone (the China Inland) is asking for 200 additional laborers a year for the next five years, to occupy in some measure the vast fields of China.

3. "Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves." Compare His instructions to these with His instructions to the twelve in Matt. x.

4. "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way." Carry no money, no food nor bag to put it in, no extra clothing. Have no anxiety about outfit or expenses; leave all that to the manager and proprietor who sends you. This is His affair, and He will take care of His workmen. Do not stop by the way for the sake of earthly friendships, or to do honor one to another; you are going forth to honor the King, and the King's business must be done quickly. None who go in His name, relying on Him, will lack any good thing. (Lu. xxii, 35; Ps. lxxxiv, 11; Rom. viii, 32.)

5. "And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house." He is the Prince of Peace; He is the Peace of God; He is our Peace when we receive Him (Isa. ix, 6; Phil. iv, 7; Eph. ii, 14), and the commission of all whom He sends is to preach peace by Jesus Christ (Acts x, 36; Rom. v, 1). Perfect peace is the privilege of all whose minds are stayed on Him, but it is His own peace, and can only come to a heart wholly subject to God in all things as His was (Isa. xxvi, 3; John xiv, 27).

6. "If the Son of Peace be there." They were not taught to expect a reception in every house.

7. "Eating and drinking such things as they give, for the laborer is worthy of his hire." When they found a welcome in any house, there they were to abide, and be content with such fare as might be provided, not running from house to house for the sake of receiving better fare. We are not to think too much of what we eat, but where we are welcome there receive and gratefully partake of whatever is set before us (I Cor. x, 27). The Lord hath ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel; and the laborer is worthy of his reward (I Cor. ix, 14; I Tim. v, 18).

8. "Whatsoever city." In verse 5 it was "whatsoever house." The whosoevers and whatsoevers of Scripture are a glorious study, and open wide the door to the unsearchable riches of Christ for all who are willing to enter in. God comes in mercy to cities, and households, and individuals, offering His love to all, but not forcing himself upon any. He gives the best He has, but leaves it to us to offer Him such as we choose.

9. "Heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The Kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." Blind eyes opened, deaf ears unstopped, lame people healed, no body sick, and all this in connection with the forgiveness of iniquity, were features of the Kingdom foretold by the prophets; and this did not refer to Heaven, but to the land and people of Israel (Isa. xxxv, 1-10; xxxiii, 20-24).

10, 11. "But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not." In obedience to Christ they were to go their way into the city proclaiming peace, but if that peace was rejected they were to go their way out of the city, wiping its very dust from their feet, and at the same time assuring the city that the kingdom of God had come nigh unto them.

12. "It shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom than for that city." At least two things are clear from this statement: the people of Sodom have yet to come into judgment; and punishment at that time will be in proportion to past privileges and opportunities which have been slighted. For those who knew and did not, there shall be many stripes; while for those who knew not and did not there shall be few stripes (Luke xii, 47, 48).

13. "Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida!" Similar words had He used on a previous occasion; and at another time He had said that the men of Nineveh and the Queen of the South would rise in judgment against that nation (Matt. xi, 20-24; xii, 41-42). He says these things at this time, no doubt, to impress upon the seventy the importance of their mission, and the awful responsibility resting upon those who might reject them. Many who are to-day in lands where the gospel has never come would gladly receive it if it were brought to them. In how much worse case, then, is the one who has heard the gospel and rejected it than the one who has never heard it!

14. "It shall be more tolerable * * * at the judgment." This gives the meaning of "that day" in verse 12; it is the judgment day to which He refers, and He who speaks will be the Judge. The day and the Judge are both appointed (Acts xvii, 31), and all believers should, in view of those facts be preaching repentance to all others, if by all means we may save some (I Cor. ix, 22). Be careful to distinguish between the judgment of believers for service and rewards; the judgment of living nations when Christ shall come in power and glory to rebuild Zion, and the judgment of the rest of the dead at the great white throne a thousand years later

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Bright's Disease Cured!

About two years ago our daughter had congestion of the kidneys, which developed into Bright's Disease. Her body was swollen to an enormous size—measuring 45 inches around the waist, and 18 inches below the knee. After physicians had given up her case I determined to have her try Dr Kennedy's of Rondout, N. Y. Gradually the swelling was reduced from 45 to 29 inches. She began to gain strength and was able to walk without fatigue. We do not know how to express our gratitude for what it has done for our child. We are confident the Favorite remedy will do all that is claimed for it—surely God has blessed it in this case, and we earnestly recommend it to all suffering from kidney disorders.—S. D. VanDuskirk, Demarest, N. J.

The Clinton Local has changed hands, Mr. J. R. Blanchard being the purchaser. Mr. Blanchard has moved the same in the Keyes building, corner of Chicago and Tecumseh streets. The paper will be edited under the same name as before. J. R. is a hustler and we trust he will make a thriving editor.

A couple of bad Clinton youngsters and a chap named Quart Bottle, the other evening took a horse and buggy from the barn of Ed. Smith, swapped the buggy for a cart at the livery stable, "busted" the cart in the country, returned with another conveyance and finally replaced the horse in Smith's barn. We hear of no arrests. Everything over there appears to be as free as the air and water. If you want anything, help yourself, and if you see what you want, don't ask for it—take it.—Adrian Press.

The building of a new railroad from Toledo to Chicago may induce the Lake Shore to complete the old Canada Southern from Fayette west. Indications point that way now.

A Macon fishing party, who the other day went up to the Tecumseh dam to fish, returned home with the rema of a box of herring. The dam didn't bite that day.—Adrian Press.

The Dundee Reporter started on its 14th year last week. May its birthdays come along regularly for the next thousand years; and may it be always run on Carr time.—Milan Leader.

A big refrigerator factory is Ann Arbor's latest prospective manufacturing enterprises. Ann Arbor is bound to have a boom and they don't make much noise about it either.—Saline Observer.

An Adrian drug clerk had a corn which so troubled him that he had the toe cut off. It is said he sent the toe, corn and all, to his best girl, with a polite note telling her to step upon it to her heart's content.—Hudson Post.

The moustache has "riz" in value in Brooklyn. One of our citizens and a travelling man were induced to part with theirs last Saturday for $1. They would probably give more than that to-day to call them back again.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Luce's minstrels, who were to exhibit in Dundee last week, collapsed at Saline. The proprietor skedaddled with the money bag, and the hat was passed about the town to raise funds with which to get the members out of town.—Dundee Reporter.

The Addison saloons are not doing business, and yet the Courier remarks that "large snakes are unusually numerous this spring." What doth it profit a man that the saloons be closed so long as he continues to have delirium tremens?—Adrian Press.

There's a new industry been started at North Adams. An enterprising citizen of the town has engaged in the raising of young alligators for ladies' bustles; that is, if they are not for that purpose, they must be for a dude's necktie, as they are good for nothing else.—Reading Telephone.

"Why not take in the Washtenaw press?" asks the Ann Arbor Argus, referring to the proposal for a Lenawee and Hillsdale press reunion, at Devil's Lake. Certainly there would be no objection. It is believed the Washtenaw members of the profession are free from cutaneous or other communicable discomforts. Our vote is for Washtenaw.—Adrian Press.

Addison is well located for a canning factory, both as concerns convenience in procuring fruit and making shipments, and a little effort on the part of our citizens might possibly induce some one familiar with the industry to locate here. The benefits arising from such an institution would be very beneficial alike to farmers and wage workers.—Addison Courier.

S. Milo Dole, well and favorably known as one of Lenawee county's best job printers, has taken charge of the Messenger job work. Mr. Dole was for a long time foreman in the Press job rooms, but for the past year he has held a position on the Detroit Free Press. The Messenger congratulates itself on being able to secure so competent a foreman and the many friends of himself and estimable family will be glad to welcome them back to old Lenawee.—Michigan Messenger.

The bicyclist is on top in Adrian. That is, he is sometimes on top and sometimes vice versa. A second ward bicyclist came rushing along the pavement and yelled at Alderman Stearns to "get out!" He didn't "get." He weighed more than the bycyclist and his machine and he knew it. There was a collision, and after the wheel man gathered himself up he was compelled to admit that the sidewalk belongs to pedestrians.—Michigan Messenger.

SIX ROUND GLOVE CONTEST

In the Forest City Between Warren and Foley.

CLEVELAND, O., May 19.—A large crowd witnessed the six round glove contest at the Academy of Music between Tommy Warren, the feather weight champion, and and Larry Foley of Boston. Warren was in good condition and weighed 121 pounds, while Foley was fleshy and tipped the scale at 128 pounds. Warren did most of the leading and had considerably the best of the first two rounds. He rained a shower of blows on Foley's head and neck in the third round, and before the call of time succeeded in knocking his man over the ropes by a vicious right hand upper cut. Foley, however, got his second wind in the succeeding round and held his own to the close, and in the last round, by a well directed left hander, he brought a stream of blood from his adversary's nose. The crowd was enthusiastic.

After the match Sam Eaton, a local feather weight, challenged Warren to a finish fight, to take place within three weeks, each man to weigh 120 pounds. Warren accepted, and the men will meet today to sign articles.

Work of Irrigation.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—In a few days the work of irrigating the lands surveyed under the arid land law will be completed by the general land office. The list of these lands embraces portions of 1228 townships, principally in Idaho and Montana, with small areas in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. The land is equal to 900 townships or about 21,000,000 acres. Not only are the sites for reservoirs, ditches or canals included in these surveys, but also, as the law of October 2d, 1888, is at present interpreted, all the lands made susceptible of irrigation by such ditches or canals. The surveys are by no means complete, but the work is now being done to the areas which those surveys will bring within the operation of the arid land law. Before the lists are finally approved, however, the Attorney General is expected to render his decision giving his construction of the law, and it is possible that under this decision a smaller portion of the public domain will be withdrawn for settlement than is contemplated by the construction now placed on the act. The surveys in the southern portion of the region are not yet completed, but it is expected that a very large proportion of the public domain will be brought under the operation of the law.

A WISCONSIN COUNTY

His accomplice, Joseph Gautier, who was his dupe, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,250 and to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for six months. He paid his fine and the sentence of imprisonment was suspended. Mrs. Frances Otter, through whom they secured the pension was discharged on consideration of her having turned state's evidence.

THREE MEN KILLED

Instantly by a Locomotive Boiler Explosion.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 19.—Three men met instant death near Danville by the explosion of the boiler of a locomotive drawing a freight train. The train, which was between Paris and Erin on the Louisville and Nashville Railway was going up the grade between Danville and Gravel Pit when the explosion occurred. The accident was caused by stay bolts giving out. The engine was thrown from the track. Five cars loaded with merchandise were demolished and Matt Conners, the engineer, Geo. Stull, fireman, and Jock Wheatley, brakemen were killed.

Chicago Tie-Up of Waiters.

CHICAGO, May 19.—The threatened "tie up" of the big hotels by the waiters may occur today affecting the Palmer, Grand Pacific, Tremont, Briggs, Commercial, Southern, Woodruff and Columbia. A member of the executive committee of the Culinary Alliance said that a general movement on all these tables would be made Monday. The committeemen, he said, had reached the conclusion that the hotel keepers were putting them off for the purpose of preparing to defeat them. Monday the committee would make a final demand, and if refused a general strike would follow at once.

Order of Honor Collapses.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 19.—The United Order of Honor, whose affairs have been in the hands of Receiver Bradley for some months, was completely wiped out when the Receiver submitted his report. He showed that there were debts aggregating $50,000, but he was only able to collect $1,190 all told. The court allowed the attorney in the case $500, and the Receiver the remainder. After paying the court expenses the creditors get nothing. The order was once in a very flourishing condition.

Cleveland Club Ruction.

CHICAGO, May 19.—Secretary George Munson of the St. Louis Brotherhood park, who has been in the city for several days, was seen yesterday and promptly denied the story sent from St. Louis that negotiations were pending for a transfer of the Cleveland club to Brotherhood park in St. Louis. Munson says that he is through forever with Von der Ahe and would not have anything to do with a club in which the "boss manager" was interested.

Another Clan-na-Gael Conspirator in the Pen.

JOLIET, ILLS., May 19.—Jerry O'Donnell, the ex-deputy sheriff who conspired with Graham and others to corrupt the Cronin jurors, was received at the penitentiary and entered upon his three year term, thus adding one more to the Clan-na-Gael colony now behind the bars. O'Donnell was put to work in the wire mill.

will wash clothes, will clean house—will do it well—will save you time; labor; wear and tear; will reduce drudgery; will not hurt your hands, your clothes or paint, and besides will cost you no more than common bar soap. One honest trial will prove all that.

Why not accept the testimony of the millions who use it as proof of its virtue. Among your friends you'll find those who have used Pearline for years—ask them—they will tell you "can't do without it."

Beware Pearline is the original Washing Compound—used by millions, but imitated by thousands who peddle their stuff or give worthless prizes. Pearline is never peddled, but sold by all grocers. 151 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

State W. C. T. U. Convention.

The convention of the State W. C. T. U., held at Jackson May 20 to 24, was unusually large and interesting.

It was held in the M. E. church, the largest in the city, and at times even that was inadequate to the demand. To those who think the organization is discouraged, or even taking a backward step, we would say: It would only need information such as could have been received by an attendance on the meeting to dispel all such thoughts.

There has been an increase of membership and interest over any other year, and the treasurer reports $12,627.23 expended for temperance work, and of the forty departments all were well represented. Seldom is it that a convention could be prepared to give three as able lectures as were given by D. Annie Shaw, Miss Frances Willard and Geo. W. Bain; all of which drew crowds of people who were unable to get in.

Mrs. Lathrop was re-elected president for the tenth time, and was the recipient of many elegant presents. The waving of handkerchiefs and joyful greetings given Miss Willard when ever she appeared proved that she has lost none of the power due her as not only national, but world's President, of this grand organization.

Facts Worth Knowing

In all diseases of natal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes becaus they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

A Dressmaker's Experience.

DEAR SIR:—As Mr. Hinman, the druggist told you I am a great friend of your remedy. I have used it at intervals during the past 12 years. It carried me safely through the critical period of life without a single sick day and it did great things for me in many ways.

I always recomend it where I see a case that needs it. It always does ever claimed for it, and more than any one would readily believe who did not personally know the cases.

I now consider my self well, but I work hard at my business—dressmaking—and when I am tired and nervous a small dose of Zoa-Phora quiets and rests me. I always have it in the house.

Yours truly.

DEATH OF W. E. RANDALL.

Many of our older residents will remember W. E. Randall who lived here in an early day in the house now occupied by Albert Brewer. He moved to LaPorte, Ind., Shortly before the war, where he has since resided. From the Daily Herald of last Friday we clip the following obituary notice. Those who knew him here will echo the good words spoken of him and will learn of his death with sincere sorrow.

The funeral of Mr. W. E. Randall took place this afternoon from the late home of deceased. It was largely attended by the friends and acquaintances of the family. Rev. T. F. Houts, pastor of the New Church, officiated, assisted by Judge Andrew, both of whom delivered beautiful and appropriate remarks. The old choir of the New Church furnished the music, which was in keeping with the remainder of the service. The pall bearers were Dr. Crandall, Polaski King, Harvey Truesdell, L. D. Webber, H. L. Weaver and F. Baumgartner. The remains were conveyed to Pine Lake cemetery. Mr. Randall was one of our best citizens—a modest, sensible, good man. We do not believe he had an enemy in the world. That was not because he was not a man of convictions, but because he was well-poised—had tact—because he loved the Lord and his neighbor.

There are two forms of chronic rheumatism: one in which the joints are swollen and red without fever; in the other the joints are only stiff and painful. In either form Salvation Oil may be relied on to affect a cure. It kills pain. 25 cents.

Have used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for croup and colds, and declare it positive cure. Contributed by Wm. Kay, 570 Plymoth Ave., Buffalo, N.Y.

The Burdock Plant is one of the best diuretics or Kidney regulators in the vegetable world, and the compound known as Burdock Blood Bitters is unsurpassed in all diseases of the kidneys, liver and blood.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAY 29

Ben Butterworth talks a good deal better than he votes.

Decoration day is more universally observed this year than ever before, and it is well that it should be so.

The unterrified Democracy can celebrate the "glorious fourth" this year with more than usual enthusiasm.

J. V. Farwell, one of the merchant princes of Chicago, and a life long Republican, is a violent opponent of the McKinley bill.

The McKinley bill was put through the House with a rush. A revolt was threatened, but Speaker Reed and his new rules squelched it.

The McKinley bill has gone through the House. Two months hence, we can write it: The McKinley bill has "gone up" in the Senate.

If Senator Quay is permitted to run the Republican party two years longer, they will wish he had committed suicide when he wanted to.

In Vice-President Morton's "Shoreham," it can be had in the original packages or broken, as customers prefer, at twenty cents a drink.

There will be a hot fight in the Senate over the McKinley bill. Ex-Speaker Carlisle will lead the tariff reformers and he will make the fur fly.

The dedication of the Garfield Monument will take place to-morrow at Cleveland, Ohio. The ceremonies will be the most imposing ever seen in the West.

Mr. Butterworth's masterly speech has carried dismay into the camp of the high taxers. It sounded the bugle call of a revolt that will make itself felt in the Senate.

The Democrats put in some good work last week. They promoted John G. Carlisle to the Senate and sent Richard Vaux to the House from Sam Randall's old district.

It is now Senator Carlisle of Kentucky. That state has had many famous men in public life, but she never sent an abler man to Washington than John G. Carlisle.

The importers of New York city, regardless of party, are dancing on the McKinley bill. They are apparently waking up to the fact at last, that somebody voted wrong in 1888.

Ex-Senator Chas. W. Jones, of Florida, whose erratic course in Detroit during the past two years has excited so much comment, has been adjudged insane and sent to a private asylum.

The absurdity and fraud of the new sugar schedule are becoming more and more apparent. Raw sugar is placed on the free list, but the duty on refined sugar is increased and the sugar trust will wax fatter than ever.

Carlisle is a very useful democrat just now. Having done his best to prevent the passage of the iniquitous tariff bill in the house, he will next have a chance at it in the senate. And he is a man who loses no chances.

Mr. Clarkson bewails the fact that so many Republicans are reading tariff reform newspapers. The remedy is very simple. Let the Republican papers talk tariff reform for a few months and see how their lists will grow.

Editor Dana of the N. Y. Sun is getting facetious in his old age. He says: The House talked tariff. The Hon. Julius Caesar Burrows, better known as the Calliope of Kalamazoo, spoke his tariff speech, and is said to feel better.

From a partisan point of view merely, the Democracy can wish Major McKinley all success in his new tariff venture. If that bill should become a law in its present shape, it would produce a political revulsion such as this country has never known since the hard cider campaign of 1840.

The government storehouse scheme looks very plausible at first sight, but it is wrong in principle, for it makes the government a partner in private business. It would also be utterly impracticable, for it would entail an immense expenditure of money that would bankrupt the government.

CURRENT COMMENT.

"HERE WE ARE AGAIN."

Once more the Republican party is coming before the country with a geographical tariff, a geographical census, and a touching appeal to the country to forget sectionalism and spell nation with an upper-case N.—Louisville Times.

IT WILL PARALYZE INDUSTRY.

The Republicans are advertising a policy and a program that will paralyze business in the South, unnerve the hand of enterprise, and bring the progress and development of the section to a standstill. That is what the statesmen of the Republican party offer to the country—the paralysis of industry.—Atlanta Constitution.

HE SAW HIS MISTAKE.

"Take that back, sir," said the maid sternly, as he placed a two-by-four kiss upon her lips. The newspaper instinct of the bold reporter for the moment got the best of him and he exclaimed defiantly: "I never take anything back." However, he saw his mistake immediately and made ample amends.—Chicago Times.

NERO FIDDLED WHILE ROME BURNED.

First, at the township elections in Indiana, the Harrison Administration was decisively repudiated. And now, at the city elections, held on Tuesday, the repudiation was made still more emphatic. The Democratic gains are positively startling. But Mr. Reed and his Washington orchestra keep on fiddling, just as if nothing had happened in Mr. Harrison's State.—Philadelphia Record.

THEY KNOW A GOOD THING.

Five wool-growers met in state convention at Indianapolis recently and enthusiastically endorsed the McKinley bill. The farmers seem to know a good thing when they see it and appear to be arising to the occasion with the spontaneity and wild enthusiasm displayed by the London populace in Shakespeare's play when they demanded that Richard III. should assume the crown for the safety of the state.—Chicago Times.

MCKINLEY'S INDISCREET ADMISSION.

Lamp chimneys are in universal use, and chiefly among people of small means. Yesterday in the House Mr. McKinley was compelled to acknowledge that the Ways and Means Committee had no data when the increase was made to justify it. Apparently the Committee was guided solely by the demands of a few manufacturers, greedy for extortionate profits, to be wrung from consumers.—Newark Journal.

A CUT-THROAT POLICY.

The Republicans of both House and Senate have now voted to deny the right of trial by jury where the property rights of an American citizen are involved under the tariff laws. The theory of the Republican customs administration bill is that anyone who wishes to bring property into this country from abroad in spite of the tariff prohibition is an outlaw, who can be punished without the formality of a trial.—St. Louis Republic.

NOT BELSHAZZAR'S EQUAL.

Ex-Governor St. John is too complimentary when he dubs Mr. Harrison Belshazzar. Not True. Mr. Harrison has been weighed in the balance and found wanting, and if his eyes are not shaded completely by the brim of his grandfather's hat, he has seen the writing on the wall. But Belshazzar was a great man in his day, and it took a special dispensation of the Lord to squelch him. Benjamin is running himself into the ground without assistance.—Chicago Herald.

TREASON RIGHT IN THE FAMILY.

It might have been well for Mr. Clarkson to qualify his appeal to Republicans to read only Republican newspapers. The three most influential organs of the grand old party in the West are the Chicago Tribune, St. Paul Pioneer Press and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, all of which are now engaged in decrying Administration measures. They do not approve of the McKinley Tariff bill, and have used some very plain and even threatening language in regard to it, and the Pioneer Press is absolutely flat-footed in its denunciation of the Silver bill. Does Mr. Clarkson want the Republicans of the West to pin their faith to these papers?—Chicago News.

NO REMNANTS WILL BE LEFT.

Thomas Cæsar Reed is gradually coming out of the fog as the Republican Presidential candidate in 1892. He is just the kind of a man to lead a forlorn hope. The G. O. P. is standing on the ragged edge of despair. It has been whipped out of its high-tariff fortifications; its Civil Service bulwark is a ruin; there is naught left it but the Southern outrage citadel, and to that it is already retreating. The ensanguined garment has been run up. It will be a battle to the death, and as Reed is a desperate fighter and a firm believer that the end always justifies the means, he may be put in command of the donjon keep. If so, 'twill be a pretty fight. But when 'tis ended the power of the Republican party will take its place among the things that were.—Houston Post.

GOV. LUCE AND THE TARIFF.

It is very much to be feared that our farmer-Governor has not kept the run of agricultural opinion with that accuracy which used to be his best hold, so to speak. When he says that they trace their troubles to the combinations and trusts he is "very warm," as the boys say in one of their games, but when he intimates that they do not know that the tariff is responsible for the combinations and trusts he is "away off." The farmers have been pretty successfully hoodwinked in the past in respect to this matter, and it would undoubtedly please the Governor—as a politician—that they should continue to be hoodwinked; but it will not do for him—as a politician—to deceive himself with the notion that they are still in the dark.

The mild winter has been turned to good account by the farmer in reflecting on the causes of the low prices for everything he has to sell, and continued high prices for everything he has to buy, and the evidence is abundant that he has reached a good many conclusions which are unacceptable to his protectionist advisers. He has found out, for one thing, that the high freights which lower the price of his grain are largely due to the increased cost of railroad building occasioned by railroad combinations which would have been impossible but for the tariff. He has found out, moreover, that the short foreign demand for his products can also be traced to the war tariff, with its notifications to the outside world to buy of those who will take in exchange what it has to sell. In a word he has advanced far beyond the stage where he can be deceived by the fairy tale the Governor tells about a combination between millers and exporters.—Detroit Free Press.

THE MILLERS AND THE TARIFF.

The Tri-State Millers' convention which met in Fort Wayne a few days ago unanimously passed resolutions denouncing part of the McKinley tariff bill. The part of the bill which they denounce interests farmers as well as millers. It is the placing of a specific tariff duty of 1¼ cents a pound on jute burlap and 2 1-10 cents a pound on manufactured jute bags. The resolutions state that it would require 14,000,000, of 140 pound sacks to carry the flour exported during the past ten months and "the specific tax of 2 1-10 cents per pound would cost the millers of the United States the sum of $3,040,000 in ten months for the support of the petty manufacturers of jute bagging." The resolution reads:—Resolved, That the millers of Ohio, Indiana and Michigan denounce with words of no uncertain meaning the injustice of this proposed enactment, which would enable the three jute manufacturers of this country to rob the farmers and millers of America.

As we stated before these resolutions were passed unanimously. We have heard what the millers think of this portion of the tariff. The farmers are also interested. What do they think of it?—Ann Arbor Argus.

PRETTY BADLY RATTLED.

Among the unique things in present political literature are the comments of party organs on the House tariff bill. The Toledo evening organ which has reprinted so much tariff-primer literature from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Chicago Inter-Ocean utters a few words of editorial commendation which may be original. Of the wisdom of the committee in placing sugar on the free list it says:

This action will crush the sugar trust, and reduce the price of sugar and molasses to every consumer. The bill proposes to give a bounty of two cents a pound to sugar growers at home. This will cost something like $7,000,000 per annum, while the wiping out of the revenue duty on sugar will relieve the people of the payment of between fifty five and sixty millions a year on sugar. This action was wise and we are glad to see so decided a step taken by the committee.

According to this showing, the republican masters who have gone up and down the land, proclaiming that protection and trusts are in no way related were falsehoods. To remove the protective tax will crush the trust. Why wouldn't it be a good way to crush other trusts that are oppressing the public? Not only this, but it "will reduce the price of sugar and molasses to every consumer."—Toledo Bee.

GOOD MAY COME OF IT.

The Republican victory in 1888 may turn out the best luck for tariff reform. It was bought by Pennsylvania money and made the Protective Tariff League and the politicians in their pay drunk. It led them to believe that the country would stand anything. It put into their heads the error that buncombe and bribery would forever do the work of carrying elections. In that belief they prepared a bill which concentrated all the viciousness of prohibitive protection. They prepared it at a time when the country was aroused and enlightened. Mr. Butterworth's speech is the clearest evidence that the popular temper is gathering for an outburst.—Kansas City Times.

MONTANA, OREGON, WASHINGTON.

A correct map of the north west will show that the Northern Pacific Railroad traverses the central portion of Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington for a distance of nearly 2,000 miles; it is the only Railroad reaching Jamestown, Bismarck, Miles City, Billings, Livingston, Bozeman, Missoula, Cheney, Davenport, Palouse City, Sprague, Ritzville, Yakima, Ellensburg, Tacoma, Seattle and in fact nine-tenths of the north west cities, towns, and points of interest.

The Northern Pacific is the shortest trans-continental route from St. Paul and Chicago, to Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, Spokane Falls, Walla Walla, Dayton and Portland, and the only one whose through trains reach any portion of the new state of Washington. Land seekers purchasing Pacific Coast second class tickets via St. Paul and Northern Pacific have choice from that point of free Colonist Sleeping Cars, or Pullman's Tourists Furnished Sleepers at charges as low as the lowest.

For the benefit of settlers the Northern Pacific also gives a ten days stop over privilege on second class North Pacific Coast tickets at Spokane Falls and each and every point west, including over 125 stations in Washington, thus enabling persons seeking a home to examine this vast territory without incurring an expense of from $5.00 to $25.00 in traveling on local tickets from point to point.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

NEW YORK AROUSED.

IMPORTERS EARNESTLY PROTEST AGAINST THE M'KINLEY BILL.

A Notable Gathering of All Importing Trades—Pointing Out the Iniquity of the Proposed Tariff.

The New York importing merchants have protested against Mr. McKinley's high flying tariff bill with an emphasis that cannot be mistaken. A meeting of the entire importing trade was held, which was perhaps the largest and most earnest meeting that was ever held against any tariff bill in our history.

The different kinds of importing merchants had sent representatives to see Mr. McKinley in Washington, but could effect nothing with him.

One of the speakers at this New York meeting told how McKinley treats importers: "McKinley asks you if you are an importer, and if you say you are he greets you with a pitying smile. You are the man he is gunning for. Because you are an importer you are not entitled to his or any man's decent consideration. You have no right to be an importer. Importers are thieves. Well, now, I think it is high time this feeling was changed. It is time McKinley was given to understand that he is laying his prentice hand with unhallowed touch upon the commerce of this country. He should understand that if there have been dishonest men among the importers, there have also been boodlers among the politicians. Commercial trade is an honorable calling, fit for the highest forms of American manhood, and politics is not its superior. We must stand together now and assert our rights and our dignity against those who threaten us." This speech was warmly applauded and evidently expressed the feelings of the assembled merchants.

The object of the meeting was stated to be to unite the voices of all the different departments of the import trade into one grand protest, which might prove more effective than the separate protests which have been disregarded so coolly by Mr. McKinley.

The meeting was in no sense a partisan gathering—Republicans, Democrats and Mugwumps met together on the common ground that they are merchants whose business is threatened with ruin by a law brutal and unjust to the last degree. One of the most effective speeches was made by a pronounced Republican, who said he had always voted his party's ticket. He was emphatically opposed to Mr. McKinley's tariff measure, and thought that if it became a law it would disturb business, threaten many industries and vastly increase the cost of living, without conferring any general benefits upon the country. He could not, however, believe that his party in congress would pass such a measure; he thought that this meeting would be listened to by the grand old party; and this was the kind of sunshine which the speaker hoped was beaming, "somehow, somewhere behind this black cloud."

The men who attended this meeting were the representatives of persons known all over America and Europe. It will afford an idea of their commercial importance when it is stated that they handle over $200,000,000 worth of goods of all kinds every year. The chairman of the meeting was Mr. James M. Constable, of the well known firm of Arnold, Constable & Co., who made a forcible speech on taking the chair. He showed in a very striking way what the disastrous effects of the McKinley bill would be. "The burdens of this new tariff," he said, "would fall heavily upon the great mass of the producing workers of the country; farmers are required under it to buy all their clothing, implements, supplies—everything they do not raise for themselves, at high rates of duty, while they are required to sell their surplus products at prices controlled by free trade England. This is unfair, un-American and ought not to be."

Different speakers gave interesting details as to the enormous increase which the bill would cause on their lines of goods. One man showed that the increase of duty on hosiery would in some cases be almost double. With regard to woolens, cloakings and suitings, it was said that the proposed increase would in many cases prohibit the use of the article altogether and force people to the use of cheap substitutes. There is a single manufacturer of silk plushes in Philadelphia, in whose interest the duty on that article, which has entered so largely into consumption for women's cloaks, had been increased from 50 per cent. to 225 per cent.

The duties on wool were shown to be largely prohibitory, although we do not produce near enough ourselves to supply our manufactories.

Representatives of the glass and china ware trade showed that the duty on student lamp chimneys would, under the McKinley tariff and administrative bills, amount to over 450 per cent., and upon lamp shades, glass tumblers, china vases, and other china and glass ware to from 60 to 334 per cent., the duty on the same goods under the present law being 45 per cent.

As an example of how Mr. McKinley is disposed to make a law for the special benefit of a single individual one of the merchants stated that cocoa, of which there is a single large manufacturer in this country, whose income from his business reaches the millions, was increased from 2 1-2 cents to 3 cents per pound.

Another merchant spoke of linen. He said that there is only one manufacturer of linen in this country; but he had heard that an English syndicate wanted to go into the business here, and that this syndicate had gotten the ear of Mr. McKinley's tariff makers and had induced them to put the duties up to a point which would increase the revenue of the government from this single article from $29,000,000 to $45,000,000 a year.

On the whole the merchants made a strong showing up of the monstrosities of the bill; and the tariff tinkerers would do well to listen for the next news from New York.

MR. PORTER AND THE FARMERS.

Queer Statements Made by the Superintendent of the Census.

Mr. Robert P. Porter, amid the duties of his presumably non-partisan office, that of superintendent of the census, takes time to write for a high tariff organ a grossly partisan article about the farmers' interest in protection. When a man occupies a responsible position like this of superintendent of the census, where the value of his work depends wholly upon the people's confidence in his absolute fairness and impartiality, he ought never to discuss any party question in a partisan newspaper; or, if he must do so, he should have some regard for decency and dignity.

But Mr. Porter fails even in dignity. His anger against Tariff reformers prevents anything like the unbiased judicial tone which the people have a right to expect from their superintendent of the census. He denounces the reformers as "agitators and demagogues," as "purveyors of British economics" and as "free trade shouters." Of course Tariff reformers can stand Mr. Porter's wrath, can very easily stand it; but they do think it a pitiable spectacle to see an officer of the government, who above all things should be non-partisan, thus descend to the low claptrap of a political blatherskite.

But what is it all about?

It is the farmer again. Mr. Porter confesses that "the American farmer is just now passing through the gloomy valley of hard times;" and so the superintendent of the census comes to the farmer's rescue with his little table of figures to prove that the farmer is getting more advantage out of the tariff than anybody else.

What! the farmer "in the gloomy valley of hard times," and yet "the direct benefits he receives from the present tariff are far in excess of the benefits received by any other class!"

Those two statements will not stand together by any manner of means.

If the farmer is getting all this advantage "far in excess" of everybody else's, how does he happen to be in that "gloomy valley?"

No, no, Mr. Superintendent, there is a hitch somewhere in that.

The fact is, Mr. Porter's arithmetic is all wrong—so widely wrong that we can only hope that such arithmetic will not get into the census reports. He claims that the American farmer gets protection on imported agricultural products amounting to more than $250,000,000.

The first item in Mr. Porter's bill of particulars is sugar. We imported last year $93,000,000 worth of sugar, and our protectionist census maker has the coolness to set this down as protection to the farmer! For every Louisiana sugar planter who is protected there are not less than ten thousand farmers all over the land who are paying enormously high duties on sugar for his benefit. And yet these ten thousand are coolly told that this sugar duty is a protection for them! Why then does Mr. McKinley propose to remove that duty? Surely he is a friend to the farmer; for is he not engaged even now in making the farmer's tariff?

This sugar item is a fair sample of nearly all the other protection which Mr. Porter figures out for the farmer; it is all a cheap rigmarole of falsification. He writes down "fibers, animal and vegetable, $60,000,000." He says he does not include wool in this; but the treasury reports for last year show only $14,150,000 of such imports, not counting wool. The main items in the reports which could fall under this head are flax, hemp, jute, sisal grass, rags, shoddy and waste. Does the farmer think that these duties are of any advantage to him?

How utterly absurd!

Mr. Porter puts in "fruits, $19,000,000." Dutiable fruits are figs, oranges, lemons, limes, prunes, raisins, Zante currants, dates and pineapples. Mr. Porter has the impudence to put down these articles to the benefit of the farmer.

Farmer Jones, how is your pineapple crop?

Farmer Smith, how does your date orchard flourish?

Ah! Mr. Porter, you should not tell fibs to the farmers; or, if you must do so, make your fibs less transparent; they only "aggravate the farmer's grievances and intensify his tale of woe."

Not Settled Yet.

During the jubilation of the protectionists over their victory in 1888 they congratulated themselves that the question of protection had been passed upon and settled by the people for twenty-five years at least. Now, however, we have high protectionist authority to show that it was not protection at all that gave the Republicans their victory two years ago. The New York Tribune, which is the leading Republican paper in the United States, confessed several months ago that the success of its party was brought about by a trade in New York state, by which its local candidates were sacrificed in favor of its national ticket.

Representative Cheadle, a Republican member of congress from Indiana, offers a different explanation. In a recent speech in congress he says his party succeeded by reason of its liberal promises in the matter of pension legislation.

So here are two authorities who do not believe that the election of 1888 settled the tariff question "for twenty-five years at least." Their party seems to be of the same opinion, if one may judge by its frantic efforts to create new issues and by its desperate struggle to make a new tariff which will please everybody and thus remove the tariff for the present from politics.

All this effort to lug in the southern question and other issues is simply a sign of distress. The tariff question cannot be thrust into the background by raising the tariff wall still higher, as Mr. McKinley has done. So long as the tariff shoe pinches, the wearers of it will demand an easier shoe. The wearers of that shoe are finding it more and more uncomfortable, and Mr. McKinley's tariff bill will only serve a valuable purpose in making the shoe still tighter, and in hastening the time when we will cast it off for something better.

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangement are frequently taken without the least effect, because it is the liver which is the real source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. G. A. R. MEMORIAL DISCOURSE.

Delivered Last Sabbath Evening at the Presbyterian Church by the Pastor, Rev. William H. Babbitt.

TEXT:—"But call to remembrance the former days".—Hebs.-10:32.

Memorial days are not without their benefits. Our minds receive from them a fresh impress of truths which we are in danger of forgetting. As we are borne forward on the stream of time the events of the past, even the important ones, very naturally grow dim as we are separated from them. We need something to help us recall them and make them seem near again. Memorial seasons and memorial services have a tendency to produce this effect. They recall the scenes of the past and give us a new sense of the nobility of its sacrifices and the value of its achievements. The God who brought his people, Israel, out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, instituted a memorial service for them to observe with reference to their escape and said to them, "Thou shalt remember all the way by which the Lord thy God hath led thee." The Redeemer of the world gave to his disciples a simple service to observe in memory of his sacrifice of himself in their behalf and attached to it the command, "Do this in remembrance of me."

We are assembled here to-night to take a backward glance—to behold what God has wrought—and to recall how, by great sacrifices, a great country has been saved to freedom and to truth. Historical pictures, like those of Washington crossing the Delaware and the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, are of service in helping to keep the spirit of patriotism alive. Costly monuments that commemorate some grand event or some unusually noble, self-sacrificing life are not a waste of funds.

In one of our village parks here in Tecumseh there stands a granite soldier, on a granite pedestal. His lips move not to challenge us as we go by with a "who goes there?" But in his stony silence he speaks to us, nevertheless, of a memorable conflict thro' which this country was called to pass, nearly a generation ago. He tells us of the weary vigils and the many other forms of hardship it involved. He reminds us of the time when brother took up arms against brother and fields of carnage were thickly strewn with the dying and the dead; when war, with all its horrors, held high carnival in our land, and the hearts of the stoutest almost stood still over tragic tidings from the seat of strife. But he reminds us also of the return after weary waiting of a prayed-for peace—peace that gave assurance of an undivided country and of the triumphs of a government that had its foundations deeply laid on the firm corner-stones of liberty and law. Line upon line of instruction is needed to teach men how to lead righteous lives. If we are to be a God-fearing nation the children of the land must receive early, untiring instruction in matters of religious faith. In like manner, if the love of country is to bear rule in the hearts of our citizens, the spirit of patriotism must receive careful cultivation. The children must be taught to appreciate and admire the noble deeds and noble sacrifices to which the spirit of patriotism in former times has given rise. Macaulay, in his Lays of Ancient Rome, describes the bravery of Horatius in holding the Tuscans at bay at the head of the bridge over the Tiber, until it could be hewn down and the crossing over it of the enemy into Rome be prevented. He tells of the land that was given Horatius in reward of his services, and of the monument that was reared in memory of what he had done.

"They gave him of the Cornland,
That was of public right,
As much as two strong oxen
Could plow from morn to night.
And they made a molten image,
And set it up on high;
And there it stands unto this day,
To witness if I lie.

It stands in the Comitium,
Plain for all folks to see;
Horatius in his harness,
Halting upon one knee;
And underneath is written,
In letters all of gold,
How valiantly he kept the bridge,
In the brave days of old."

The services of those who have helped to preserve their country from threatened overthrow are deserving of public recognition, and as much so now as in the early days of Rome. If we have living among us survivors of an army that subdued by its bravery a formidable rebellion, aimed at the very life of our government, we ought to recognize the value of their services. Their declining days should be made bright with freely given demonstrations of grateful regard.

Small occasion has a nation or a people to celebrate victories which are merely those of conquest over a feeble power, and consequently no more than the triumph of might over right. This would be but a repetition of the glory of the big bully who has whipped the little boy and taken his apple from him. True religion has nothing, certainly, to do in the way of celebrating the successes of such ambitious leaders as Alexander, or Cæsar, or Napleon; as little as it had to do with the singing of Te Deums in the cathedrals of France on account of the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day. A house of worship ought never to be desecrated by the celebration of the triumph of a merely political party. But true religion very properly rejoices in the triumph of justice and of right. It gives thanks in view of the success of those great movements which have broken the bonds of the slave and in other ways brought substantial benefit to humanity. * * * * *

When dissension first began to lift its head against the general government, that President who won for himself the title of "Old Hickory" proclaimed in his emphatic way, "The Union shall be preserved." And in his day it was. One of the most distinguished statesmen America has ever produced uttered this earnest request to Heaven: "When my eyes shall be turned to behold, for the last time, the sun in Heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragments of a once glorious Union; on states dissevered, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood!" The prayer of this earnest friend of the Union was answered. The catastrophe which he so much deprecated did not come in his time. But not long after he had passed away the land was rent with civil feuds and it was drenched—yes, liberally drenched,—in fraternal blood. Who can look back on those terrible days from '61 to '65 without a shudder and a heartache?

Political parties will inevitably exist, in ordinary circumstances, under any popular form of government. But when the war for the preservation of our National life was begun all parties were merged for the time into one. The people rallied to the defense of the imperilled government. What armies were raised in those epoch making days! From field, from shop, from store, from office, from school, from college,—yea, from theological halls, where young men were preparing themselves to preach the Gospel of peace, the volunteers poured forth. What battles were fought by these gathered armies! The world had never seen any that were more hotly contested and scarce any involving greater destruction of life. For a weary season the issue of the conflict continued to be doubtful. At length the Emancipation proclamation came, and by and by the long looked for peace—peace which brought triumph to the Union cause. One of the results of this conquered peace is that our land does not hold and cannot hold any more a person that does not own himself. This land is now all free, and all free for every color and every race. In Saratoga, last Monday night, a popular meeting was held under the auspices of the Presbyterian General Assembly, now sitting there, in behalf of the Freedmen of the South. The meeting was addressed by several negro ministers, representatives of Presbyteries composed of negro Christians in the South. One of these, the Rev. Geo. Jones, a full blooded black man, spoke with wonderful effect. He said: "Virginia is responsible for my presence here to-night. Virginia is my motherland. Virginia! which was the mother of civil liberty and the mother of Slavery! The mother of George Washington, who fought for your liberty; and of Robert E. Lee, who fought against my liberty. There has been much talk about a scheme for having the negro emigrate or be emigrated. When I read of Mr. Morgan's plan, I could not realize that I was one of the people he talked of sending back to Africa. I am a Virginian. My father and mother, and their fathers and mothers before them, were sons and daughters of Virginia. At this moment a scene of my childhood rises to my mind. I can almost hear the blows rained upon the bare back of the mother that gave me birth. I see her sink under the whip of a cruel master. Then, as she meekly walked away, she opened her lips only to sing: "Nobody knows the trouble I see, nobody but Jesus; nobody knows the trouble I see, nobody but my Lord." My friends! Virginia, the mother of Liberty and the mother of Slavery, is still in the Union, but her last-named child is dead, and no more can any such cruel scene as that negro orator sketched take place anywhere beneath our flag. Our statute books are purged altogether of laws favoring slavery. All that can be found in them now are in favor of freedom. * * *

Soldiers of the Republic! How fares it with you in this warfare? Have you enlisted in it and are you getting the victory over your foes? The war for the Union is over. The toils and privations of the campaign exist no longer but in memory. The spiritual warfare is not yet over. It is going on all about us. Those who are conquering in it and those who are being conquered we meet every day. We ourselves are doing one thing or the other. There are some who have gotten the victory over the last enemy and have gone to wear the crown and enjoy the reward of the faithful. And everyone in this assembly is nearing the end of all earthly warfare and all earthly experiences. The end of all things seen is at hand, and when that comes visions of the things not seen will present themselves. What sort of a vision will then greet our eyes? And what kind of experiences will those be on which we then shall enter? There are attractive scenes and companionships this side the line that divides the present from the future, the temporal from the eternal. But after we have seen the fairest prospects here still it can be said: "There is a land immortal, the beautiful of lands." Ere we cross into that land a grim sentry, whose name is Death, will challenge us for the proper password into those realms of bliss. Have you that passport? This is it: "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." Remember it. Hold it fast. Give it as the utterance of your own convictions and your own heart. And the gates of pearl will open for you to enter into the City which hath foundations, into the society of the saved, into the presence of God.

SUPPLEMENT ADDENDA.

We were compelled to close the forms of our supplement sheet and put it to press Tuesday evening, and the few sketches that were not in type at that time are inserted below. We regret that we have been unable to make a complete canvass in the time at our command. Some parties were not at home when we called and a very few did not desire a notice, but the list as given includes all the principal business houses and manufactories, and represents pretty fully the business interests of Tecumseh as they exist to-day. It makes a splendid showing even as it stands. The Electric Light Co., and the Tecumseh Table Co., would have made two fine additions to the list, but we prefer not to anticipate. These enterprises will receive our attention a few weeks hence. The HERALD begins its forty first year with hearty thanks to its patrons for the generous patronage bestowed upon it in the past, and with full confidence that the ensuing year will response to it a more substantial growth than during any ten years of its previous history.

TEMPLE MCCLURE & CO.

The plant now controlled by this firm was established in 1866 by Slayton and Caldwell, who ran the shop four years. A. W. Slayton then bought out Mr. Caldwell and conducted the business alone for eight years. He sold to Temple and Hunter in 1878. Six months thereafter, I. C. Wolcott bought Hunter's interest and the firm name was changed to Wolcott and Temple. In 1882 Samuel McClure bought an interest, and the firm became Temple McClure and Co., which has been the title of the firm ever since. Van Gieson bought Wolcott's interest in 1885 and about eighteen months ago, Mr. Wolcott bought it back. The establishment was planted upon a stable foundation at the outset and has maintained a first class credit and a lucrative business ever since. They keep the largest stock of lumber in the rough to be found in Lenawee County, and their facilities for making sash, doors, blinds and other inside work are unsurpassed. Many of the finest buildings that have been erected in Northern Lenawee during the past twenty years have taken the lumber and finishings from this concern. The partners are all practical men in the business and are enjoying a healthy, steady and constantly increasing trade.

JAMES ELLIOTT.

Has been driving horse shoe nails just a quarter of a century and he is a young man yet. Fifteen years ago he opened a shop of his own, and has been forging ahead ever since. In addition to a general line of blacksmithing he makes a specialty of shoeing horses and has a big run of custom in that line. He is now domiciled in a new brick shop, one of the largest and most convenient in town. Jim is not only a good neighbor but a number one blacksmith. If you don't believe it, call around and try him.

WM. H. SPALDING.

Mr. Spalding began his trade as a tinsmith with Libbeus Drew just twenty years ago this spring. After Mr. Drew's death and the transfer of his business he worked for Sutton and Swan. He drifted west in 1878, and for the past twelve years has been working at his trade in Chicago and Milwaukee. Last January he returned to Tecumseh and on the first of February opened a tin shop in the second story of Albaugh's building. He gives attention to all kinds of tin and iron work, setting up furnaces, putting on tin roofs etc. He is an expert workman and has had his hands full from the day he opened his shop.

BENJ. F. REYNOLDS.

Mr. Reynolds was for many years the largest farmer in the township of Franklin. About twenty years ago he began the business of auctioneer and his ready tact and large acquaintance soon gained him a good run of custom. Ten years since he became a resident of the village and has continued to give his attention to auctioneering. His services are in great demand during the spring and fall seasons and his reputation is extending its boundaries every year. He frequently has calls from Washtenaw and Jackson counties, and the southern towns of Lenawee and occasionally visits Hillsdale and Monroe counties.

THEO P. WOOD.

Does not run a big store or factory, but in his line of business he is none the less a hustler. He has had many years' experience as a house painter and paper hanger and also gives his attention to sign writing. All kinds of lettering and gilding on cloth and the making of flags and banners are included in his work. He keeps a supply on hand of ornamental staffs and tips for banner trimmings. He also runs a general repair shop and can make over all furniture as good as new. And what is more to the point, whatever Theo does is done well.

WHITENACK & BORDINE.

The hardware business now conducted by this firm was founded by Geo. Curtis, was run by Curtis and Parsons for many years and then sold to D. W. Clark. John Whitenack purchased it of Mr. Clark in 1873, formed a partnership with J. M. Erskine and this firm continued till 1880. D. L. Whitenack and S. W. Bordine then bought Mr. Erskine's interest and for the past ten years they have been the practical managers of the house, although John Whitenack retained an interest until his death in January last. It is one of the most reliable firms on the street and has always enjoyed a heavy trade in the hardware line.

THE TECUMSEH NEWS.

This week's issue of the News is the 8th number of the 7th volume. Bro. Field came to Tecumseh six years and two months ago, comparatively a stranger, and in that short time he has gained an excellent business and social position. He is sound on the tariff question and sound on the local improvement question. He is a gentleman and a scholar and a tip-top local editor. Among our younger business men he has achieved a reputation, both professionally and personally, second to none. The HERALD cordially extends to him the right hand of fellowship, with the wish that he may live to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the News.

THE POST OFFICE.

As to the incumbents of the office prior to Polk's administration we have been unable to gather any reliable data. Evans, General Brown, Cousin Geo Spafford, S. C. Boughton, held it between 1824, the first settlement, and the election of Polk in 1844. Chas Hewitt was appointed by President Polk and held the place four years, S. B. Terry being deputy. Daniel Williams took the office in the year 1849, under President Taylor, and held it four years. Col. McNair served next for eight years under Pierce and Buchanan. Webb Anderson took the office under Lincoln and served about five years. Geo. T. Ketcham held the place a few months under Andy Johnson and he was succeeded by Col. Saviers, who served through Grant's two terms, and by E. A. Tribou, who served under Hayes. Fred Rosacrans was appointed by President Arthur and served four years. Judge Stacy was appointed by President Cleveland, and L. Loana Stacy, the present incumbent, succeeded him. Tecumseh has been exceedingly fortunate in her postmasters. In the long line of officials who have served the people in that capacity, from the days of Musgrove Evans till now, the office has been efficently managed. Who is to be the next fortunate? That is the problem which "no feller can find out" at present. We shall be able to give more definite information on this point at some future time.

As our friends are not fond of cyclones in any form, would it not be better to wait until all are agreed upon the subject matter before publishing the concluding number of the paper?

Going botanizing is a favorite pastime among our friends in the lower rooms, and certainly is not in the least objectionable when carried out in a proper manner. But when two of our seniors pretend they are going after flowers and ride over seven or eight miles of dusty road without once alighting from their carriage, we are afraid they are pursuing a study far removed from that of botany.

The House Subsides After the Tariff Fight

AND UNINTERESTING PROCEEDINGS DRAG ALONG.

The River and Harbor Bill Considered in Committee of the Whole—Senate Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 26.

QUIET sessions characterize the meetings of the House again now that the tariff bill is disposed of, and members seem to have so completely exhausted their oratory, that an operation something like that indicated in the sketch here given, would be necessary to produce a speech.

After routine business the House went into a committee of the whole on the River and Harbor bill, the pending question being the Hennepin canal proposition. It was discussed by Messrs. Rogers, Henderson, Blanchard, Hatch and motion to strike out was lost.

On motion of Mr. Henderson, of Illinois, an amendment was adopted reducing from $2,000,000 to $1,000,000 the appropriation for the improvement of the Mississippi from the head of the Passes to the mouth of the Ohio river. Mr. Boatner, of Louisiana, moved to strike out the proviso that no part of the appropriation for the Mississippi river shall be expended to repair or build levees for the purpose of reclaiming lands or preventing injury to lands or private property by overflow. Lost. Pending further action, the committee rose, public business was suspended at four o'clock, and the House proceeded to pay fitting tribute to the memory of the late David Wilder, of New York.

In the Senate Mr. Wilson of Iowa, asked and obtained unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, after the routine morning business, the bill subjecting imported liquors to the provisions of the laws of the several states shall be taken up and its consideration continued until disposed of. Mr. Blackburn presented the credentials of John G. Carlisle as senator from the state of Kentucky, for Mr. Beck's unexpired term, which commenced on March 4, 1889. They were read and placed on file.

J. G. CARLISLE.

The naval appropriation bill was taken up, the pending question being on the amendment reported from the committee on appropriations—to strike out the item of $50,000 for improvement of the plant at Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard. The discussion continued at length. The amendment was disagreed to—yeas 18, nays 29. So the item remains in the bill, amended, however, by striking out the words "building" and before the words "repairing iron and steel ships."

The question was then taken on the item for the Boston navy yard (similarly amended) and the item was continued in the bill, the vote to strike out being—yeas 15, nays 31. On motion of Mr. Cameron a like item of $50,000 was inserted for the League Island yard, with the additional words: "Which yard is hereby reopened for the repair of vessels of the navy."

On motion of Mr. Allen, an item was inserted for the appointment of a commission of two officers, one army officer and two civilians to select a suitable site for a dry dock on the coast of the Pacific, or of the waters connected therewith, north of the forty-second parallel, including the waters of Puget Sound.

Mr. Hoar offered an amendment appropriating $50,000 for providing ordnance, arms, ammunition and equipments for issue to the navy militia, and authorizing the secretary of the navy to establish rules for its organization. After some discussion, and in consequence of a statement that the subject was under consideration by the navy department and by the committee on naval affairs, Mr. Hoar withdrew the amendment.

Mr. Cockrell moved to strike out the provision for the three sea-going coast-line battle-ships, not to cost more than four millions each. He said that he saw no reason for such an immense expenditure. The United States was a peaceful and a peaceable nation. Hale asked how "the power of the United States" was a preventive of war, if that power was not put into shape. How would the power of the United States be exercised if the United States had no army or navy—especially no navy.

Mr. Cockrell—The senator admits that we have the power, does he not?

Mr. Hale—No, I do not. We have undoubtedly the means to construct a navy that would be in itself (that is its great object) a moral force that would be a deterrent to war. But I do not admit that the mere undeveloped power is of any account. It is only a temptation.

A FAST TRAIN.

George Francis Train Beats Nellie Bly's Time.

TACOMA, WASHINGTON, May 26.—George Francis Train stepped from a Union Pacific train at 6:45 p. m., completing the fastest trip ever made around the world. He was gone 67 days, 13 hours and 3 minutes. His actual traveling time was 36 hours better, he having stopped that length of time in New York. He was in a great rage because some one robbed him at Huntington, Ogden yesterday morning of $600, and because the Tacoma people did not furnish him a special train from New York to Tacoma over the Northern Pacific.

AFTER B. & O.

Somebody Gathering Up the Loose Stock.

ROBERT GARRETT.

BALTIMORE, May 26.—The efforts being put forth to get possession of a controlling interest of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad stock continues to be the subject of much gossip. It is alleged in some quarters that the large stockholders are endeavoring to buy up all the stock they can lay their hands on in order to secure complete control [illegible] In other quarters it is alleged that while this may be true, it is desired by the parties concerned to get control of the road in order to place it in new relations with other railroad interests. It is further alleged that the Garretts are desirous of investing the increment of the family's colossal fortune in Baltimore & Ohio stock because they believe its intrinsic value to be greater than the price at which it is at present quoted.

There is also a rumor afloat which says that there is soon to be a new issue of Baltimore & Ohio stock. Several brokers and others credited with knowing something about the matter were interviewed, but they either denied any knowledge of such a move or would say nothing on the subject.

BURNED THE TOWN.

EXASPERATED TRAMPS IN NEW MEXICO

Set Fire to the City of Coolidge in That Territory and it is Burned to the Ground.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 26.—A disastrous fire set by tramps has destroyed every house in the city of Coolidge, N. M., except the railroad eating-house and the depot buildings. The tramps had been loitering around town for several days, and were infuriated because citizens had made preparations to drive them out. For three days they had held control of the town. Tribute was levied on the stores, the demands being emphasized by a show of weapons. Finally the residents were driven to wage war in self defence. Their resistence enraged the tramps and in retaliation inflammables were scattered among the buildings and set on fire. Before the ashes of the town were cool a posse of citizens on horse back were in pursuit of the tramps, and lynchings are probable. The leader of the tramps is believed to be Black Rube, a half-breed and hard character.

JACK BARNETT.

"The Strangler's" Story.

Muldoon left immediately for New York. This is the first evidence that there will be a fight.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATIVE ROW.

A Member Tries to Pull the Speaker Out of Chair.

FRANKFORT, KY., May 26.—The legislative proceedings in the Kentucky House were marked by the disgraceful conduct of Representative Cooper of Marion, who during the debate on the general common school bill attempted to drag Speaker pro tem Tyler from the speakers stand. Members yelled to the sergeant-at-arms to throw Cooper out. After a scrimmage Tyler restored order. Cooper will be arraigned before the House today either to be censured or expelled.

A TORPEDO SQUIB

Explodes with Terrible Effect—Two Boys Killed.

The boys found the squib in an old brush heap on High street, and either kicked or threw a stone at it with the above results. Storm Stricken.

An Ohio Village Block Struck by Lightning

AND DYNAMITE EXPLODES IN THE FIRE FOLLOWING.

Two Persons Are Instantly Killed and Twenty-five More Injured—The Explosion Heard for Five Miles—The Two Dead Victims Mangled and Mutilated Beyond Recognition.

MANSFIELD, O., May 26.—A powerful rain storm passed over this place and county, Saturday night, accompanied with lightning and thunder. During the continuance of the storm lightning struck the John Charles block in Lucas, six miles east of this city, about three o'clock in the morning. The block was occupied by a hardware and general merchandise store. The block took fire from the stroke and was entirely consumed, together with two dwellings adjoining. There is no fire apparatus in the village and the citizens turned out with buckets but could do nothing toward extinguishing the flames. When they saw they could do nothing their efforts were directed toward saving the contents of the building. While removing the goods, about fifty pounds of dynamite, which was kept in the store, exploded with disastrous effect. The bodies of John Smith and Jeremiah Jones were horribly mangled and mutilated beyond recognition. About twenty-five persons in all were more or less injured.

The killed are, John Smith, age about 54, leaves wife and family; Jeremiah Jones, age 50, leaves wife and family.

Seriously injured, Joseph Hanna, bad cut on forehead, hand and legs; S. F. Russell, severe cut over left eye; John Gallagher, leg severely bruised by falling from a ladder; S. F. Myers, badly hurt, struck by flying bricks.

Of the remaining persons injured none are considered seriously hurt. Physicians were quickly summoned who attended the injured. The report of the explosion was heard five miles distant and the shock was so great that nearly all windows in the village were broken.

The fire department of this city was called up for assistance and the fire apparatus was put on a special train, but before they could start, word reached them that the fire was under control. Rain came down in torrents, which put the fire out, otherwise half of the town would have been in ruins. The loss is estimated at $5,000 to $8,000.

RAVAGES OF THE STORM.

Loss of Life and Property by Tornadoes, Rain and Lightning.

BURLINGTON, IA., May 26.—News is had from New London, eighteen miles north of here, that a tornado passed near that place, wrecking several dwellings and barns, and injuring a number of people, Charles Flesner so severely that he will die. Thousands of dollars' damage was done.

Buildings Wrecked and Damaged at New Richmond, Ind.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 26.—A young tornado passed through the north part of this county doing considerable damage. At New Richmond several houses were blown down, a large hardware store was moved from its foundation, and the roof of the new Methodist church was blown off. Considerable damage was also done at the towns of Wingate and Lindon.

The rainfall in this county during the past four weeks will exceed all the rainfall during the twelve months preceding.

Heavy Thunder Storm at Harrison.

HARRISON, O., May 26.—The most terrific rain and electric storm known in years passed over here. Mr. Lass Gales' house was struck by lightning and set on fire, but was extinguished before any damage was done. At the time of the storm City Hall was packed with people attending the trades' carnival, when the alarm of fire was raised, causing a panic, which might have ended with bad results if it had not been for the cooler heads.

Upper Rivers Continue to Rise.

PITTSBURG, May 26.—The rivers are still rising here, and the lowlands on the north and south sides are partly under water. About $7,000 worth of lumber has been swept away, but beyond this no serious damage has resulted from the flood, and none is apprehended. At midnight there was twenty-three feet in the Allegheny river. Old river men do not expect more than twenty-five feet, as the water is falling at headwaters.

Instantly Killed by Lightning.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 26.—Isaac J. Colliston, aged forty-five, a farmer living five miles north of here, took refuge out of the rain under an Elm tree. The tree was struck by lightning, the electric bolt killing Colliston instantly. No scratches were found upon him, but silver money in his pocket had become melted and run together.

Barn Destroyed by Lightning.

DAYTON, O., May 26.—A slashing storm dipped down into Mad River valley, the center of the fury being in the vicinity of Vandalia, seven miles from Dayton.

Lightning struck a new barn on John Oberton's farm, destroying the structure, and a colt, a calf, utensils, feed and grain and a set of blacksmith tools, all belonging to the tenant, named William Jordan. No insurance on building or personal property.

Severe Storm at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 26.—A violent wind storm, accompanied by heavy rain, prevailed here, destroying many of the finest shade trees in the city, and doing some damage to stables and out-houses. The hardest part of the storm passed directly east of the city, and farm property is believed to have suffered considerably.

Heavy Loss in Iowa.

BURLINGTON, IA., May 26.—News is received from New London, eighteen miles north of here, that destructive tornado passed near that place wrecking several dwellings and barns and injuring a number of people. Charles Fleener was so severely injured that he will die. It is estimated that thousands of dollars in damage was done.

One Killed, Another Badly Injured.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., May 26.—Park Osborne, a well known farmer in Sullivan county, and Herschel Riggs, who was with him, were struck by lightning. Riggs was killed instantly, and Osborne badly injured. There were several severe thunder storms in this part of the Wabash valley.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE. LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. LETTING IN LIGHT.

The Single Tax Men of Philadelphia Have a Tilt With an Official Committee on Taxation.

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.—Single tax men made a hit in the hearing this week in the hearing before the State Commission to investigate the question of taxation. A. H. Stephenson and J. L. Shoemaker represented the Henry George Club, and the latter distributed to the members of the commission and others present copies of a proposed law providing for a separate assessment of land and improvements, and empowering local taxing bodies to exempt from taxation all buildings, structures, living trees, developments of mines, personal property, posts of profits, professions, trades and occupations, money at interest, stocks, bonds and loans.

Mr. Stephenson then had a hearing before the commission. He presented sound single tax arguments against various other taxes; declared that in Philadelphia workingmen's houses were assesied at 70 to 80 per cent of their value, and the real estate of large holders at a much lower percentage.

"Would it not be so under youa system?" asked Chairman McCamant.

"No. Two men own lots equal in size, side by side, on Broad street. The man who has a $100,000 house on his is to be taxed on the land value alone and the same amount as the other man, who has aothing on his lot. Thei lots are necessarily approximately equal in value, and neither can be discriminated against without his finding it out."

"Aren't the present inequalities due to the bad judgment of assessors?" was asked.

"They are universal, and yet there must be some good assessors," was the reply.

"Of course, gentlemen, this single tax principle is going to utterly destroy land speculation."

"Yes."

"You'll destroy ownership?" was suggested.

"Yes, speculative ownership. Possession will be more secure than ever. One tax would make taxation equal. Now a man can buy a lot, go to Europe for ten years, return and find his lot doubled in value. We destroy his ownership of that unearned increment. We propose to tax only those values which the city, the presence of the people creates, and let a man improve his place as high as possible without fining him for it. We propose to take the unearned increment for the use of the people who created it."

"Suppose a man's property falls in value," suggested Mr. Wright.

"Then we tax him less."

"Shouldn't we give the unearned increment back to him?"

"Yes, we do. We tax him less. Big taxes will fall upon the big values, and low taxes on the low land values. The city will pay more. The farmer will pay less. The value of land is mainly due to the improvements on it, and when we exempt his improvements there will be less to tax the farmer on."

"Doesn't the building give the value to the land," asked Mr. McCamant. How could you separate the value of the building of the Girard trust from that of the land it stands on?"

Before a reply could be made Representative Taggart hastily added to it the supposition that if the houses were clerred off Broad street to the Delaware, what would the land be worth?

"Without the the people?" retorted Mr. Stephenson.

"The people wouldn't be there without the houses," snapped Mr. Taggart.

"The houses wouldn't be there without the people," replied Mr. Stephenson, and he enlarged upun the doctrine that the presence of the people was what created the land value, and that the only thing that made Chestnut street houses more valuable than those on Poplar street was the "crop of people" that were passing along.

Editor George H. Mapes, a speculator, asked if the single tax system would not drive wealth into bonds and forms of property, so that the tax would be uncollectable."

"We won't drive any wealth out of the country," responded Mr. Stephenson, "and bonds only represent improvements."

"Suppose there are two farms," said Mr. Wherry; "on one the improvements are seventy-five per cent; on the other twenty-five per cent. The market value of one $100 per acre; of the other $80 per acre. How will you get the land values?"

"Subtract the value of the improvements from the market value," replied Mr. Stephenson. "The farm of $100 per acre with seventy-five per cent of improvements would be taxed on a land value of $25, and the farm of $80 per acre, with twenty-five per cent of improvements would be taxed on a land value of $60.

"Then," said Mr. Wherry, "there are many farms in Pennsylvania where there $10,000 worth of improvements on $5,000 worth of land, say."

"Then they would pay no tax," said the witness.

Mr. Wherry said that about a quarter of the farms in Pennsylvania would be found so.

"Then wouldn't your tax mean confiscation?" asked Mr. McCamant.

"I am not terrified by that word, gentlemen," was the smiling reply. "I hrve heard it before. If so, there would be a different confiscator. The confiscator would not be the land speculator."

"Would not a man be entitled to a bonus for increasing the value of the surrounding property by his own improvements," asked Mr. Wherry.

"No. He improves it to a certain extent, but the people who go down Chestnut street are those who make the property valuable," was the rejoinder.

Then Mr. Stephenson said that the assessed value of Philadelphia was about $600,000,000. As it was usually assessed at sixty per cent of its value, its real value was about $100,000,000. Subtract half as due to improvements and tax the other half as land value four per cent and the city would get about $20,000,000 af against $19,000,000 spent by the city in 1889.

T. L. Shoemaker added that by a calculation based upon our 700 miles of paved streets and 600 miles of unpaved streets he estimated a land value of $700,000,000, which, at three per cent, would give a city revenue of $21, a year. "You must adopt this single system," he said, with earnestness, "or continue to fine men for telling the truth or fine them for their industry."

SPECULATION VS. INDUSTRY.

Shall We Tax Men for Beautifying the City, or Help Them Make a Fortune Out of Vacant Lots.

A good illustration of the single tax in working order would be to tax the owners of the vacant lot just as much as the owners of the lot upon which the Opera-house stands; for instance, or, in other words, if the two pieces of land are equally valuable, tax them the same without taking the improvement value into account. When we fully appreciate the result of taxing things, we will see the beauty of the single tax. For instance, it is a time-honored custom to have a dog tax, so if you wish to keep a dog you must first consider whether or not you are willing to pay the tax, and it occurs to most people that the higher the tax imposed the fewer dogs there will be.

The higher the tax on houses, the fewer the houses. The higher the tax on clothes the higher the price, the more you will have to give to get the clothes, and the longer you will wear the old ones. Now, what does all this mean? Don't we want houses? Don't we want clothes? Don't we need food and fuel? Then why tax these things. Why make it more difficult to get the things we want?

Do we want vacant lots in the cities? Do we want idle land in the country? When we build houses men are employed, wages are earned and paid, and then exchanged for the various things other men have produced. You know that perfectly well, but do you realize that whether you are a carpenter or a bricklayer, or a cotton planter, or a tailor, you are each one of you applying your labor to land? Some will see that at once, others will have to think it out; but it is a fact that everything we use comes out of the land. Now, let's go back to the vacant lot and the idle land, taking with us the knowledge that everything comes out of the land, and don't you see at a glance that if all land was held idle or kept out of use, that we could get none of the things we need for our subsistence, and when part of the land that is needed is kept out of use, we must go without some of the things we need, and don't you see that the price of land represents the necessity of the people, and at all costs men must use land. Land is necessary for your existence and my existence, and the life of each and every man, woman and child in this world, or who shall be born into this world to the end of time. Do you believe in monopoly of the style that the "Standard Oil Company" rejoices in? Do you think speculation in breadstuffs a good thing? Do you fancy such monsters as the Jute Bagging Trust? No independent American citizen can fancy or believe in such things. Do you sympathize with those who toil and toil for starvation wages, both in town and country. Here is what Mr. Lindbloom, of the Chicago Board of Trade, says: "If the law-makers were better informed they would not be satisfied with preventing the forestalling of the markets for certain products of the soil, but would strike at the root of the evil and prevent speculation in vacant lands." Do you think Mr. Lindbloom has a level head? I do not mean a flat head, but do you think his ideas are good? Well, then, how shall we prevent the speculation, not in corn, not in cotton or wheat, but in the source of all things material—in land. Shall we give each man forty acres of land and a mule? Some men do not want forty acres, some want ten times that much. Forty acres in one location are worth $4, while forty acres in another place are worth many thousands; yes, even millions. That would not do the business, would it? We propose to simplify matters and place all taxation on the value of land, upon that value which has been created by the coming together of many people; and mind this, the coming together of many people as in cities increases the price or value of but one thing, and that is the value of land. If you double the population of any city, that city will need more money for its public expenses than before the addition to the population, and owing to the increase of population the value of land has increased but nothing else has increased. The land value is the creation of the whole people, and therefore is the proper subject for taxation. Individual industry should go free, whether it is represented by houses and stores or farm implements, or enriched land or any other form of wealth that is produced by individual industry. If you don't believe in vacant lots, help to educate public sentiment to that point where the people will see the injury of holding valuable land unused. Just keep in mind that all employment comes out of the land, and that farming is to other employments just as the foundation of the house is to the rest of the structure. If your house is built upon a rock, it's going to stay there, and if the taxation of a country is put upon land value, it will stay there.

If a man can apply his labor to land then he can produce. If he is not a producer he must starve or live upon somebody else.—M. H. McDowell in Memphis Weekly Appeal.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

LESSON IX, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 1.

Text of the Lesson, Luke x, 25-37—Commit Verses 33-35—Golden Text, Lev. xix, 18—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

All that is recorded between the sending forth of the seventy and the events of today's lesson is found in the intervening verses of this chapter. Note the power over all the power of the enemy granted to the seventy, with the promise that nothing should by any means hurt them (v, 19), also the greatness of having our names written in Heaven (v, 20), and the blessedness of having a child like spirit.

25. "And behold, a certain lawyer stood up and tempted Him." The word signifies to try or prove, and Jesus was tried, or proved, or tempted, first by the devil himself in the wilderness, then all through His public ministry He was continually tried by scribes and Pharisees and Sadducees, and also by His own followers, but he never failed. He was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin. Having thus suffered He is able to succor them that are tempted. We are to count it a great privilege to be thus tried, because thus we have fellowship with Him; knowing that we shall not have more than we can bear, and it all adds just so much to our glory at His coming (Heb. iv, 15; ii, 18; James i, 2, 12; I Cor. x, 13; I Peter iv, 12, 13).

"Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The same question was asked by the rich young ruler (Chap. xviii, 18), and virtually the same on another occasion (John vi, 28). The answer in each case was given to suit those who asked and to meet their need. The mistake of each was the same that prevails at all times, viz., that eternal life can be obtained by some doing on our part. It is the mistake of all who are wise and prudent in their own eyes. How much can a babe do to help itself? Try and think of a single thing. It must be cared for or perish. Just so with the sinner. We have no more power to do anything that will save ourselves than a babe has to care for itself. Utterly helpless is our condition, but we know it not, and it is hard to convince us.

26. "He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?" Being a lawyer, he was supposed to know the law, and to that Jesus refers him. The law is sometimes a general name for the books of Moses and sometimes signifies the ten commandments, or the larger law concerning all rites and ceremonies. The law, the prophets and the psalms is the Saviour's summary of all Scripture (Luke xxiv, 27, 44). Is there anything concerning which you would like to ask Jesus a question? See here what He would probably say to you, "What is written? how readest thou?" If you would have to reply, "I do not know, Lord, for I have not read the Bible carefully," then begin quickly to read much and carefully, so that you may know what is written. Otherwise those who never saw a Bible may rise against you in the judgment.

27. "And he answering said: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, * * * and thy neighbor as thyself." He was perhaps more ready with an answer than many of us would have been.

28. "And He said unto him, Thou hast answered right; this do, and thou shalt live." The keeping of the law which God requires was explained by the Saviour in His sermon on the mount, when He taught that hatred in the heart was equal to murder, and a lustful look equal to adultery. Let any one stand forth able to say truly that he has kept the whole law in thought, word and deed, the same would be a righteous man, having life, needing no Saviour. But such an one never lived, for "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God," and "therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight."

29. "But he, willing (R. V. desiring) to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbor?" The sinner, convinced of his sin, is ready to condemn himself, plead guilty and humbly seek forgiveness. But this man was not convicted of sin; he was not truly seeking life; he was against Christ, and was seeking to catch Him in his words, that he might condemn Him; therefore he asks this question, not because he really wanted to know, but simply to try the Saviour still further. Jesus knew the man's heart and his motives and his sin, yet He patiently bears him and as patiently answers him. The meek and lowly one is patient and long suffering even with those who hate Him and seek his life.

30. "And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho." As He had drawn from the lawyer the answer to his first question, so He will draw from him the answer to His second and send him away confounded.

31. "And by chance a certain priest was going down that way" (R. V.) There were lots of them on the downward road in the Saviour's time of humiliation, and there are plenty still traveling in the same way, even though called priests.

"And when he saw him, he passed by on the other side." And yet a priest was supposed to live nearer to God than any one else and have more of the Spirit of God.

32. "And in like manner a Levite also, when he came to the place, and saw him, passed by on the other side." Here is another most religious person, next in standing to the priests.

33. "But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him." Here is neither a Priest nor a Levite, not even a Scribe or a Pharisee, but only a Samaritan whom all the Jews despised. Type of Jesus Himself treated by His Own as a stranger and an outcast, despised and rejected by them, and looked upon by them as justly stricken and smitten of God. Yet even for them, who hated Him without a cause, He had compassion. He would cheerfully have forgiven them and saved them, but in their own estimation they were the righteous people, and did not need Him.

34, 35. "And took care of him." His compassion was manifested, not in words of pity, but in deeds of love, all summed up in this: "He took care of him." His loving care is seen in a seven hued rainbow of blessing and mercy.

36. "Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?" Jesus has put the matter clearly before him, and now he is to answer his own question as to "Who is my neighbor?" One's neighbor is not always the one who lives next door or across the street, but the one who acts neighborly. Not words but deeds prove the reality of love or friendship. "Not every one that saith, * * * but he that doeth."

37. "And he said, He that showed mercy on him." He has answered his own question, and perhaps this time been compelled to condemn himself, for He who reads the heart had doubtless read him a personal lesson.

"Then said Jesus unto him, Go and do thou likewise." The Saviour knew his man, he saw the hard, impenitent heart, and by bringing him face to face with God's holy law and the spirit of it, He would fain humble him and convince him of sin that he might be saved.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidney, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Bright's Disease Cured!

About two years ago our daughter had congestion of the kidneys, which developed into Bright's Disease. Her body was swollen to an enormous size—measuring 45 inches around the waist, and 18 inches below the knee After physicians had given up her case I determined to have her try Dr. Kennedy's of Rondout, N. Y. Gradually the swelling was reduced from 45 to 29 inches. She began to gain strength and was able to walk without fatigue. We do not know how to express our gratitude for what it has done for our child. We are confident the Favorite remedy will do all that is claimed for it—surely God has blessed it in this case, and we earnestly recommend it to all suffering from kidney disorders.—S. D. The band boys wish to extend their thanks to the News for the compliment they received in last week's issue. They think that band music is as appropriate for Sunday as some of the other occurrences that happen on that day in Clinton. At least, they judge by the audience they drew that it took very well.

At the last meeting of the Lenawee Horticultural Society, President Allis exhibited a jar of beans infested with the bean weevil, and advised people to be careful about planting infested beans. He thought a spoonful of gasoline turned into a quart jar of beans would destroy the weevil, at least all that had hatched out. He then turned in the gasoline, and before the meeting adjourned all the weevil were dead. Mr. Bradish said these weevil were extensively disseminated through the county, and great care should be taken to destroy all beans infested with them.

The Patrons of Husbandry will observe the third Saturday in June of each year as children's day, and endeavor to render it a time of pleasure and moral advancement to all.

The neighborhood correspondence to the Exponent has been very slim of late. We shall call the roll after house cleaning and plowing time, and hope to have a hearty response from all correspondents.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Fred J. Irland was sworn in yesterday morning as stenographer of the lower house of Congress, and began work, performing his first day's labor reporting the House in Committee of the Whole, considering district of Columbia bills, virtually the common Council of the district.

The Gilliland factory people received orders last night from the Western Union Company, for an aggregate of nearly 200,000 telegraph pins and brackets, for distribution in the states of Indiana, Oregon, Kansas, Colorado, and Wyoming, and they are now busy loading one car for Chicago. This is outside the order received last night. Such is prosperity, and we like to see it.—Adrian Times.

The wool season is about to open, and again the Times is asked to remind its readers that the reason why Ohio wool rates in the market two or three cents higher than the Michigan staple is due to the fact that our wool growers are remiss in the matter of washing and putting up their wool. Care in these directions will pay well. —Adrian Times.

While Editor Waring was off on prohibition business, republican politicians concocted a scheme to hurt his credit, and so induced Mrs. Price to begin foreclosure of a mortgage she held. Guernsey returned, lifted the mortgage, and ferreted out the animus of the business. It is a shrewd republican who will be able to trip up Mr. Waring. Rather petty business too, it strikes us. We like a manly fighter.—Adrian Press.

Supt. Hayden serves truant urchins the same way Old Hickory Jackson did obstinate prisoners who refused to come into court where he was presiding as judge—he goes out and gets them. Anyone doubting the superintendent's desire to serve the district acceptably should see his stalwart figure in a squad of truant juveniles making lively tracks up the hill of the seat of learning.—Hudson Gazette.

Just above the local column of the Adrian Daily Times is a new department, being a list of historical events, most of which occurred over one hundred years ago. The exchange fiend of this office in looking over the paper, made the startling discovery that Christopher Columbus had just died, that Lafayette was no more, and that an act of perpetual union between the states had been passed.—Hudson Post.

A glance at the new time card of the Lake Shore fails to show any change in the running time of the trains here. Neither does it show that the Fayette train will run to this station. It would be too much of an accommodation to the people of this section, and of course, the railroad company couldn't think of doing it, although the expense would have been comparatively nothing.—Blissfield Advance.

A county convention of the Patrons of Industry occurred in Adrian on Wednesday, and it resolved to cooperate with the Knights of Labor in supporting only those candidates for the legislature who are in favor of and will advance the principle of both organizations A committee of three was appointed to act in junction with a similar K. of L. committee, on a plan of campaign.

In speaking of the congressional nominations this fall, the Hillsdale Democrat says: There is no doubt that Mr. Cook could have the support of his own county for the nomination, if he would say the word, or even "wink a little bit," as the auctioneer would say. But nobody has "heard him wink" as yet.

L. W. Snow is here visiting his aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Snow, from whom he had been separated for the long period of thirty-two years. He is interested in several mines in Arizona, and has arranged his affairs there so that he can abide with the old people through the summer.—Morenci Observer.

Miss Ida L. Wall, first assistant in the Hudson High School, was notified Saturday that she had been unanimously selected by the State Board of Education for the position of critic of the grammer grade in the State Normal School. Her associate in the high school, Miss Mate Potter, has accepted the position of professor of mathematics in Hull University, Iowa. Thus Hudson loses two shining lights in her educational and social circles

E. L. Mills, of Adrian, who is taking mortgage statistics for the government census has been at work at the Register of Deeds office here some two weeks, and expects to finish in a few days more. Mr. Mills tells us that he is surprised to find that so many of the mortgages in this county are on city property. Of the 8 000 or 9,000 mortgages put on record for the past ten yeers, fully one-half are on city property; and for the past two years fully two-thirds of the number are on city property, while the amount is in still greater proportion. He says that Washtenaw farmers have suffered very little in this respect of late.—Ann Arbor Argus.

DECORATION DAY.

The Procession will form on Chicago street, at 2 o'clock P. M. sharp, and march to the cemetery where the following program will be observed:

Dirge by the Band. During which Beers Post will decorate the graves of the dead Comrades.
Song by the Male Quartette.
Prayer by Rev. Lemon Barnes.
Music by the Band.
Oration by Rev. J. S. Joslin.
Song by Quartette.
G. A. R. Memorial Service.
Benediction.

It is hoped that the citizens of the village will close their places of business from 2 to 4 o'clock P. M., and that all patriotic citizens, both old and young, will join in the observance of the day; that we may do honor to those who gave their lives in the defence of our country. All old soldiers are invited to join in the procession. The official orders, promulgated by Beers Post, appear elsewhere.

LIFE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Many lives, Histories, or Biographies of the late Jefferson Davis, purporting to be written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis, are being advertised throughout the country. The only genuine work of the kind written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis is that to be published by Belford Company, 18 22 East 18th Street, New York, entitled "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States, A. Memoir, by His Wife." All other works claiming the authorship of Mrs. Jefferson Davis must necessarily be injurious to her personally and pecuniarily. The book is sold by subscription, and territory is being rapidly assigned. The work promises to be one of the most popular ever published, and those desiring to canvass for it should apply at once to the publishers, who will furnish circulars and information.

UNDISPUTED MERIT.

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder is due to the extreme care exercised by its manufacturers to make it entirely pure, uniform in quality, and of the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge care and skill, attained by a twenty years' practical experience are contributed toward this end and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with greater accuracy, precision and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients is definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials used or the manufacture of the powder, who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence always pure, wholesome and uniform in quality. Each box is exactly like every other, and will retain its powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, at any time. The Government Chemists after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness, and thousands of tests all over the country have further, demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. A curious case of perverseness is that of the late Sampson King, of Blue Lick, who died a few days ago, eighty years of age. He owned a remarkable medicinal well, which effected a number of phenomenal cures: otherwise his farm of about 200 acres was not worth much. Capitalists heard of the well and a number of them offered him $100,000 for it. The old man refused the offer, dying in poverty rather than part with his well.

will wash clothes, will clean house—will do it well—will save you time; labor; wear and tear; will reduce drudgery; will not hurt your hands; your clothes or paint, and besides will cost you no more than common bar soap. One honest trial will prove all that.

Why not accept the testimony of the millions who use it as proof of its virtue. Among your friends you'll find those who have used Pearline for years—ask them—they will tell you "can't do without it."

Beware Pearline is the original Washing Compound—used by millions, but imitated by thousands who peddle their stuff or give worthless prizes. Pearline is never peddled, but sold by all grocers. 151 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

Facts Worth Knowing

In all diseases of natal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. The medical profession has been slow to learn this. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or syringes becaus they are all irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm.

Have used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for croup and colds, and declare it positive cure. Contributed by Wm. Kay, 570 Plymoth Ave., Buffalo, N.Y.

The news editor of the Messenger seems to feel afraid a calamity will befall P's of I. if they do not have a ticket of their own. Why does he feel so much alarmed about the prosperity of the P.'s of I? Prohibition is his White House idol. Does he feel any more alarmed than he did when the Republican party nominated him for the legislature? Let him take a glance back to that time. Does he remember coming up to Macon with his pockets lined with slips, and dealing out a handful to a certain voter, requesting him to do all he could for his election? Well, the result was he went to the legislature and there advocated Republican principles. To-day he curses that same old party and tells altogether a different story. Did he tell the truth then? If so, is it the truth to-day?

He is an inbred horse and is a direct descendant of the old Preston stock of Cleveland bays, the most noted family of prize winners in Ontario at the present nay. "Glenwood" is closely related to Mr. Brown's stock horse, King Fairfield, which won first premium at Toronto Industrial in 1888.

OF INTEREST TO WOODCHUCKS.

ED. HERALD—As many farmers in this vicinity are greatly troubled with wood chucks burrowing in their fields it may be of interest to know that they can be very cheaply exterminated by the use of Bisulphide of carbon which can be procured at the drug stores. About 4 weeks ago I received a bulletin from the state agricultural society recommending the use of Bisulphide of Carbon as an insecticide and mentioned incidentally that it was used in large quantities in the west in destroying prairie dogs; and that it might no doubt be used to exterminate woodchucks. I got a pound can and tried it on some very large holes with such good results that I have used four pounds and have nearly exterminated them on my farm. The bisulphide is in liquid form and is volatile and inflammable and must be kept tightly corked and away from fire. To apply it to the holes take a piece of rubber hose 3 or 4 feet long and put it in the hole and pour about 2 table spoonfuls of the Bisulphide in and stop the hole up with earth. The best part of it is they are killed and buried at one operation. ABNER WILSON.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JUNE 5

The prevailing opinion at Washington is that the McKinley bill is dead. Let us hope so, and peace be to its ashes.

Decoration Day was more generally observed than ever this year, and it is gratifying to see that the custom is growing in the South as well as in the North.

A sacriligious sheet down in Pennsylvania says that President Harrison is so unfamiliar with a veto that he doesn't know whether it ties behind or buttons on the basque.

Carlisle was sent to the Senate exactly in the nick of time. His leadership is acknowledged from the start, and he is already making it hot for the high taxers in the Senate.

In quoting Garfield's famous saying the Detroit Journal got the "p" hitched to the wrong word, making it read; "an ounce of luck is worth a pound of pluck." It should have been reversed.

In speaking of Carlisle's influence in the Senate, the Boston Herald well says: It doesn't make any particular difference where Senator Carlisle sits on the democratic side. "Where the MacGregor sits is the head of table."

The Louisana Lottery Co. dies hard. It has offered the State one million dollars a year for twenty-five years for the privilege of selling lottery tickets to fools. But it is to be hoped that Gov. Nichol's manly hostility to the scheme will prevent a renewal of their charter.

The Dedication of the Garfield Monument at Cleveland on Decoration Day, was one of the most imposing ceremonies ever witnessed in the West The city of Cleveland never entertained so large a crowd before. A worthy object and a worthy occasion combined to make it a memorable event.

One of the chief evils produced by the exorbitant tariff is the encouragement given to cheap substitutes for genuine raw materials. Fifteen millions of capital are now invested in shoddy manufacture and the consumption of wool is largely reduced thereby, while the consumer pays two prices for shoddy clothing. An unjust law always promotes dishonesty and evasion.

Philadelphia is the largest manufacturing city in the Union, and has always been a hot bed of protection. Last Tuesday two monster meetings were held there to protest against the McKinley bill. One was held by the workingmen, the other by the business men, and they were both non-political in character. The leaven of tariff reform is working even in Philadelphia.

The honors paid to the memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee at Richmond last week, furnished the bloody shirt organs an opportunity to boil over, and they never let a chance of that kind slip. It was very petty business. The soldiers who fought under Lee revere his memory no less than the boys in blue who marched under Hancock, McClellan and Grant cherish their memory. Human nature is the same both North and South of Mason and Dixon's line.

The Times stands corrected. The Indianapolis Sentinel says that "four woolgrowers, and not five, attended the high tariff sociable at the statehouse" in Indianapolis, and enthusiastically indorsed the McKinley bill. In matters of such political and historical moment it is well to be exact. It now appears, assuming that it takes nine tailors to make a man, that the Indianapolis convention was six and three quarters times as numerously attended as was the famous convention of Tooley street.—Chicago Times.

We have never seen the tariff issue more tersely and calmly set forth, than in these few words, taken from Harper's Weekly: "That a tariff is really a tax; that a tax should be equitably laid for the common welfare, and not for special or class benefit; that class privileges by law necessarily breeds public corruption, and that pauper wages and the home market are delusive cries, and, as they are used, do not fairly represent facts—are the general considerations which influence public opinion more and more."

CURRENT COMMENT.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

If it is true, as asserted, that the megaphone will make the slightest whisper sound like the road of Niagara, would it not be well for the public to use one in conversing with Matt Quay? He's so deaf, you know.—Chicago Times.

Lady of the house—I will give you an order for a machine, young man, if you will consider me a foreigner, and supply me at discount price for export—Puck.

THE MACHINE BEING PUT IN ORDER.

When the Congressional bouncer had given the Republicans a majority of eighteen in the House, it was suffered to lapse into desuetude, but now that sixteen of the "trooly loil" have served notice on their political confreres that they will fight the sugar and wool schedules in the McKinley Tariff bill, no one need be surprised if the machine is oiled up and again set in motion.—Houston Post.

MCKINLEY ANSWERS HIMSELF.

Mr. McKinley, in his efforts to thrust the tariff bill down the throats of the people, gives them this query as an appetizer: "Is the foreign consumer better than the American consumer?" McKinley answers his own question in the affirmative by providing for a "rebate" on American goods manufactured for export from taxed raw materials. Thus the foreign consumer is enabled to get the goods at a lower price than the American consumer, for whom McKinley professes the utmost friendship.—Rome Sentinel.

BEER AND BEANS IN BOSTON.

One of the saloon regulations just adopted in Boston abolishes drinking at a bar. A person desiring liquid refreshment must take it with food or go without. This gives a monopoly of the business to the restaurant. The bar man and the bar maid are barred out in Boston, and beans and beverage will be handed down to the hungry and thirsty by Boston beauties—one bean, perhaps, to two beers. It is safe to say that the new regulation will increase intemperance.—Jackson Patriot.

FOLLOW THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS.

If Mr. Clarkson can induce the Republican journals to advocate the Democratic doctrines he confesses are taking so strong a hold on the masses in the North, the number of their readers would largely increase. Empty promises, sustaining the monied monopolies, and vigorously flapping the bloody shirt twenty-five years after Appomattox, may satisfy the politicians; but the people who do not live by politics have grown tired or that kind of provender, and are seeking food more suited to their tastes and wants.—Little Rock Gazette.

A REPUBLICAN CONFESSION.

It cannot be denied that the Democratic press is stronger in the great cities of the East than it was in former years; nor is there reason to doubt that many of the farmers' weekly papers in the West have been brought under Free-Trade influences. The Democratic leaders opened the campaign of 1892 the day after their defeat in 1888, and they have multiplied already their agencies for producing and distributing Free-Trade literature. Their activity betokens a determined effort to undermine public faith in the protective system, and to restore their party to power with a direct commission from the people to break down the tariff.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE PROPER PLACE TO PROTEST.

McKinley's tariff bill does not seem to suit anyone but McKinley. Washington is thronged daily by delegations which go there to protest that the duties on their particular class of manufactured goods are not high enough. If those who believe the duties levied by the McKinley bill are in most instances too high should go to Washington to make their protests there would not be room enough for either McKinley or his bill. This class will not go to Washington, as they know their protest would not be heeded if they did, but they can make the protest at the ballot box in a way that will be effectual.—Chicago Times.

PROTECTION THAT DOES NOT PROTECT.

Our wool growers must be tickled. After all the talk about protecting this "great industry" the Republicans propose to make the tariff a cent more on fine wools, which our farmers raise. On carpet wools which we do not raise, they increase the duty three cents a pound. Our farmers sell the fine wool and get the cent bonus. They buy the carpets and blankets, and pay three cents bonus on what they buy. That's about the way the Republican tariff helps a farmer. It pretends to give him $1, and squarely robs him of $3. No wonder the Patrons of Industry are writhing under that kind of fostering care.—Adrian Press.

THE SERVICE PENSION QUESTION.

Gen. R. A. Alger, in a recent interview published in the Toledo Blade, gave expression to some very sensible ideas in regard to service pensions. We are glad to see at least one prominent Republican leader coming to his senses on this pension business. It is high time that the leaders in Congress, who shape legislation, called a halt in the same direction. If all the pension promises made by the Republican managers before the last election were to be redeemed it would bankrupt the government and create such a reaction as would imperil the whole pension system. Facts are facts, from whatever source they may come, and Gen. Alger states a few eye-openers which prudent men will take to heart. And yet, if the same language had been used by a Southern member of Congress the organs would have called it the rankest kind of treason. Read Gen. Alger's own words:

"I have been all over the country, attending state encampments and other Grand Army meetings, and I find the service pension question a burning one everywhere. There are very few, I fear, who correctly estimate the obstacles in the way of getting such pension legislation enacted at Washington as the national encampment of the G. A. R. directed us to work for. You will remember the encampment directed that two bills should be urged before Congress: one, the disability bill; the other, the service or per diem bill. The committee appointed by me was the old committee, the committee that had so much experience that every man who had anything to say about it, came to me and asked me to reappoint that committee—no one else asking otherwise; and I accordingly did it. That was in accordance with my own judgment, also.

"This committee went to Washington, and after conversing with a great many members of both Houses, informed me that a very good disability bill could be passed at this session, but that the per diem or service bill could not be passed. They gave the reasons for it. I saw several of the members of the committee, and again ordered them to Washington, and met them there myself. Upon the threshold of the case, as we presented it, we were informed that the service bill could not be passed, and that by many of the friends of the service bill, and every one was the friend of the old soldier. They informed us that to urge that, to the exclusion of the disability bill, would defeat both; and these were the figures that were given us:

"The approximate estimate of the number of comrades living to day, made from the war records by Dr. Enworth, who is the highest authority in the country, approximately, without taking the hundreds, is 1,284,000 men. The amount which would be required to meet the pension bill for 1,284,000 men, at $10 per month (that is the lowest figure estimated, the lowest sum being $8 for the first, anyhow, and one cent per day per month above that, which the lowest estimates increase to $10 per month) is $154,000,000.

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889,—last year—the revenues of the government from all sources were $387,000,000. The expenses, including $87,000,000 pensions, were $348,000,000, leaving a balance on the credit side of the ledger, or a surplus, of $44,000,000. The amount asked for this year is $98,000,000, or $11,000,000 more than last year. The figures may not foot up, as I give them to you approximately, but I think they are correct.

"The disability bill, it is estimated, will take $36,000,000. If that should become a law, and there were no other pensions to be allowed, and we had the same revenues as last year, it would leave a margin of $2,000,000. But according to the report of the Ways and Means Committee and according to their estimate of the cutting down of the revenue, there will be a shrinkage of $60,000,000.

"This would leave a deficit of $58,000,000. If the service pension bill should pass, and take $154,000,000, and the revenues of the government were the the same as last year, the amount of the deficit would be $212,000,000. And we are informed there, and these members have told me, that any people, or any party, or any body of men who could control the election to office there, who would pass such a law, would be swept off the board at the next election; and that the feeling would be so great that there would not be an appropriation to meet it next year, even though such a law were on the statute book.

"I am constantly asked to demand in the name of the Grand Army of the Republic that we shall have the service pension bill or none. Men go so far as to accuse me of being favorable to the one and against the other. They have written me letters saying, "We want you should take up the service bill; force that on the statute books if you have any power. That is what you are elected for; and if you can't do that you had better resign."

"Those people who demand of me that the Grand Army shall take a stand for the service bill or no bill, if they stood as I stand, if they heard what I hear, and read what I read, I think they might modify their view. As I know that one can not come now, and as I know the other can, if properly urged, I would rather have my hand severed than stop the passage of the disability bill, and stop, therefore, all legislation.

"When they ask of me if I had the power—which I have not—when they ask of me that I shall urge the one bill or none, when I know that thousand and tens of thousands of comrades, and thousands of widows, and the fathers and mothers and the children of comrades, are suffering to day—when they ask that of me, they ask more than I can grant.

"I would rather lay down my office to-night than to stop the enactment of that law one moment. They have delayed it too long already. The $36,000,000 that are to be appropriated by that bill will give pensions to 500,000 people. Is it not better that the suffering veterans shall have this, even under an objectionable bill, than to get nothing?"

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

In view of the wide spread attention now centered in the Yellowstone National Park, the following expressions from two of the most eminent American citizens, one a scientist and the other a clergyman, are of great interest.

Prof. John Muir, California's distinguished geologist, speaking of the National resort says: "situated in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, on the broad rugged Summit of the continent, amid snow and ice, and dark shaggy forests, where the great rivers take their rise, it surpasses in wakeful, exciting interest any other region yet discovered on the face of the Globe."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, the eminent divine, says: "After all poetry has exhausted itself, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other revelations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone Park is the geologist's paradise."

The Northern Pacific Railroad, the celebrated Dining Car Route is the only all rail line to this region. For copy of Wonderland, Yellowstone Park folder, and other illustrated publications, address any traveling Passenger Agent of the company, or Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T. N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

Ulcerated Sore Throat

Two years ago I had Ulcerated Sore throat, and was so weakend and reduced in flesh that my friends thought it impossible for me to recover. I was attended by the best Physicians, but thier endeavors to relieve me were futile. My mother seeing SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.) so highly recommended, decided to give me a course of it, and after taking the first bottle I was greatly relieved, and after taking several bottles I was entirely cured. I have not had any signs of a return of the disease since.

The Grandest he Ever Saw.

Mr. W. J. Colman, a prominent citizen of Gainesvil, Fla., writes the following under date of Feb, 10, 1890: "I contracted a severe case of Contagious Blood Poison that gave a great deal of trouble, and baffled the physicians of this place. I was finally advised to try SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.), and I can say, with great pleasure, that a few bottles of it has entirly cured me. I have no hesitancy in saying that S. S. S. is the grandest blood medicine I ever saw and can cheerfully recommend it to any one suffering as I was."

Boils, carbuncles, and eruptions of all kinds are nature's efforts to throw off poison from the blood. This result may be accomplished much more effectually as well as agreeably through the proper excretory channels, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Many diseases date thier origin to functional disturbance of the stomach and liver, Laxador corrects these abnormal conditions most surely; hence the increasing sale. Price 25 cents.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

FOREIGNERS FAVORED.

THE SANCTITY THAT HANGS ABOUT THE FOREIGN TRADE.

How Our Protected Manufacturers Sell Cheaper Abroad Than at Home—Mighty Interesting Figures for Farmer Brown and His Wife—What Shall Brown Strike?

The farmers of this country have been for a long time physicked with such stuff as this:

"Protection is for your special benefit, because it creates a large manufacturing class, which affords you a home market for your products. Your foreign market is uncertain and unreliable and is very far away. Sell at home and buy at home; and thus you save freight two ways. The home market is your salvation; depend upon it alone and you shall be saved."

And Mr. Robert P. Porter, our census taker in this year of grace, addresses the following oily words to them: "Unless I am very much mistaken the American farmer has altogether too much hay out himself not to be clever to his neighbor the manufacturer in the matter of exchanging courtesies."

Now, does this American farmer know how "this matter of exchanging courtesies" works in actual practice? Does he know that these home market manufacturers sell in the foreign market cheaper than to him? Such is the fact. The manufacturers of many protected articles have one price for the home market and another price, which is from 10 to 30 per cent. lower, for the foreign market.

Does the farmer doubt this statement? Does he ask why he never heard of such a thing before?

For a very good reason. The fact is kept secret so far as possible. It is known by all the exporting merchants of our seaports.

But why does not the farmer know this? In New York two trade papers are regularly published which give lists of articles with the home market prices and the foreign prices side by side. These papers are The Australasian and South American and The American Mail and Export Journal, and are for circulation in foreign countries alone.

Farmer Brown, do you want to see one of those papers?

Very well; walk up to the editor's desk and ask him for a copy—or even offer him money for a copy—and what does that editor tell you?

"Oh, no, Farmer Brown; you cannot buy a copy of this paper!"

"But why?" you ask. And here the editor will eye you sharply to see whether you can be trusted with a secret. "Yes," he seems to say, "Farmer Brown is a trusty man; he will not give it away."

And he leans over toward you and, says in confidential tones:

"You see, Farmer Brown, the reason we cannot sell our paper here is that the retail prices quoted for export are considerably lower than large dealers must pay for the same articles here at wholesale."

Now, as Farmer Brown will never get a peep into one of these journals, he shall, at least, know something of their contents. But first he shall have further proof of this pudding by hearing what several other journals have to say on this subject.

Let him hear what that dyed-in-the-wool protectionist organ The New York Press has to say:

"It is sometimes looked upon as wise to ship goods out of the country at cost rather than break the regular price for which such articles sell in the country in which they are produced."

And The American Machinist says this:

"Just why American manufacturers can sell machinery and other goods from 10 to 30 per cent. cheaper in Europe than they will sell them to be used at home is rather puzzling; but anyone curious in the matter can easily enough find out that many of them do this. It may be necessary to cut prices to secure trade from abroad, but it is likely to strike the American purchaser as being a little rough on him."

The Engineering and Mining Journal, although a protectionist paper, expresses itself in this fashion: So soon as an industry has attained the position where it can more than supply our home market and has to send its goods abroad, where they compete with those of foreign manufacturers, it is evident that they are either giving the foreigners the benefit of lower rates than they do our own people, or that they are able to get along at home without any protection from foreign manufacturers. It is not fair that our people should be made to pay more than foreigners for the products of our own land.

The Reform club, of New York, has taken this matter up with a view to putting the exact facts before the people. The results of its investigations have been published in a small pamphlet, which can be had by applying to its mailing office, No. 52 William street, New York. This pamphlet is called "Protection's 'Home Market.'" The figures in it have been in every case obtained from the manufacturers themselves, and in most instances are based upon a comparison of three documents—the regular price lists, the "domestic discount sheet" to the trade, and the "export discount sheet" as furnished by each manufacturer.

Now let Farmer Brown give a little study to some of the figures from this pamphlet, and he will see "how protection protects." Let him turn his attention first to his agricultural implements, reflecting that the manufacturers of these are protected by a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem.

These are the prices for home and export trade of the shovels manufactured by one of the most prominent members of the famous "Home Market Club" of Boston. Other manufacturers of shovels offer similar discounts. One firm in particular, whose advertisement has a very prominent place in the Australasian and South American, gives a discount on its list prices to the "home market" of from 15 to 25 per cent. while for the export markets its discount is 33⅓ per cent. For export all goods are delivered "free on board" at Boston or New York.

But how does the matter stand in Farmer Brown's tool chest, where the duty is also 45 per cent.?

But Mrs. Brown has an interest in this matter too. She cannot plead that she is a woman and that no one would be so unmanly and cruel as to make a discrimination against her in favor of the pauper wives of Europe. Let Mrs. Brown examine these figures:

Farmer Brown is just now in a bad way. As our high protectionist census taker, Robert P. Porter, puts it: "The American farmer is just now passing through the gloomy valley of hard times. Prices for his products are low; mortgages, even if made for purchase money or improvement in more hopeful times, are pressing, and it is difficult to make both ends meet."

What is the matter with Farmer Brown? That is the question of the day. Nobody ventures to answer, "He's all right!" Farmer Brown knows too well that he is not all right. Something is wrong, whatever it may be.

And Farmer Brown would like to strike—strike for something; but he, at least, cannot strike for eight hours a day.

The figures in this article show him one place where he might strike with profit:

The protective tariff!

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

HONORING THE MARTYRS.

DECORATION DAY OBSERVED IN TECUMSEH WITH BEAUTIFUL AND IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES.

A Fine Procession, an Interesting Program and a Profusion of Flowers.—How the Day was Celebrated.

The observance of Decoration Day in this year of grace, 1890, here in Tecumseh was a pronounced success. The clerk of the weather was in his most gracious mood for once. Everyone felt the inspiration of the beautiful weather, and entered into the work of preparation with zeal and alacrity. The vacant store in the Hewitt block was selected as a rendezvous for the boquet makers, and all the forenoon baskets and cartloads of flowers were carried thither, where willing hands were busy weaving them into beautiful wreaths and boquets. The supply of flowers was never more abundant, and they were never more tastily arranged.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the crowd began to gather on Chicago st., both from village and country, and by 2 o'clock several hundred people had gathered to witness the ceremonies of the day. The procession formed with the old City Band in the lead. Next followed Company C. with full ranks, Capt. Wood himself in command. Then came the members of the G. A. R. and S. of V., in their simple but tasty uniform, every one of whom had a wreath or boquet of flowers in his hand. The band contained a full complement of fifteen pieces. Co. C. had fifty men in the ranks and we never saw the boys make a better show on parade. Beers Post and the S. of V. had fifty more men in the ranks, and they were almost covered with flowers. Fred Rosecrans, Chas. F. Patterson and Jas. H. Aten acted as marshals. The procession marched west on Chicago street, and thence north on Union directly to the cemetery, where the exercises were held. A platform had been erected near the South-east entrance, which was neatly decorated with flags and bunting. Arriving there, the Post and Co. C. boys separated into squads and proceeding through the grounds deposited upon each soldier's grave a wreath and boquet. After performing this ceremony they returned to the stand when the following program was presented to a large gathering:

LITERARY PROGRAM.

1 Funeral March, Fallen Comrades—By the Band.
2 Rest, Soldier, Rest,—Male Quartette, composed of Messrs. Strong, Conkling, Dickinson and Heck. Miss Jennie Root presided at the organ.
3 Prayer—Rev. W. H. Babbitt.
4 Address—Rev. J. S. Joslin.
5 Nearer, my God, to Thee—By the Band.
6 Quartette—The Call of the Roll on High.
7 G. A. R. Memorial Service—Conducted by Commander Coddington.
8 America—By the choir and audience.

The entire program was very appropriate to the day and occasion. Rev. Mr. Joslyn's address was wholly impromptu and hence we cannot give it in full, but the following synopsis presents an imperfect outline of his remarks:

A great occasion has brought us together to-day. Of all the days which, in the progress of the ages, the nations have set apart to perpetuate the memory of some great event in their history, our Decoration Day is preeminent. For it is not only hallowed by the memory of our noble dead, but it is linked with events of surpassing interest to all men, and with principles dear to every true American and to every philanthropist in all the world. It is an occasion which stirs the pulses of the nation with mingled emotions of triumph and regret. That army once drawn up in battle array, from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, is again summoned together. You have heard the familiar order, "Fall into line." You heard it, in those far-off stormy years, amid rally of drums and rattle of musketry and crash of cannon; now you come as peaceful citizens of a peaceful and united country. But joy and sorrow are strongly blended in this world of ours. And to-day our triumph is saddened by the fact that only a lingering remnant respond to the call. The majority are wrapped in the sleep which the fierce tattoo, the shrill reveille, or the long rally call shall never disturb. Yet for them we need not grieve. They do not need the poor tribute of our tears. To die in the cause of the right and truth is a triumphant departure from the world. And while they have gone from the visible theater of this world's affairs they are not lost. They live in the grateful memory of the nation. They live in human thought and action. Being dead, they yet speak. And there are some things our dead soldiers are saying to us which it will be good for us to heed.

(1) They speak to us of the value of the prize they won—an undivided country renovated and redeemed. That value is indicated by the cost. Figures cannot express it. They tell us that after all the immense resources of the government were expended, a debt was left of nearly $3,000,000,000. That is quickly said but not easily comprehended. Counting at the rate of 100 a minute, and working 10 hours a day, it would take about 45 years to get over one billion. But in that cost are included other treasures which mathematics does not attempt to measure—the treasures of the heart and home, which mothers and wives and sisters laid willingly, yet with breaking hearts, upon their country's altar.

(2) Again they remind us of the magnitude of the work which was done. The Rebellion was a gigantic affair. Nine millions of people, covering territory equal to the German Empire, France, Spain, Portugal and Belgium combined, were to be subjugated. For such a task we had no army, no navy, no money. It was a work which has no parallel in history.

(3) Our heroic dead proclaim with a terrible emphasis that the Rebellion was an act of unpardonable wickedness. There has been a great deal of gush about "clasping hands across the bloody chasm," etc. I rejoice exceedingly that the starry flag floats triumphantly over Confederate and Federal alike; still I regret that the leaders of that rebellion were ever permitted to live under its protection.

(4) Our dead soldiers call upon us to perpetuate the principles for which they died. Personal freedom must be guarded; the Freedmen protected, and the encroachments of power, in the form of monopolies and immense concentration of capital, resisted. These are questions still unsettled in American society which may yet be referred to the decision of the sword; but our history is a guaranty for a future of unity and prosperity.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

The hot, dusty weather makes us long for the time when our school days shall be ended.

The holiday last week was fully appreciated by both teachers and pupils, many of whom were absent from town.

The class in Algebra II commenced their final review on Monday.

The many friends of our former schoolmate, Charlie Temple, will be glad to hear that he is attending the Saginaw International Business College, from which he will soon be graduated. He is also secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Saginaw.

Two of our Seniors recently went on a fishing excursion and appeared to have enjoyed it very much. The young man assured us that he had caught something, but as he could produce no fish and was finally compelled to admit that he had left the hooks at home, we are at a great loss to decide what e could have caught. Perhaps the young lady could enlighten us. R. F. H.

The readers of the TECUMSEH HERALD will be pleasead to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hunderd Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 5, 1890

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Summer opened most graciously this year.

Louis Schneider of Adrian, was in Tecumseh last Sunday.

Walter Burridge made a business trip to Adrian last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Smith, of Onsted, spent last Friday and Saturday with friends in Tecumseh.

John F. Buck of Saline, was in town Tuesday and gave the HERALD a call. He should come oftener.

Rev. F.G. Lyon, who is visiting at A. P. Coddington's, will occupy the Baptist pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

Putnam's Hotel at Sand Lake, is being put in readiness and will be opened for the reception of guests next week.

The concert to be given at the Presbyterian church to-morrow evening will be an excellent program and well worth attending.

Mr. & Mrs. Frank Bumann arrived from Florida last week, and will spend the summer months with their friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. Iry. Finch of Adrian, is becoming an expert bycicliist. She came to Tecumseh on a cycle last Sunday, accompanied by her husband.

Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Vail, of Rock Rapids, Iowa, arrived in town Monday evening and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Burroughs for about two weeks.

Treat the census enumerator kindly. His petty questions are asked, not to gratify his own personal curiosity, but in obedience to the commands of our Uncle Samuel. Give him an easy chair to sit in when he calls, and give him the name and age of every chick and child on the premises.

David J. Lewis, one of the ministers who held the series of meetings at the Friend's church of this place in the spring, has come to reside at Raisin Valley, and will preach at the Friend's church, Tecumseh, Sunday evening, June 8th. All are invited to attend.

The plays and pastimes of "A Boy's Town" are described in the instalment of Howell's story in the number of Harper's Young People, published May 27th. The author will doubtless be plied with questions as to who that boy mentioned by him was, "who wanted to be a pirate, and ended by inventing a steam-governor."

It might be a good plan when cleaning house, if you run across the bible to lay it on the shelf, as it may be convenient next mouth to tell the ages of the family.—Raisin Cor. Herald.

It would be wiser to lay it on your knee, open at that passage which saith: "It is better to dwell in a corner than in a wide house with a house-cleaning woman."—Adrian Press

W. D. Howell's new story "The Shadow of a Dream" has just been published by Messrs. Harper & Brothers. Some critics consider it such a tale as Poe or Hawthorne might have conceived, and detect in it a return to Mr. Howell's earlier romantic vein as exemplified in his Undiscovered Country; though they admit, as the Boston Traveler says, that "it is held with a firmer hand, and determined by a finer artistic treatment."

Any one interested in the sick-benefit, funeral-aid, and death-beneficiary associations of the United States can make the statistics of their organizations for the forthcoming census more complete and disseminate the knowledge of the good work they are doing by sending the names of such societies as they may know of, and the addresses of their principal officers, to Mr. Charles A. Jenney, Special Agent of the Eleventh Census, 58 William St., New York City.

A merry company gladdened the Baptist parsonage last Thursday evening, bringing with them provisions, canned fruit, various articles both useful and ornamental, and money. Much amusement was occasioned by a box of common sense (cents.) As a special feature of the visit, Mrs. Adkins was presented with a handsome black silk dress. Pleasant memories of hosts of Tecumseh friends will always be associated with the generous gifts.

We clip the following from the Washington items in Tuesday's Free Press: "Herbert L. McNair, of Tecumseh, for the past three and a half years a clerk in the office of the Second Auditor of the Treasury, has resigned. Mr. McNair, while occupying one of the most responsible positions in that bureau, completed a law course in the Columbian University and is a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the District. He goes to Colorado where he will locate permanently for the practice of the law.

Robert Stretch spent last Sunday at home.

Geo. W. Knapp has returned from an extended Northern trip.

David Berger has been treating his house to a new coat of paint.

Remember the Concert at the Presbyterian church to-morrow evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Kate Cleveland of Detroit, are spending the present week in Tecumseh.

Only three more weeks of school and the small boy is impatiently waiting for vacation.

Mrs. Elliott Gray is spending a week or two with her daughter, Mrs. Jos. Ryng of Madison.

The electric light wires are being strung this week and the entire circuit will soon be complete.

A position that holds good year after year is offered by R. G. Chase & Co., in an another column of this paper.

Mrs. A. M. Wheeler who has been spending the winter at Chicago, has returned and will remain at the old home during the summer.

Children's Day will be observed at the Presbyterian church next Sabbath, and the Sunday school are preparing a fine musical program to present at that time.

The Co. C boys are requested to bear in mind that the question of Armory location will come up next Tuesday evening, after drill, and it is hoped that every member will be on hand.

Commencement occurs only three weeks from to-day. Are the officers of the Alumni, who will have charge of the program this year, making arrangements for the coming reunion?

The members of the old city band are requested to meet at the band room this evening at 7:30 o'clock, sharp. The younger musicians who were not members of the old band are requested to be present also.

The Hudson Gazette says: "Tecumseh wants the Clinton Woolen Mills." That is not strictly true, neighbor. We have no desire to rob Clinton of her woolen industry, but we would like just as good a woolen mill of our own.

The effects of the short ice crop are already apparent. Birdsell & Glenn have closed their market till Oct. 1st. as they cannot afford to pay the present prices for ice. Many of our "first families" will have to go back to primitive times and eat butter with a spoon this summer.

"Godey" for June comes to us laden with richness of thought and intellectual fatness. Ladies need this periodical to make their households complete. It is worth double the price of a year's subscription. "Godey's Lady's Book" Company, Philadelphia Pa. Price, $2.00 per year.

The ladies are respectfully reminded that the census enumerator will insist upon knowing their age. By this we mean their exact age at present, not their age before the war, nor during the elder Harrison's administration. Forewarned is forearmed. A "woman's no" will not mean "yes" in this case.

A. W. Slayton tells us he has just made an extensive purchase of basswood lumber, 150 miles North of Milwaukee, Wis. He will move it by rail to Escanaba and from there to Detroit by boat. His inspector, Ed. Rogers, is there looking after it now. Gus says he must have basswood lumber; if Southern Michigan fails to have sleighing winters, he has to go farther north where they get them. He reports having lumber in pile at 21 stations, awaiting shipment, which comprises all kinds of hard wood and some pine. Gus is known far and wide as the "Basswood Lumber King."

DUN'S DIGEST

Of Commerce, Finance and Trade for the Past Week.

NEW YORK, June 3.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: Another week has brought the distinct reaction in speculative markets which was only suspected a week ago. Stocks and wheat have had a sharp decline, though the business in progress throughout the country seems about as large as at any previous time. With no disturbance in the money market, and no commercial disaster to cause apprehension, prices turned downward, and the expectation of an expansion of currency no longer suffices to lift things. Reports from interior cities continue highly encouraging. Improvement is observed at Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and other points where the brighter wheat prospects have the most effect, recent rains having justified larger estimates. At the South the crop prospects are fair, and business is satisfactory for the season. At the East groceries have been comparatively active, and the boot and shoe trade, while strikers still fail to disturb the markets for building materials. The great industries have not materially changed in position, for although speculation in cotton has advanced the price again, and has caused some advance in cotton goods, particularly in bleached, the demand is only steady, and print cloths have not risen. Wool is called firm only because buyers and sellers do not yet make concessions. The iron and steel industry has not yet realized the decided improvement which dealers hoped was foreshadowed by the firmer tone last week, and buyers do not forget that the present production at the rate of nine millions of tons yearly, is more than the country has ever yet taken into consumption. The works are generally employed upon orders for sometime ahead. In the speculative markets wheat has had a sharp fall of 5½ cents on sales of thirty-five million bushels here, in part because rains throughout the northwest greatly improved the spring wheat outlook, but also because high prices had checked exports. Corn has been unchanged and oats ⅛ cent lower. Oil speculation has also weakened 2¼ cents. But cotton has been screwed up another one-fourth of a cent by manipulation, and coffee has been lifted as much. The stock market has had a considerable reaction, by most persons attributed to the appointment of a receiver for Chicago gas trust, and the sharp fall in that and sugar trust stocks. The money markets of the interior have been amply supplied, and while money is stiffer at Boston, close at Cleveland, and in brisk demand at Milwaukee, the demand is good at Kansas City, fair at Chicago and moderate at most other western towns, but the market is stronger at St. Louis.

The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days, as reported to R. G. Gun & Co., number, for the United States 204 and Canada 14, or a total of 218 failures, as compared with a total of 222 last week and 212 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 215, representing 300 failures in the United States and 15 in Canada.

Cobbs, of Montgomery; Attorney-general, W. L. Martin, of Jackson; Superintendent of Education, J. G. Harris, of Sumter.

A Bad Wreck.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 2.—Between 4 and 4 o'clock Saturday morning five cars in a westward bound freight train, on track No. 3 of the New York Central railroad, at Macedon, jumped the tracks. A fast freight on track 1, east bound, was so near the wrecked train that it could not stop in time to avoid a collision, and the engine and five cars were piled on the track. No one was hurt.

NEWARK, O., June 2.—The Democratic primary election was held Saturday to nominate county officers. To-night at midnight twenty-one precincts give Pigg 930, Brister 827, Taylor 682 and Follett 489. DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Send for our book treating on catarrh. FOSTER, MILBURN & Co., proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in Tecumseh, Mich., by C. A. Wright & Co., druggists.

Every Two and a Half Minutes

The blood makes a circuit of the body every 2½ minutes, delivering nutriment and taking back waste matter to be filtered out by the liver and kidneys and removed from the body through the bowels and the urinary secretion. Any stoppage or obstruction of this process may produce various forms of disease, such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Headache, Debility and bad blood with its multiplied evils (boils, blotches, pimples, sores, eruptions, abscesses and the like). When such obstructions exist as evidenced by the presence of complaints similar to those just mentioned, the best medicine to use is Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks the secretions; removing all impure and effete matter through the proper channels. By restoring healthy action of the stomach, liver, and kidneys and bowels, B. B. B. removes all impurities of the blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

A FOOLISH NOTION.

Emily Concludes That Matches Are Made in Heaven.

"Can't you pick over these blackberries, Emily? I don't know how I'll ever get through if you don't," and Mrs. Moore sighed as she thought of the many things yet to be done that day.

"Why, I would, ma, but you know how dreadfully they stain a body's hands, and he is coming to-night."

Could any but a silly girl make such a speech? And yet Emily Moore was not a silly girl except on one subject. She had the foolish, but not uncommon, idea, that a woman's chief aim in life is to secure a husband. She had been on the outlook for some time, and had nearly reached twenty-five without having found one. She had, however, left no stone unturned.

Her first attempt was with the village doctor. He was young and handsome and had a good practice. She was in too good health to need his professional service, but she began to evince a wonderful interest in Materia Medica, and much solicitude for all his patients, especially among the poorer classes, to whom she offered to act as nurse, and to whom she frequently carried little delicacies. The doctor often complimented her tact and seeming aptitude for nursing, and spoke in high terms of her kindly interest in his patients. It was not long before she began to imagine the doctor to be in love with her; and she was about settling down to the happy contemplation of this and that which she would do as soon as she became Mrs. Doctor, when one day he suddenly disappeared from town, leaving word he would be gone one week, but had arranged with old Dr. Payne to attend to those who might need his services during that time. Emily felt disappointed that she had not been taken into confidence concerning this absence, but when a week later he returned, bringing him a bride, her chagrin and vexation knew no bounds.

Her interest in the sick began to wane, and it is doubtful what would have become of her and her surplus energy had not the Presbyterian church soon after called a young minister. He had not been in town long ere Miss Emily began to take a greater interest in the sewing circle and a more active part in the missionary society, and became quite regular in attending all meetings. Thanksgiving came, and the minister was asked to share the turkey. Next a fair about Christmas and a box for a home missionary, in the planning and working for both of which Miss Emily was most active and much thrown into the company of the minister. He frequently called at the house to consult her on various matters, and she was fast beginning to feel quite certain that by this time next year all would be settled, when one day it was whispered through the congregation that the minister was going to marry that quiet Miss Norton, who lived two miles out of town, to whom nobody ever seemed to give a passing thought and who was rarely seen in town except on Sundays. Emily couldn't see just why it was, but she accepted the inevitable, and in course of time recovered sufficiently to feel a desire to attempt fresh conquests.

Her next object was the new clerk her father had hired. Mr. Moore owned and kept the general store in the village. Harry Ames was a pleasing, intelligent young man. Emily would have liked him in spite of herself, and he in turn liked her. As he boarded with them they were thrown much together. Her father took a good deal of interest in him and had more than once hinted that he would give Harry a better chance some day. To marry her father's clerk was perhaps not as pleasing to her vanity as becoming the doctor's or the minister's wife would have been, but then, it must be remembered, the doctor was married and the minister was to be soon, so what was the use of wasting more thought on either of them? To marry his employer's daughter is usually considered quite a distinction, and so Miss Emily did not feel it incumbent on her to exert herself in order to be interesting and attractive, and for this reason she really appeared to better advantage than ever before. She was naturally a kind-hearted, agreeable girl, and when not affecting something for which she only imagined an interest was a pleasing, bright and entertaining companion. She would have made Harry Ames a good wife, and he would have soon become not only a suitor, but an accepted suitor, if something had not happened.

Widow Wilson's summer boarders had arrived, and among them two young ladies from the city. Emily made their acquaintance, and ere long became very intimate with them. She eagerly drank in all they said of the city and of city ways, while they in turn enjoyed playing upon the credulity of one who knew no more of the city than a squirrel. They were [illegible] girls who had been brought up with the idea that work of every kind is derogatory, and they soon made poor Emily believe that only those who never worked were real ladies.

Little by little she became more cautious in her intercourse with Harry Ames, and began in one way and another to show that his addresses were not altogether pleasing to her.

Not long after the advent of the two young ladies at Mrs. Wilson's there came a gentleman, also from the city. He was soon attracted by the fresh face and pretty ways of Emily Moore, not imagining the foolish ideas these two silly women had given her, nor suspecting that from the moment she first saw him she determined to capture him. With her quick intuition she readily discovered his great fondness for reading. Now a few books from the Sunday-school library and the stories in magazines was the extent of Emily's reading, but by means of her ever-ready tact she drew him to speak of his favorite books and authors. She managed to so agree with him and to so store up for future use this and that from his conversation as to give him the impression that she was more than ordinarily well read.

To this one it was she referred when pleading. "He is coming to-night" as an excuse for not staining her hands. He came, and her hands were as white and beautiful as the most fastidious could desire; but, having no false notions about such things, "beautiful hands," were to him those that do

"Work that is earnest, brave and true, Moment by moment the long day through."

Had he heard her remark that morning he would have been right speedily cured of his infatuation, but that was soon to follow. With him he had brought a copy of Pope's "Essay on Man." Handing it to her, he said:

"Have you read this, Miss Moore?"

She believed she had not, at least not all of it, but had for a long time been quite anxious to do so, whereupon he proposed leaving it for her perusal.

The next Monday morning found Emily busily engaged upon the week's washing, just outside the kitchen door.

Strolling out for a walk "he" had wandered back to Mrs. Moore's house, and there discovered Emily with her white arms in the suds.

"Heigh-ho!" said he, "that hardly accords with all she has said. Where are the 'colored servants' she so often speaks of? I'd as soon find her washing as doing any thing else, and respect her the more for it, if it were necessary, but if she's fool enough to think I would not, and is in that way 'laying pipe,' to catch me, I'll find it out."

Concocting some excuse for calling, he made a detour to the front door, and rang the bell. A little colored girl appeared.

"Is Miss Moore at home?"

"Yes, sah."

"Ask her if I can see her a moment."

"Yes, sah," and the little sable face disappeared, to reappear in a moment or two and ascend the front stairs.

Several minutes elapsed when she returned, saying: "Miss Emily'll be down presently."

More minutes pass, and one hand of his watch has made a quarter of its circular journey, when he heard a light tread on the stairs, and, looking up, beheld what a mighty transformation a short time can make in a woman's appearance. The turned-up skirt, the big checked apron, the rolled-up sleeves and tumbled hair were all things of the past, and in their place was a trailing morning dress, with unrumpled ruching in the sleeves, and smooth and shining locks, among which nestled a freshly-picked rose. To be sure the hands were a trifle red and somewhat puckered, but they were partially concealed by a book which she carried.

"Good morning, Mr. Bond. I am delighted to see you. I trust you will excuse me for keeping you waiting. I was reading Pope's 'Easy on Man,' and was so absorbed I delayed a moment before coming down."

The new title she gave the book caused a smile to flit across the young man's face, which, however, she took as an evidence that he was pleased with the alleged cause of her delay.

"Is that it you have in your hand?" he said. "Allow me to see how far you have read," and he arose and took the book, discovering, as he did so, that in her haste she had picked up a copy of the New Testament, which very closely resembled in size, form and binding the "Essay on Man," and that in addition to this she had been holding it bottom upwards. Without betraying the mingled amusement and disgust which he felt, he quietly closed the book and laid it down. Then pleading his excuse for having called, which excuse fortunately did not conflict with his mental resolve to never again cross the threshold, he took his departure.

Emily looked in vain for the return of her city lover. She never saw him again, but a few days later heard he had gone back to the city. Probably she discovered the mistake she had made in picking up the wrong book, and perhaps she did the one she had made in its title. Anyway the lesson cured her of duplicity and caused her to stop and think. And as she thought she saw how foolish and wicked she had been in trying to coerce a matter of this kind, and not cheerfully and heartily doing the work her hands found to do, and waiting till the one for whom Heaven designed her sought her out.—Maro Damen, in Boston Budget.

The Color of Broom Corn.

Says a broom-corn dealer: "A few years ago, all broom corn was so bleached with sulphur fumes as to make it so white that it nearly destroyed its pliability, and it sometimes broke to pieces much more rapidly than it should have done. Now the broom-makers have gone to the other extreme. They dye their broom corn so green that housekeepers are afraid to break off one of the splints to test a cake with, for fear they may be poisoned with Paris green."

Too Much Nuptial Rice.

A New Haven man, after putting rice into every thing he could think of belonging to a bridal party, put some in the bride's traveling ink well. Of course the rice swelled when thoroughly soaked in the writing fluid, and then the little vessel was forced open and the ink ruined exquisitely embroidered handkerchiefs and other dainty articles a bride usually carries in her reticule.

Some High-Priced Relics.

The hat worn by Napoleon I. at the battle of Eylau was sold in Paris in 1885 for $400. There were 32 bidders, and the first bid was 500 francs. The coat worn by Charles XII. at the battle of Poltowa and preserved by one of his officers, was sold in 1825 for $116,875. The two pens used in signing the treaty of Amiens were sold the same year for $1,250 each.

TEACHING HOW TO PRAY.

LESSON X, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 8.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xi, 1-13—Commit Verses 9-13—Golden Text, Luke xi, 9. Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

All that is recorded between the last lesson and this one is the most interesting and instructive incident of Jesus in the house of Martha (chap. x, 38-42). I have no doubt but that both women were true disciples of Jesus (see John xi, 5, 27) and that Mary was as willing to do housework as Martha; but the attitude of soul which Jesus commends in Mary, and which was lacking in Martha, was the greater interest in the things unseen than in the things of this life. Mary was increasing in riches which she would never lose; while Martha, though just as safe as Mary, was more careful about the many things of this life which sooner or later must all be left behind.

1. "And it came to pass, that as He was praying in a certain place." Luke records more instances of the Saviour's praying than either of the others. In Luke alone do we find that He prayed at His baptism, at His transfiguration, after He cleansed the leper, and before He chose the twelve (iii, 21; ix, 29; v, 16; vi, 12, 13). The incident of our lesson also is found only in Luke. If we were more intimate with our Father in Heaven, we would more often be found in communion with Him; the earth would be a more lonely place to us, and we would have more heart craving for Christ himself.

"Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." In the sermon on the mount Jesus had already taught how to pray (Matt. vi, 9-13), but as it was after that the twelve were chosen, it is probable that the disciple who asked this question was not present at that time.

2. "And He said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in Heaven." In His Sermon on the Mount Jesus said, "Your Father which is in Heaven," or "your Heavenly Father," eight times, "Thy or your Father" seven times, "My Father which is in Heaven" once, and "Our Father which art in Heaven" once.

"Hallowed be Thy Name." In His last prayer with His disciples Jesus said to His Father, "I have manifested Thy Name;" "I have declared unto them Thy Name." At another time he prayed, "Father, glorify Thy Name" (John xvii, 6, 26; xii, 28).

"Thy kingdom come." The God of Heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms of this world and it shall stand forever.

"Thy will be done, as in Heaven, so in earth." When this petition shall have been manifestly answered, then the kingdom shall have come. But until God's will is done on earth as it is in Heaven let no one say that the kingdom has come. In proportion as we now delight to do His will we shall individually have a foretaste of the kingdom in our hearts and lives.

3. "Give us day by day our daily bread." Sustenance for body and soul as each day shall require; but one day at a time. "A daily rate for every day all the days of his life" was what a certain king gave to one who was his captive (II Ki. xxv, 30).

4. "And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." When He taught them this prayer in the sermon on the mount, He added: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." God did tempt, or try, or prove Abraham; and James says, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation;" but he also adds, "God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man" (Gen. xxii, 1; Jas. i, 12-15). Temptations, in the sense of trials, are our greatest blessings (Jas. i, 2; I Pet. iv, 12, 13); and God is faithful who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able (I Cor. x, 13). Perhaps the best explanation of this petition will be found in the light of Matt. iv; 1, "Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil," and in the fact that He, knowing what it means, would as far as possible spare us.

5-7. "Friend, lend me three loaves; for a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him." Jesus now uses the illustration of a friend coming to a friend, on behalf of another friend, and at a very unseasonable hour, but with a very urgent request; and the request is denied, for the man of whom the request is made thinks more of the comfort of his children, who are in bed with him, than of the need.

8. "Because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth." The word for importunity is used only this once in the Bible, and signifies literally "shamelessness" or "impudence" or "rough earnestness." Here is an earnestness, not very seemly, but which accomplishes its end, even at the expense of the children's comfort. He seems to teach us that there is a taking hold of God in prayer as Jacob did when in his helplessness he clung to the angel, saying, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

9. "And I say unto you, Ask and it shall be given you." "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it." "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you" (Matt. xxi, 22; John xiv, 13, 14; xv, 7). These are a few of the many plain, emphatic words of our Lord upon asking and receiving, but who believes them? Who thus asks and receives?

"Seek and ye shall find." "Ye shall seek me and find me when ye shall search for me with all your heart." "Those that seek me diligently shall find me" (Jer. xxix, 13; Prov. viii, 17, R. V.) When we seek according to the mind of God and with the whole heart; when we seek spiritual good as men seek silver or hidden treasures (Pr. ii, 4), then we may expect to find.

"Knock, and it shall be opened unto you." "In Christ is redemption" in all its fullness, and "in Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." No one knocking at His door can knock in vain, for his own promise is, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (Eph. i, 7; Col. ii, 3; John vi, 37). How sad the contrast in Rev. iii, 20, where Jesus is seen standing at the door of the church that bears His name, but He is [illegible] if there is any individual that will let him in, that He may sup with them.

10. "For every one that asketh receiveth," etc. And these promises and statements about asking, seeking, knocking, are prefixed by His emphatic "I say unto you." How comforting are the words of I John v, 14, 15: "And this is the confidence that we have in Him, that if we ask anything according to His will, He heareth us; and if we know that he hears us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him."

11, 12. "If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone?" In the previous illustration He encourages to ask; and now He encourages to expect what we ask for.

13. "How much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?" If a father will give to a friend, how much more will a father give to his son?

STONE IN THE KIDNEY.

I was first taken with sharp pains in the lower part of my bowels in the region of the bladder. Shortly blood appeared mixed with my urine, and a few weeks later I had an attack of gravel. I tried a number of doctors. One said it was gravel, another and another stone in the kidneys. For three months I was under the care of an eminent doctor at Albany, but constantly growing worse, went home to die. At this time I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and am now robust and strong. A remedy which can do this for one so near death as I was should be known everywhere. I hope this statement will cause others afflicted as I was to use the Remedy.—C. W. Brown, Petersburgh, N. Y.

Inflammation of the Bladder,

The Clinton girls are trying to find one hundred friends, and of each they ask a penny. Boys, go down in your alamagoosalum box and see if you have any. Some fail to find one hundred friends and say that it's no fun, and take the cash they have collected and blow it in for gum. While others who have succeeded think it just the thing; take their hundred pennies and buy a friendship ring.

THE LAST GHOST STORY.

Another ghost story exploded. For several nights strange noises have been heard in a house on Henry street. The lady of the house insisted that "spirits" were the cause of the racket and her peace of mind as well as her peaceful slumbers were much disturbed. Her better half, who is not one of the faint hearted kind, several times arose and arming himself with a boot-jack, started to hunt down the spectre, but upon his approach all was quiet, and he would retire to his couch for another nap, but soon the same strange sounds would be heard. Growing desperate he determined to [illegible] the disturber and instituted a thorough search which was awarded by his finding—a rat which had got into a barrel in the cellar. The cover of the barrel was so balanced that each time it was struck by the prisoner it made a noise like the "mysterious rappings" and Mr. rat was again precipitated to the bottom of the barrel. The rat is dead and the lady breathes easier.—Saline Observer.

VETERANS OF THE CIVIL WAR.

As a part of the census of the people to be taken during the month of June special provision has been made by Congress for ascertaining the names of surviving soldiers, sailors and marines who were mustered into the service of the rebellion, and of the widows of soldiers, sailors, and marines who have died. In connection with thi special census of veterans the organization or vessel in which they served the term of service in each case, and present residence will be taken by the census enumerators. In the case of widows, information regarding the service of their deceased husbands is also required.

The importance of accurate statements concerning the military record of each participant in the late war should not be underestimated. It should be the duty, moreover, of every veteran soldier or sailor to see that the enumerator is placed in possession of the necessary information concerning his own service. If he cannot be at home when the enumerator calls he should leave a proper memorandum in the hands of his wife or other member of his household, so that the work of the census may not be delayed, and also that there may be no doubt as to the accuracy of the statements concerning his service which may be given to the census enumerator. That there may be no question as to the points to be covered by this memorandum, it may be well to state that the special inquiries to be made concerning veterans of the civil war include the name, the company, and the regiment or vessel in which they served, their late rank, the dates of enlistment and discharge, the length of service in years, months, and days, and their present post-office address. Where a soldier or sailor re-enlisted or served in more than one organization or vessel, he should be very careful to give the term of service in each instance, and to cover each enlistment. In giving the organization care should be taken to distingush the arm of the service, as infantry, cavalry, artillery, etc., and if a person served under an assumed name, his statement should be to cover both the name under which he served and the true name by which he is now known.

Veterans of the war generally will recognize and appreciate the value of this special census to them, and they should aid the census enumerator in getting true statements in every way possible. Without their co-operation correct results cannot be reached. This personal appeal is made to them, therefore, in the hope that their attention may be specially directed to the importance of this work and the necessary information may be promptly supplied to the census enumerator when he calls some time during the month of June.

Girls and Mothers Read This!

I wish to tell you of the case of a girl 16 years old, who had been sick with suppression two years. Her father had paid over $300 for doctors' bills, still she was failing. She had the worst countenance that I have ever seen, a kind of greenish yellow, she was emaciated, had constant bowel trouble, and had to take morphine every night in order to sleep at all. All who saw her thought she would die. Her parents said thay had done all they could. I repeatedly urged them to try Zoa-Phora, but they were strongly prejudaginst "nostrums." Finally the mother said, "We must do something and this is as likely to help her as anything She and I pursuaded the father to let the girl try it. As a result, in four months her functions were established and regular, and in six months she was the picture of health—a living wonder to all who had known her.

I could describe 20 other cases, not as wonderful as this, but still very remarkable cures.

Lou Arner, who came home from Manchester last week, is under the doctor's care with rheumatic fever and bronchial pneumonia.

A friend of the Messenger hands your correspondent the following acknowledgement of the free advertisement given that aggressive and newsy paper and its news editor, in last week's issue of the HERALD. Surely prohibition is the Messenger news editor's "idol." It was ten years ago when he was elected to the legislature, after publicly pledging himself to vote for the submission of the Prohibitory Amendment. In the legislature of which he was a member, out of the 132 members 116 were Republicans. Over 100,000 petitioners asked for submission, but by a combination of the liquor dealers and politicians the measure was defeated. The Messenger news editor at that time advocated and voted for submission or prohibition, but not till then did he understand that the Republican party would not, or never could "advocate principles" against the liquor traffic without losing the liquor vote, which it chose then to obey, and has since prostituted its rule to the dictation of brewers and liquor dealers. This "news editor" advocated the same principles in 1880-1 that he is advocating to-day; therefore "he did tell the truth then," and "it is the truth today." The "advocate" and the "principle" remain just the same but the G. O. P. has gone off and left both. As Senator Ingalls recently said, while discussing politics from his Republican standpoint: "The decalogue and the Golden rule have no place in a political campaign."

The following resolutions were passed and adopted by the members of the Epworth League, June 10th, on the death of Mr. John W. Baker, Jr., which occured June 6, 1890.

WHEREAS, In view of the loss we have sustained by the death of our friend and associate, Mr. John W. Baker, Jr., and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to him; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that, in regretting his removal from our midst, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and regard.

Resolved, That we sincerely condole with the family of the deceased on the dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them and commend them for consolation to Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be put upon the Epworth League record, and a copy be sent to the Tecumseh HERALD for publication.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

James A. Jackson dissolved his house of this earthly tabernacle and crossed over the river June 9th, at five o'clock A. M.

Mr. Jackson was born in Groveland, Livingston Co., N. Y., in 1810. He remained with his parents until 1834, when he united in marriage with Miss Lavinia Arner, of Groveland, N. Y. In October of the following year the young husband and wife resolved to try the then new west of Michigan. Proceeding to Buffalo by ox team they embarked on a boat for Monroe, Mich. Arriving there they proceeded again by ox team, arriving safely in Macon after two weeks' travel by land and water. They lived one year with his wife's parents, Peter Arner, who lived one mile north of Pennington's Corners. He then leased a piece of land of Samuel Linsley, where he remained nine years, working at the carpenter's trade. About the first work that he did in the West was in the Globe mill at Tecumseh, walking home every night through the woods, a distance of about seven miles. In 1845 he bought a few acres of land and built a house on it, along the old trail road from Tecumseh to Saline. Here he lived until his demise. The workmanship of his hands can be seen in all directions for miles around, as there is scarcely an old-time barn he did not build or assist in building.

He was a kind husband and a loving father, willing to sacrifice anything for the comfort or good of his family. He was a firm and ardent believer in the Saviour's love, and had taken him for his portion many years since, and had the assurance that when he came down to the valley and shadow of death that His rod and His staff would comfort him. Though he was a great sufferer he bore it patiently until the end, for he had dying grace given him in time of need.

There were born to them eight children—four boys and four girls,—two of the girls having crossed the river. There are left his widow and four sons and two daughters to mourn his departure. They are as follows: M. A. Jackson, of Eyart; J. L. Jackson, of Macon; G. W. Jackson, of Tecumseh; William Jackson, of Arkansas; Mrs. Geo. Frost, of Macon, and Mrs. John Winchell, of Leslie, all of whom wish to extend their thanks to the friends that so kindly assisted them in their late bereavement. J. J.

A SAD AND SUDDEN DEATH.

Death cometh—to all, soon or late; but when a young man entering upon the active duties of life, with bright promise of future usefulness before him, is stricken down by some awful accident, the shock to family and friends is doubly sad. John W. Baker Jr. was one of the brightest young men of Macon. He was always a boy of steady, industrious habits. At seventeen years of age he had passed a full course of study in the Ridgeway School and became a teacher. His first school was taken in the Mills district in that township, where he taught three successive terms with such excellent results that he was invited to conduct the same school a second year. His school closed last week Thursday, and upon Friday morning he started with some companions for Evans Lake to spend ten days in rest and recreation. About three o'clock that morning he left his father's home and went to Chas. Burleson's, where George and Lilbern, Mr. Burleson's sons joined him. Maynard Hatch also joined the party and the four young men proceeded to Evans Lake, intending to camp out upon one of the Islands in the lake. Soon after their arrival, as they had been through a long hot drive, young Baker concluded to go in bathing. One of the other boys rowed the boat out from the island where the two others were pitching their tent. Baker could not swim and grasping one end of the boat he waded out from shore, when suddenly he walked off an abrupt declivity into water beyond his depth He came up once, and even then his companions thought him fooling. When he arose to the surface a second time the boy in the boat made a vigorous effort to rescue him, was drawn overboard into the water and only released himself after much difficulty. Baker's body did not rise to the surface again. The alarm was given and the neighbors in the vicinity promptly responded, but it was nearly two hours before the body was procured and conveyed to the hotel. Two of the young men then returned to Macon as speedily as possible and broke the sad news to his parents. The hearse from Ridgeway brought the remains to his father's early on Saturday morning. The obsequies were held at the Ridgeway M. E. Church on Sunday at 2:30 P. M. and it was the most imposing funeral demonstration ever witnessed in the little village on the Ridge. The large audience room of the Church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Rev. E. W. Borden officiated, who is an old friend of the family. He selected his text from the 77th. Psalm, 19th. verse, "Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known" and delivered an eloquent discourse. Rev. J. A. Lowry followed in a few closing remarks which touched all hearts. Friends attended the services from Clinton, Britton and Tecumseh, and it seemed as though the entire township of Macon was present. The floral tributes were exceedingly beautiful. The gates ajar with name on the base was furnished by his young acquaintances in Macon. The pupils of his school presented a star and crescent, and there were many other individual offerings of beautiful design. Mrs. Williams' Sunday School class, consisting of twelve young men, of which the deceased was a member, acted as an escort to the hearse and carried the floral offerings from the church to the Ridgeway cemetery, where the lifeless remains were deposited in the silent tomb.

The story of his life, like the story of his untimely death, is briefly told. He was born upon the old farm in Macon eighteen years ago, and his earthly home had always been with his parents. He was noted from early boyhood for his genial disposition and studious habits. He was an excellent scholar, finished a course of study, and became a teacher at the early age of seventeen. During a series of meetings at Ridgeway in November last he made a public profession of religion, and united with the Ridgeway Church on probation at that time. He was beloved by all who knew him, and was developing into a manhood that gave promise of the highest usefulness. It is hard to realize that a young man who was closing his first year's school on Thursday afternoon, full of life and manly ambition, should be borne to the tomb by his companions on the Sunday following. The afflicted family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in this sad and mournful visitation. But human sympathy is a slender reed to lean upon in such a calamity. The bereaved friends must seek their chief consolation from Him, who alone can heal the sorrowing heart and dry the mourner's tears.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JUNE 12

The McGinty tariff bill is bound to go to the bottom and is likely to carry the Republican party along with it.

Uncle Jerry Rusk advises the Kansas corn burners to diversify their crops. If they will diversify their ballots occasionally, they may be happy yet.

The secret influence which prompted Major McKinley to put a duty on eggs is now revealed. It was to help one R. B. Hayes, a distinguished poultry raiser of Fremont, Ohio.

The trouble with Major McKinley was this: He took the Chicago platform seriously and made an effort to carry out its pledges. He might have taken a few pointers from the President with profit.

There is only this difference between Major McKinley and Dick Turpin. Dick robbed the rich to give to the poor. The Major, if the tariff bill becomes a law, would rob the poor to give to the rich.

Mr. Butterworth thinks that the House is not exactly in touch with the people on the tariff question. Very likely. The House is having its touch now, and the people will have their touch next November.

A correspondent in the Free Press suggests the name of Gen. John G. Parkhurst of Coldwater as the Democratic candidate for governor this fall. It would be an excellent nomination, both personally and politically.

Grover Cleveland's great tariff reform message raised an issue that is growing and expanding every day. The high tariff ring may try to smother discussion. They may cry peace, peace; but there will be no peace until this issue is settled and settled right.

This was Andrew Jackson's plan for the relief of the farmer: "Stop taking their substance by unnecessary taxation and leave that which is not necessary for meeting the expenses of the government in the pockets of the consumers." What a far call between "Old Hickory" and McKinley.

Uncle Jerry Rusk's message is a curiosity. After knocking in the head the favorite protection argument that the present tariff has benefited the farmer, he proceeds to argue that the true way for the farmer to recover his prosperity, is to tax the rest of the people for his benefit. Having robbed Peter to pay Paul, we should now reverse engines and rob Paul to pay Peter.

The New York Sun says: "Our esteemed contemporary, the Richmond Times, is very much mistaken if it supposes that the Sun has no opinion to express considering the Mckinley tariff bill. Our opinion of that measure has been put into words more than once; but it is still at the service of our Virginia friend. The McKinley tariff bill is a fine old Republican humbug.

Both Boniface Morton and Autocrat Reed of Washington are in full cry after the Presidency, it is said. How much better it would be if they would agree to hunt together. Reed and Morton or Morton and Reed would sound well in a Presidental campaign, and then the machine poets who grind out campaign songs would find a beautiful rhyme already in hand in quorum and Shoreham.—Chicago Times.

Senator Quay should muzzle Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson without any delay. Mr. Clarkson's confession that Democratic newspapers were outstripping Republican [illegible] But his "give away" in his last after-dinner speech at Boston caps the climax: "In speaking," he said, "of the excess of Democratic circulation over Republican I class the independent papers as Democratic. I know no other way to classify them. I take them at their own assignment. I always find them working on the Democratic side. I do not know of a single independent paper with a Republican slant." True, every word. The independent papers, which have no interest except to protect the rights of the people and inculcate political truth, are all working for tariff reform.

CURRENT COMMENT.

KNIFING HIS OWN FRIENDS.

Reed's gag rules are working to demonetize silver. This is what Western Republicans get for putting their neck through the Wall street collar.—St. Louis Republic.

MARCHING ON.

Oregon, which gave Harrison nearly 7,000 plurality, has just chosen a democratic governor. The cause of democracy and revenue reform is marching on.—Boston Globe.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

The Appellate court at Chicago has decided that a woman who pours kerosene on her husband, lights a match and turns him up, can collect the insurance on his life. And yet there are people in this country who claim that women have no rights.—Peoria Transcript.

HE DID NOT PROMISE.

A Genesee county man sent a water pitcher to President Harrison with the suggestion that it take the place of wine decanters on the White House table. The president acknowledged the gift, but as may be readily imagined he didn't promise to adopt the suggestion.—Michigan Messenger.

THE CRAZY QUILT TARIFF BILL.

The protest of New York merchants against the McKinley crazy-quilt tariff is attaining the proportions of one of the most formidable commercial demonstrations of the day. A great committee of two hundred merchants is being formed to go to Washington to oppose the bill.—N. Y. Star.

GOING TO THUNDER.

An Ohio editor of the rural class remarks that Mr. McKinley's wisdom and eloquence shown in his dealing with the tariff bill, will go "thundering down the ages." There has been a very general impression in many circles that Mr. McKinley, like the party which he represents, is going to thunder.—Detroit Free Press.

UNCLE JERRY'S LATEST SCHEME.

When Uncle Jerry Rusk has convinced all the farmers that a high tariff is good for them, he will start his scheme for raising tiger beetles for the protection of the American potato patch. If the census enumerators would take the trouble to ascertain the death rate among the Colorado bugs where the tiger has been let loose, Uncle Jerry would be greatly helped.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE TROUBLE IN MAINE.

A secret vote would emancipate many citizens of Maine from domination of the bosses. This the bosses do not want. And so they strangled the Australian ballot act by an overwhelming majority. If every Maine voter had the privilege of casting a free ballot the state would swing into the Democratic column. Mr. Blaine and Mr. Reed know this, and knowing it, they gave the order to stifle every attempt to change the existing conditions.—Boston Republic.

THEY ARE HEADING FOR SALT CREEK.

The McKinley bill occupies 156 pages, but discussion was peremptorily choked off by its sponsor after the forty-second page had been reached. By such methods did this infamous measure receive the sanction of the House. Many prominent Republican journals frankly inform the Senate that unless it modifies its more objectionable features the party responsible for it might as well buy property and prepare to locate permanently at the head of Salt River.—Houston Post.

INDEPENDENT PARTIES.

All reports of "independent political party" organization may be taken with the proverbial "grain of salt," when it is promised such new organization shall take in all the people who are banded together in some other and totally different organization, which was founded for other than partisan political action. It is no new thing for irresponsible or dissatisfied individuals to assume the right to speak for organizations in which they are truth very insignificant units. It is well to bear in mind that the three tailors who issued the manifesto, "We, the people of London," were not the entire population of that city.—Toledo Bee.

A SOLEMN NOTE OF WARNING.

Speaking of the recent tariff reform meeting in Philadelphia, the Telegraph of that city, a Republican Journal, says: "If the McKinley bill was not so violently contrary to genuine Republican doctrine, if it was not such a selfish, one-sided, and unwise measure, so vulnerable at many points, this demonstration in the home of American protection would not have been made at this time. It comes as a solemn note of warning, if it is not heeded there will be lasting regret on the part of the Republican party and those responsible for its course. The McKinley bill should be amended in accordance with the demands so loudly made by the best Republican sentiment in the country. Its opponents should be disarmed now, and not permitted to go into next fall's campaign loaded with the material now in their possession. The opposition to this measure is not confined to any part of the country.

REDUCED TAXATION.

The Albany Argus publishes the following letter from Congressman Breckinridge, of Arkansas, to a prominent resident of Albany:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.
WASHINGTON, April 17, 1890.

Hon. John B. Thacher, Albany, N. Y.—My Dear Sir—It seems to me that what is pre-eminently needed for the prosperity of the masses, in the Northern states especially, is a thorough reform of our whole system of tariff taxation. It is true that the Republicans seem about to enter upon an era of great extravagance, and, I may say, corruption. This, of course, will add to the burdens of every part of the country. Along with this policy, they are using every artifice to make the people think they are doing something else. If there happens to be an election, wrong or crime in any part of the South, they do not content themselves with denouncing the crime or the criminal, but they arraign all of the twenty or twenty-five millions of people in that part of our common country.

The most insignificant personal crimes, that have no relation to elections, such as must occur among all large bodies of people, are grossly exaggerated and distorted. Indeed, while these matters are, in my opinion singularly few in the Southern states, yet they and the people there are judged by rules unknown in our practices toward other communities. This is all simply a cover and a blind under which to obtain aggrandizement of power, and on the part of certain adventurous elements also of wealth. It is meant to entrench the party in the good graces of many in order that it may look to them in the future for pecuniary aid and support. The root of the matter is the tariff and its features of class legislation.

I think it very important that the campaign of education should be conducted in the way you propose. To check corruption will not remove the causes of these things. The distress among the laboring classes and the inequalities we observe in the distribution of wealth will continue even after we may rebuke the impending policy of corruption and misrule. The issue must be met. I see no hope for the maintenance of our institutions unless this combination of corruption and fanaticism is overthrown.

We are drifting rapidly into socialism which, of course, would speedily be marked by anarchy and followed by despotism. The main fight is to be made by you gentlemen of the North. It concerns your people in the North more intimately than it does us of the South. We have been tempered by adversity and we can stand, without serious disorder, many things which your communities will not stand. Comparatively speaking, it is a matter of but little importance to us of the South what you do with the tariff. Our masses are infinitely better able to live, at least with reasonable success and happiness, under a policy of class legislation and corrupt expenditures, then yours are. I use the terms ours and yours, not in what is generally understood as a sectional sense, but simply to distinguish two great geographical divisions which are wholly different in their climes and physical features.

I need not go into details, but as for manufactures we are now producing very many, at least, of the articles produced in the North, and at a great deal less cost with us than there, consequently the profits will exceed the profits North, and when industries in the North are closed and their workmen out of employment, ours, for the most part, will simply be restricted in the degree of their prosperity. And as for agriculture I need not call your attention to but one thing: Before the war, under moderate and equal taxation, no class of our people were more prosperous than the Northern farmers. This extended from the Hudson and Delaware rivers to the remotest settlement upon the head of the lakes. As a rule they were people who lived in comfort, who were out of debt, and had money to lend to those who were engaged in enterprises of internal improvement in building up the cities and towns. Now how remarkable has the case changed. We are startled with the continuing evidences of mortgages accumulated on their homes; and it is conspicuous that every statement of this character, which has arrested party attention and given concern to thoughtful men, has related to agricultural communities in the Northern States. The South, with its labor system disordered and its country impoverished by a great war does not present evidence of any wants among the masses of its people which local resources are not able to supply. The details and reasons for all this I could, of course, easily give; but the fact is enough to convince even the most unreasoning that whatever there is of evil in our present prevailing system is working with peculiar and exceptional hardship toward the masses, especially of our Northern states. These troubles with your masses mean increasing disorders to your society, and it seems to me that the duty of the hour is for the earnest thoughtful, intelligent and patriotic people to come close to the masses and tear the veil of prejudice and deception from their eyes. I do not think the South is going to push forward at the expense of being misunderstood by our brethren in the North. We are willing to assist; but we are not ambitious for leadership and we certainly do not intend to try and make an unwilling horse drink. Faithfully,

C. R. BRECKINRIDGE.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

In view of the wide spread attention now centered in the Yellowstone National Park, the following expressions from two of the most eminent American citizens, one a scientist and the other a clergyman, are of great interest.

Prof. John Muir, California's distinguished geologist, speaking of the National resort says: "situated in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, on the broad rugged Summit of the continent, amid snow and ice, and dark shaggy forests, where the great rivers take their rise, it surpasses in wakeful, exciting interest any other region yet discovered on the face of the Globe."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, the eminent divine, says: "After all poetry has exhausted itself, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other revelations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone Park is the geologist's paradise."

The Northern Pacific Railroad, the celebrated Dining Car Route is the only all rail line to this region. For copy of Wonderland, Yellowstone Park folder and other illustrated publications, address any traveling Passenger Agent of the company, or Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T., N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

An Atlanta Lady's Sad Condition.

"About two years ago a sore came on my nose. I called a physician who could arrest it only for a few days, when it would appear as bad as ever. Finally it became permanant, and despite the constant attention of several physicians it continued to grow worse, the discharge from the ulcer being exceedingly offensive. This was my condition when I commenced to take Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) about one month ago but I am now happy to say that after taking four large bottles of your wonderful medicine my nose is entirely well, and my general health better than has been in ten years."

Popular trial showes the worth of every article, and 43 years constant use has proved the great efficacy of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup: it has no superior.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

BLUE FOR NEW ENGLAND

MR. MILLS INTERPRETS THE M'KINLEY BILL TO HER.

The Bill Lays Heavier Burdens on New England's Industries, Increases the Price of Her Food and Makes Her Raw Materials Dearer.

Hon. Roger Q. Mills has an article in the June Forum on "New England and the New Tariff Bill," in which he champions the cause of New England against McKinley and the "congressional pestilence" which the latter has created.

Mills sees in the McKinley bill a great menace to New England manufacturers; it serves on them a notice to quit as regards many forms of manufacturing. New England had but few voices in congress to speak for her interests on the tariff question; and the pugnacious Texan comes to her rescue in a way that will be welcomed by hundreds of her manufacturers who have been petitioning congress in vain for the very measures that he advocates in this article.

Many men in New England have felt for some years that her supremacy in the manufacturing industries of the country is waning. James Russell Lowell has cast a prophetic look into the future of his beloved New England, and the things he saw in store for her were not pleasant to tell.

The Texas congressman calls attention to the peculiar situation of New England—north, east and south the tariff wall—only the west open to her. But her population has moved west and south, and has taken the manufacturing spirit and skill into those parts of our land. Manufactures are developing in those regions with wonderful rapidity, and they have a tariff wall of freight charges serving as protection against the New Englander. Distance does for her what the national tariff laws do for the foreigner.

The position of New England is peculiar to herself; no other part of the country is so situated. The materials which she must have for her mills to manufacture are not produced within her own limits. She does not produce wool, cotton, flax, hemp, silk, coal ores, and many other things which she must have or go out of business. A great part of the food upon which her people subsist must be brought over long lines of railway, and the freight charges must be paid by the consumers. The chief necessaries of life are more expensive to her people than to those of the west and south, from whom she procures them. Evidently she cannot buy her raw materials from them, pay cost of transportation back to the producers, and sell in competition with local rivals. She cannot import hides from west of the Mississippi river, manufacture them into leather, and then transport the leather back to the west, and sell it in competition with the manufacturers of Chicago and St. Louis.

But what can New England do? She cannot farm—her lands are exhausted, many of her farms deserted. In the south and west the lands are new and fertile. Her forests have disappeared, and she has no mineral resources. She is absolutely restricted to manufacturing. She must live by manufactures, or "go west and grow up with the country." With rivals at home and abroad calculating closely every item of advantage over her, she must "lay aside every weight" and run the race.

In labor she has the advantage of her competitors; in the cost of raw materials she is at a great disadvantage; and this burden she must unload. To continue to carry it is to abandon the contest and to contract the circle of her trade. With free raw materials she can dislodge many competitors which now feel securely established.

But to secure these advantages there is work for her to do—and work at once. She should demand the removal of taxes from all fibers, coal, ores, and all metals not sufficiently advanced in manufacture to go into immediate consumption, such as pig and bar iron, blooms, billets, rods, copper, brass, lead and zinc; all oils and dyes; in short, she should insist on being allowed to purchase her materials as cheaply as her rivals. Then, having the advantage over them all in the cheapness of her labor, she would take from her competitors every market which she and they could reach at the same cost of transportation.

But what does the McKinley bill say to all this? It simply reverses the advantages pointed out here. It transfers some of the most important articles from the free to the dutiable list, and on some of them it imposes very heavy duties. Further, it increases the duties on all food products, a great part of which New England must buy from other regions. The duty on wool is increased from an average rate of 34 to an average rate of 46 per cent. Camel's hair, which is now free, and of which we import 6,000,000 pounds, is taxed 12 cents per pound, which is equivalent to 77 per cent. Nearly one-half of the whole importation is used in the state of Massachusetts. Mica is taken from the free list and taxed 35 per cent.

The duties are increased on the following materials consumed in New England manufactures: Ingots, blooms, billets, and sheets of steel; quicksilver, gold leaf, flax tow; extracts of logwood, sumac and hemlock; dyewoods, glue, glycerine, linseed and olive oils, caustic potash, ground sumac and sulphate of soda. These increased duties will enhance the cost of the finished products and render New England manufacturers less able to compete for the market. The cost of living, too, will be increased, for many important food products will bear heavier duties.

But there is another aspect of the case which deserves serious attention. The new tariff bill will vastly reduce imports; this will necessitate reduced exports, and this reduction of exports will bear heaviest upon our farmers, who are the chief customers of New England's mills. The condition of our farmers is already far from gratifying; but when their condition is made still worse by the operation of this bill, New England will feel this at every nerve; for the welfare of the American farmer means the welfare of New England. The farmer must be prosperous in order to insure the prosperity of the manufacturing classes; but the farmer cannot prosper if his foreign market be put in jeopardy.

When western and southern farmers fall, New England will fall with them. She has the fate of both in her keeping. It remains to be seen whether she will help those who are trying to help her, or whether she will continue to amuse herself in aiding Pennsylvania iron masters to build a Chinese wall around her deserted factories.

WHAT THEY THINK ABOUT IT.

How the Republican Congressmen Look at the McKinley Bill.

The Philadelphia Press, the leading Protectionist organ of Protectionist Pennsylvania, has taken the trouble to interview 159 Republican congressmen on the McKinley bill. Of this number 141 declared themselves ready to vote with Mr. McKinley for his bill in its present form; 118 believe that the bill will be made satisfactory to the Republican party and passed, and 7 are not sure about this.

Mr. Coleman, of Louisiana, who is the only Republican member from the Gulf states, is very much disappointed over the sugar schedule, and says he will vote against the bill as it stands if it should be the last act of his official life. The California Republican members are also opposed to the sugar schedule.

Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, who used to have sound convictions on the tariff, but whose convictions long ago melted away under the necessity of making himself solid with the party, will vote for the bill because he thinks it suits the whole Republican party.

How easy and convenient to have one's unruly convictions turned over to the party for safe keeping, or else to cast them out at the window altogether if they become unmanageable and hinder one's political prospects!

Some of the noble band of high tariff politicians find fault with this or that feature of the bill, and are evidently afraid that they will injure themselves at home by voting against the interests of their states; but, in obedience to the latest form of the high tariff dogma, that protection is "a broad, national policy" which must be swallowed whole and nothing said by states whose industries are sacrificed, these discontented members will resolutely shut their eyes and gulp down their physic. Senator Higgins, of Delaware, for example, "has doubts" as to the wisdom of the vast increase on tin plates. Delaware is a great fruit growing state, and is largely engaged in the canning industry, which would be seriously crippled by this tin plate duty for the private enrichment of one or two prospective manufacturers at Pittsburg. Delaware is a low tariff state, and that fact is evidently troubling the senator's peace of mind.

But Senator Moody, of South Dakota, who is just now trying his prentice hand at national legislation, evidently overlooks the "broad, national character" of protection. He would like to have a duty put on tin for the protection of the tin mines of the Black hills in his state. But this fledgling senator apparently does not read the official organ of his party. The New York Press has reported that these tin mines of South Dakota have been grabbed up by a British syndicate for $3,500,000, and it claims furthermore that tin can be mined in the Black hills much more cheaply than across the water. The "broad, national policy" would in this case, therefore, tax the whole country in order to swell the pile of "British gold" of this Black hills syndicate, and have not good protectionists taught us by all that is holy that "British gold" is a most wicked and dangerous thing?

Senator Pierce, of North Dakota, also shows signs that he has not yet cut his senatorial eye teeth. How refreshingly childlike and innocent he must be to support the McKinley tariff bill "because he thinks it will protect his farmer constituents!"

But Representative Butterworth, of Ohio, who sometimes has gleams of wisdom on the tariff question, plainly intimated his dissatisfaction with the McKinley measure. In view of this new fangled "revision" of the tariff, by piling up high and higher duties, Mr. Butterworth asserts the necessity for a revision that means revision. "Nothing short of that," he says, "will suit the country."

But poor Mr. Butterworth is like the voice of one crying in the wilderness; he will not lead his party into "a revision that means revision." "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Three Cornered Trading.

The West Indies and South America sell us from three to seven times as much goods as we sell them. These goods, over and above our exports to those countries, are paid for by European nations in their manufactured articles, and we square matters with Europe by shipping our farm products and manufactures there as payment.

We swap debts, but in swapping there is always a certain per cent. lost in charges for bills of exchange, and through this cumbersome, three angled transportation. Freights are lowest and trade consequently most profitable where there are ready cargoes for both ways. A regular steamship line is, in fact, dependent upon this regularity of cargo. As matters stand much of the traffic is done by the so called tramp steamers, which go everywhere, according as they can get cargoes.

But why this three cornered shipping? Why not the direct trade entirely?

In answer to that question the protective tariff must be called into the witness box.

The United States has about thirty acres of land to each inhabitant, while England has less than two acres. This is what keeps wages up in America and makes the problem of bread winning easier here than in England. Yet protectionists assure us that nothing but the tariff can cause good wages and keep us all from going to ruin.

Wonders
Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely, not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain for years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

THE OLD GRAHAM SCHOOL.

The Sixth Annual Reunion of the Students of the Old Raisin Institute held at the Home of Horace Holdredge.

The old Graham School in the township of Raisin, which was the forerunner of the present Raisin Valley Seminary; was a flourishing institution of learning in its time. Most of the students who attended the school still reside in this section of the county and their annual reunions, begun six years ago, have always been largely attended and exceedingly enjoyable. The sixth annual gathering was held last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Holdredge in Raisin. We venture to say that nowhere within the County of Lenawee could a better place have been found for such a meeting. They have an elegant farm home, surrounded by all the comforts and conveniences of farm life. A farmer heavily in debt, with a mortgage on his homestead, is a slave. A farmer, with a productive farm and fine buildings all paid for, is the most independent of men. Mr. Holdridge belongs to that class. His hospitable home was thrown open to the company, and to say that the company passed a day of unalloyed enjoyment would be drawing it very mild.

After a bountiful dinner, to which one hundred and twelve persons did ample justice, a couple of hours were spent in pleasant conversation, and at 2 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the Vice President, Mrs. F. C. Rector, the President, Mrs. George Curtis, being absent on account of illness.

The exercises were opened by an earnest prayer by Rev. John Patchen, followed by an instrumental solo by Miss Belding, after which came the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the Secretary.

Remarks on the early days of the institute, by Mr. Patchen, were listened to with a great deal of interest. The gentleman in the course of his remarks created considerable amusement by saying that in those days Aunt Laura Haviland was the cause of much hard feeling by the aid she gave fugitive slaves, but for the last twenty-five years she had no trouble in that direction. The reverend gentleman is a good talker, and his remarks were very entertaining, his tribute to Aunt Laura being most beautiful and affecting.

Miss Addie Camburn, of Adrian, then favored the company with an instrumental selection on the piano.

It was announced that Mrs. Eliza Pope would read an essay, but that lady in a very pleasing way begged to be excused, and inasmuch as she had not forgotten her usual contribution of a beautiful cake to "Aunt Laura," she was let off, with but a good-natured rebuke.

"Aunt Laura" then gave some reminiscences of the early days of the school of which she, her husband and brother, Mr. Harvey Smith, were the founders.

The resolutions of respect to the memory of those who had died during the year, were then read by Mrs. Eliza Camburn, who with Mrs. Mary L. Fisher comprised the committee.

The reading of regrets from absent members were followed by an election of officers:

President—Geo. Griswold.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. C. D. West.
Secretary—Mrs. H. Camburn.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. H. Reynolds.
Committee on Music—Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Mrs. Myra Clark.
Committee on Program for 1892—Henry Collyer, Cicero Terray, Henry Knight.

The following program for 1891 was then read:

Prayer.
Music.
Reading of minutes.
Toasts.
Toastmaster—L. C. Chase.
Old Graham—Mrs. C. D. West.
Aunt Laura—James B. Colvin.
Our Reunion—Mrs. Julia B. Edwards.
Chronicle—Miss Carrie Colvin.

Mr. David Galloway extended an invitation to the society to meet at his home next June, which was accepted After a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Holdredge, the literary part of the exercises was closed, but the guests were not allowed to depart until the cream and cake had been passed.

Then the large company dispersed, feeling that the day had been well spent, and also assured that the interest in the reunions was not on the wane.

Lake Shore Route—Teacher's Exursion.

A great opportunity to visit the Northwestern country at a very small expense. Do not miss it.

The presence of dandruff indicates a diseased scalp, and if not cured, blanching of the hair and baldness will result. Hall's Hair Renewer will cure it.

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT.

Our local exchanges nearly all comment in favorable terms upon our anniversary supplement, for which many thanks. Read what they say about it:

The Tecumseh Herald has entered upon its forty-first year as a news gatherer and disseminator. Mr. Stacy is one of the most pains-taking and conscientious editors in the county, and the Times congratulates him on the success he has met in his long career on the Herald.—Adrian Times.

The Tecumseh Herald has been "fat and forty" for a year. Here's hoping its 41st year will be full of glittering success.—Manchester Enterprise.

The Tecumseh Herald is 40 years old, without a gray hair, and just as young and bright as it was in '50—Evening News.

The Tecumseh Herald has just completed its fortieth year, and celebrated with an interesting anniversary number. It is an exceedingly interesting journal, well edited, and has kept well up with if not in advance of the growth of its town.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The anniversary supplement which the Herald issued last week was a very creditable stroke of journalistic enterprise. The supplement contains a very complete and interesting resume of the Herald's own history and of the business houses of Tecumseh and will be a valuable number to keep for its historical references.—Tecumseh News.

The Tecumseh Herald was forty years old last week, and it commemorated the notable occasion by issuing a supplement reviewing the career of the paper and the present commercial status of the village. Long life to Scove and the Herald!—Hudson Gazette.

The Tecumseh Herald was 40 years of age last week, making it the longest established paper in Lenawee Co. In honor of that event it issued an interesting anniversary supplement, reviewing its own history and also giving a resume of the business interests of that staid, attractive old berg. The man who set up the first stick-full of type for the Herald is yet living—Uncle Chas. Spafford, of Manitou Beach—and he has every year since, a portion of the time, done compositorial work in the same office. During its long existence the Herald has had divers proprietors, but for 16 years past it has been ably conducted by S. C. Stacy. We lift our hat to our journalistic senior and wish it prosperity for many more years.—Morenci Observer.

The Tecumseh Herald has just begun its forty-first year. The editor, Scove Stacy, is probably as old as his paper, but he still lacks one thing to complete his plant—a wife.—Blissfield Advance.

The Tecumseh Herald starts in its 41st year with a big supplement, booming the industries of Tecumseh and containing a biography of itself. It was born May 25th, 1850, and tho' the paper makes no reference to the famous eclipse of the sun's center that followed the next day, there can be no doubt what caused the phenomenon. The Herald was born within sound of the howling wolf—and the howling mosquito, about the size of a wolf and twice as hungry. Michigan was young at that time, the new state having just crept into her first pantaloons—beg pardon—just began wearing long dresses. The paper was started by James H. Perry, who subsisted in a precarious way, for some time, on wild game and second-hand clothing received on subscription. To-day the thing is quite otherwise. Its potent editor wears a plug hat, and dines upon quail on toast.—Adrian Press.

The Tecumseh Herald is forty years old, and to celebrate the event last week issued an extra, which was devoted to the interests of the village. The Herald, although becoming aged, is vigorous as ever, and dishes up the news equal to any of its younger contemporaries.—Hudson Post.

The Tecumseh (Mich.) Herald of May 29 is an issue of which the publisher, S C. Stacy, brother of Geo. N. Stacy of the Daily News, may well feel proud. It is a twelve-page, seventy-two column paper, containing, in addition to the regular amount of local and miscellaneous matter, a write-up of the business of the place, a history of the Herald (in an anniversary supplement) from its founding forty years ago to the present time, etc. It is a number that will long be preserved by many people. Tecumseh is a place of 2,500 people, and the Herald is a decided credit to the city and the editor.—Elgin, (Ill.,) News.

"Husband, I Want You to Try It."

I had suffered for years with a complaint the physicians called Gravel, and they had given up the attempt to help me. My wife heard of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and spoke as above. To please her I got a bottle. Used that and two of three more, and presently the trouble vanished never to return.—Washington Monroe, Catskill, N. Y.

THE YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERT.

The Vocal and Instrumental Concert given at the Presbyterian Church last Friday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society was listened to by a delighted audience. It proved to be a musical entertainment of much more than ordinary merit. The program was rendered as announced on the program, with the addition of an organ solo by Miss Clara Phelps and in the following order.

1—Male Quartette—Messrs. Strong, Conklin, Dickinson and Heck.
2—Duet—Cornet and Clarinet—Miss Edith and Will Ingersoll.
3—Vocal Solo—Mrs. L. I. Bidwell.
4—Male Quartette.
5—Organ Solo—Miss Clara Phelps.
6—Violin Solo—Miss Mabel Hayden.
7—Vocal Solo—Mr. Dickinson.
8—Organ Selection—Miss Jennie Root.
9—Trio—Violin, Flute and Cornet—Miss Hayden, Messrs. Hosmer and Dickinson.
10—Vocal Solo—Mrs. J. J. Orr.
11—Male Quartette.

Miss Jennie Root took her first organ lesson of Miss Phelps, and both teacher and pupil executed an organ solo at the Concert. Miss Phelps' selection was very finely rendered, and Miss Root demonstrated that she has been an apt pupil of an excellent teacher. The Vocal solos by Mrs. Bidwell and Mrs. Orr were up to the usual standard. The Male Quartette could not be excelled in this section. Mable Hayden gained new laurels in her violin solo and in the trio of violin, flute and cornet, while Messrs Hosmer and Dickinson accompanied with the two latter instruments most acceptably. The duet by Will and Edith Ingersoll was something of a surprise. Will is improving rapidly on the clarionet and Miss Edith handled the cornet very handsomely.

A VISIT FROM JOHN R. CLARKE.

John R. Clarke and his daughter Bessie arrived in town last Saturday for a brief visit and have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Sutton. Mr. Clark is now connected with the Redpath Lyceum Bureau, and about nine months of the year are taken up with lecturing. He goes to Harrisburg June 18th, and to Oil City on the 19th, then rests until July 18th, when he will attend the Chautauqua Assembly. He has six lectures in his repertoire. The oldest one in point of composition, "To and Fro in London", he has delivered 1171 times. Two of his children rest in our cemetery and this fact draws him back to the old home every summer for a brief visit. We regret that he could not stay long enough to give us a lecture on his present visit. We are also glad to note his growing reputation as a platform orator. Here are some of his late testimonials.

John R. Clark excels them all. No other lecturer on the American platform so completely combines all the good qualities of a lecturer.

A cyclone of wit, eloquence and pathos visited Wilton, N. H., January 25, 1890. It came from the heart and brain of John R. Clarke, of Buffalo, N. Y., in the shape of a lecture entitled, "To and Fro in London." It was a magnificent effort. The magic power of the speakers' natural eloquence is simply irresistible. He is indeed a second John B. Gough.

The readers of the TECUMSEH HERALD will be pleasead to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hunderd Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Last Sunday was an eventful day at Ridgeway. Children's Sunday was celebrated at the M. E. Church. Special services were held in the morning by the pastor and a Sunday School concert was given in the evening, both of which were largely attended. In the afternoon occurred the funeral obsequies of John W Baker Jr., which were attended by one of the largest gatherings ever seen in Ridgeway.

I. S. Osborne returned Saturday from his trip to Texas and New Mexico. He went to El Paso and also to Eddy, New Mexico, where his brother in law J. J. Hagerman is located. He staged it one hundred miles to Eddy and about the same distance beyond Eddy North, Eddy being located in the Southeastern portion of the territory. He enjoyed the trip first rate and we surmise that he made some good investments too.

Perry Hosmer returned last Thursday from his western trip and people then found out where he had been. The terminal point of his trip was at Eddy, New Mexico, the new town in which J. J. Hagerman is located. He went to St. Louis and from there over the Iron Mountain and Texas and Pacific roads to a point South of Eddy and thence by stage about one hundred miles. He enjoyed the trip very much.

OBITUARY.

R. S. Hicks was born September 13, 1818, and died May 22, 1890, in the 72d. year of his life. He has been a resident of Michigan since April 1851. In October 1888 he came to Hamlin township, Eaton Co., where he has since lived. Mr. Hicks was a constant and faithful member of the M. E. Church of the city. He occupied one of the most important offices in the Church, and was conspicuous for his fidelity and success in his work as class leader and Sunday school teacher. A sweet spirted man was he, fraternal in his sympathies, deep spirited in his religious life, and generally beloved by those who knew him. Our community has lost a good man and the Church is bereft of a valuable member. The remains were taken to North Adams, Hillsdale County, for interment. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. DeLamarter.—Eaton Rapids Journal.

Happy Meeting of Two Friends

John M. Allen, of Charlotte, N. Y. said to his friend, "Parsons, I am about dead with the Gravel, and cannot find help." Mr. Parsons induced Mr. Allen to give Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., a trial. Weeks went by and the friends met. Mr. Allen said Dr. David Kennedy's Favorit Remedy has saved my life. It is a cure for Gravel—and the only cure.

A quiet little wedding took place at the residence of Millard F. Marks, on the evening of May 28th, which made H. L. Chapin, of Duluth, Minn., and Ina M. The bride will receive the blessings and good wishes of many warm friends, as she departs for her western home.

Children's Sunday was observed last Sabbath at the Presbyterian church. The pulpit platform was elaborately decorated with potted plants and flowers, and a special service in the nature of a Sunday School Concert was given at the morning hour. The singing was especially fine, as the school had the assistance of the full church choir, and the exercises by the infant class, conducted by their teacher, Mrs. S. W. Anderson, assisted by Mrs. J. J. Orr, were the crowning feature of the services.

Last Sabbath was a gala day for the little folks at the M. E. Church. The usual Sunday School program was given at the hour of morning service, consisting of music and recitations by the pupils, etc. The platform was nicely ornamented with flowers, and the space within the communion rail was set with tables and stands which were loaded with potted plants and floral emblems. A large evergreen and floral cross was set in the background of the pulpit. The entire services were more than usually impressive.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 12, 1890

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Crops of all kinds are on the boom now.

The rain of Monday night did lots of good.

Bliesfield uses the steam fire engine to sprinkle the streets.

The hay crop will be one of the heaviest ever cut in the county.

The Brooklyn High School scholars took a picnic at Sand Lake last Saturday.

The rear end of Barry's grocery store is being changed over, by putting in larger windows.

The baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class will be delivered by Rev. F. Adkins, on Sunday evening, June 22d.

The Pythian Conclave, to be held at Milwaukee, beginning on Monday, July 7th, promises to be a very brilliant affair.

Those in want of steady work will do well to read the "ad." in another column of this paper, headed R. G. Chase & Co.

W. T. Owen has left at our office some cider he made in October 1867. It had almost become wine and had kept remarkably.

Henry S. Austin, one of the victims of the railroad horror at Oakland, Cal., was a relative of E. W. Freese of Clinton, his wife having been born in Tecumseh.

A canvasser has been taking orders in Hudson for Mrs. Logan's Magazine. The canvasser has departed for pastures new and the magazine does'nt come.

James Cheever, one of the oldest citizens of Dundee, died last week Monday. He had resided in Michigan since 1837. He was a brother of Jacob Cheever of this village and John Cheever of Ridgeway.

W. R. Collins, of Salt Lake City, a former resident of Macon, is spending a week or so among his friends. It is 10 years since he was in Tecumseh. It is needless to say that he trains with the Gentiles in Salt Lake City.

The Farmers' Social Club will hold their annual picnic at Putnam's Grove, Sand Lake, Saturday, June 21st. Let every one make an effort to go, as it is the only meeting of the club this summer, and a good time is expected.

The Tecumseh Herald has been saying kind things about the Tecumseh News, and the News thanks the Herald very graciously. What a joy it is to see two brother editors dwelling in unity in one town. And the town a mere village, too.—The Times.

Minor Keyes is the euphonious name of a young man in Morenci. When he takes a drink or cracks a joke, it is in minor keys, but no doubt his life runs in harmony with his nature, and the girl who marries him will never feel sorry she struck a chord.—Adrian Times.

A rejuvenating spirit seems to have struck the Baptist society. They began by treating the parsonage to a tasty new coat of paint, and now they are fixing up the church, and last, but not least, removed part of the fence about the parsonage. Now remove the street fence and improve the looks still more.—Saline Observer.

There is a nice rose bush on a grave in the cemetery and fourteen full-blown roses were stolen from it last Sunday. Children may rob bird nests because the birds cannot help it, but flowers on a grave are placed there to fulfill a promise "to keep the grave green." There are seventy buds left on the bush, and we hope they may remain without any trouble and expense.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Champney, who is now in London, and recently had the pleasure of attending a reception at the Court of St. James, will contribute to the next number of Harper's Bazar a sketch entitled "Caught in a Whirlpool; An Experience during the London Season." An article by Helen Jay, entitled "The Middle aged Woman," will appear in the same number.

The Manchester Enterprise says: "To prevent hens from eating eggs, frequently give them raw meat for food." "Putting an old stocking over the hen's head will do the same thing and save the meat."—Adrian Press. "The application of a sharp hatchet directly back of the head is a still better remedy and saves meat too—saves buying it."—Saline Observer. O, you chicken hearted scribes, why do you dream of pressed chicken before they hatchet?

This is an old story, but seems to be true of the every day life of nearly every one who mails letters: Out of the millions of persons who stamp letters daily, but few know how to do the "licking." The envelope ought to be licked and not the stamp. If you lick the envelope, and then apply the stamp it will stick. If you lick the stamp you are liable to carry away all the mucilage on your tongue, or so much that the stamp will fall off. Many letters have reached the dead-letter office, because the sender licked the stamp instead of the envelope.

The yearly election of officers also takes place and all members are desired to be present. Business meeting at 4 P. M. sharp; supper served from 5½ to 6½.

A Tecumseh correspondent of the Adrian Times says: "Candidates for village postmaster are getting anxious, as the term of our present postmistress expires about the first of next month. A new one appears at this late day in the person of a former county official, who is trying to secure the place with a petition circulated by the Democrats for Democratic signatures."

Capt. F. B. Wood returned from Jackson this morning, where he has been on probate business. He brought back with him a handsome photo of the members of the recent court martial. In full uniform are presented Major Corns, of Detroit, Major Sid Millard, of Ann Arbor, Capt. Fred. Shubel, of Lansing, Lieut. Fred. Brennan, of Flint, and his own handsome phiz.—Adrian Times.

Although somewhat tardy we wish to congratulate the Adrian Press upon the beginning of its 18th year. As an organ of unadulterated Democracy it has no superior in Southern Michigan, and its county crumbs furnish a dish of salad that would do credit to Delmonico himself. Now that Brother Stearns has relinquished the post-office chair, the Press will be better than ever.

"Funny!" Well, I should say so! Look at the one in short lace skirt to the knees, rubber boots, bare arms, an immense muff, straw hat, and—a beard! 'What is it?' Why, that is 'A modern Columbus' in the burlesque of that name given by a dramatic club of the celebrated Seventh Regiment of New York, and these illustrations and the account of it are, as you see, in Demorest's Family Magazine for July, which has just arrived." The pictures of the six-footers of the Seventh arrayed in feminine toggery are about the funniest that have appeared in any magazine for a long time.

Genevieve, an Operetta in 3 acts, will be presented at the Opera House, to-morrow, Friday evening, June 13, by Fifty Young Ladies of Tecumseh schools, under the direction of Miss Dora Grayson, conductor.

KNIGHTS IN LINE

Preparations for a Great Pythian Conclave.

MILWAUKEE TO ROYALLY ENTERTAIN HER VISITORS.

Big Features to be Made of the Uniform Rank Prize Drills and Parade—The Pythian Display.

MILWAUKEE, June 9.—The sixteenth session of the Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias of the world and the first encampment of the Uniform Rank together form the most attractive gathering of the kind to be held on the Western continent during the year 1890. For the week of July 7-12 inclusive, the hospitable people of Milwaukee will give the visiting knights a most royal welcome.

The Milwaukee conclave will mark a new era in the history of the Uniform Rank, which will on that occasion carry out the military idea to the extent of going into camp—and a beautiful camp it will be, too. Located on the edge of a thickly populated part of the city, near its western limits, the view from the proposed camp ground takes in the tall buildings of the manufacturing and business establishments and the numerous church spires of the city, the blue waters of Lake Michigan showing in the distance, the beautiful curves of the valley of the Menominee river, beyond which are the green trees and cultivated fields of the country.

The camp will have a frontage on both sides of this boulevard of 2,400 feet, along which will be erected in regular order the 3000 or more symmetrical tents of the camping knights. In the center of the camp ground will be a large open space, to be used for dress parades, which each day will form a part of the military discipline under which the camp will be managed. General E. L. Brand, of Chicago, chief of the staff of Major-General Carnahan of the Uniform Rank, has charge of the laying out of the camp ground. An effort will be made to open a camp on a rising piece of ground just west of the main camp ground, which shall be reserved for the use of ladies.

WM. WARD, Supreme Chancellor.

While the conclave is an affair of great interest to all the members of the Knights of Pythias order, the main features of the week will be those parts in which the Uniform Rank will participate. The prize drills by competing divisions will form an especially notable feature. Milwaukee citizens have offered eight prizes for proficiency in drill, which will be hotly contested for by divisions from every state in the Union. The aggregate amount of money set apart for the payment of prizes for divisions is $4,800. The first prize for proficiency in drill is $1,000, and the other prizes are as follows: Second prize, $800; third prize, $600; fourth prize, $500; fifth prize, $400; sixth prize, $300; seventh prize, $200; eighth prize, $100. The best division commander will be awarded by the judges a Uniform Rank jewel valued at $100. The best batalion drill will merit a prize of $400. The division traveling the longest distance from its home to Milwaukee by the shortest route will receive $100; and an equal money prize will be awarded to the division that will best exemplify the ritualistic work of the Uniform Rank before the Supreme judge. The judges will be regular army officers.

GEO. W. SHAW, Sup. Vice Chancellor.

Cold Spring Driving park, which has been used by the Wisconsin State Agricultural society for the State fair for several years past, has been chosen for the drill ground. The covered amphitheater will seat several thousand.

The programme for Conclave week will open on Tuesday morning, July 8.

Officers and members of the Supreme lodge will rendezvous at the Plankington house at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, and will march to the Exposition building. The cordial greetings of the State of Wisconsin and the city of Milwaukee will be extended in a fitting manner by Governor W. D. Hoard, Mayor George W. Peck and Chancellor Hoskins, of Wisconsin. Responses will be made on behalf of the Supreme lodge by Supreme Chancellor Ward, of Newark, N. J., and other members of the Supreme body.

R. L. C. WHITE, Supreme Keeper Record and Seal.

On Tuesday afternoon, General Carnahan's Pythian army will move forward on a grand parade over a line of march extending three miles through the principal streets of the city. The column will be reviewed by the supreme chancellor and major-general. Following the parade of Uniform Knights will come a long procession of lodge members without uniforms. On Wednesday morning the competitive drill will commence and will be continued all the morning. Thursday morning will be given up to the prize drills. At that time or some other convenient occasion during the week, it is expected that the Supreme lodge will enjoy an excursion on Lake Michigan to Whitefish Bay, a beautiful pleasure resort five miles north of the city.

HOWARD DOUGLASS, Past Supreme Chancellor.

The pyrotechnic display of Cold Spring park on Thursday evening is intended to eclipse all similar efforts so far made in the west. On Wednesday evening Schlitz park will be the scene of a grand prize band concert, in which there will be a lively rivalry on the part of the various bands, numbering probably fifty or more, which will attend the conclave. The prizes given to the bands will aggregate $800 in value. The first prize will have a value of $300; the second, $200, and the third, $100.

MAJ. GEO. W. PECK, Milwaukee.

A special prize of $200 has been offered, which is open to the world, for bands with not less than thirty-five pieces.

The city of Milwaukee, is never so much at home as when preparing to welcome to the city some great public gathering. Its successful management of the big Grand Army encampment in 1889 demonstrated beyond a doubt its ability to entertain, and royally, too, a quarter of a million strangers. Its hotel facilities are ample for all purposes. The fact that the Uniform Rank will this year go into comp will give that much more room in the hotels and homes of the city for strangers who will be in the city that week.

W. C. WILLIAMS' Ma'gr Concl've Com.

Justus H. Rathbone was the founder of the order of Knights of Pythias. On the 15th day of February, 1864, in a room at 509 F. street, near the corner of Ninth, in the city of Washington, D. C., in a meeting in which were present Mr. Rathbone and six congenial friends, the subject of the organization of this order was first broached, and the ritual prepared by Mr. Rathborn was first read. On Friday evening, February 19, the first meeting was held for the organization of a lodge. Washington lodge No. 1 sprang into existance, and the name "Knights of Pythias" was adopted for the order. The basis for its organization is the story of the remarkable friendship of Damon and Pythias, in the reign of the tyrant Dionysius. Upon this, the most notable example of heroic friendship and self-sacrific in ancient history, has been founded the most remarkable secret fraternal organization of modern times.

JUSTUS H. RATHBONE, Founder of the Order.

George W. Peck, Milwaukee's popular mayor, is president of the executive board of citizens and Knights having in charge the arrangements for the great gathering. Mr. Peck has a national reputation as a humorist, but possesses as well the serious quality of head and heart which make him a good city official and an excellent head for such an executive board. The headquarters, at 406 East Water street, are in charge of W. C. Williams, to whom all inquiries regarding arrangements should be addressed. Past Grand Chancellor Williams is a well known lawyer, having made an enviable record as prosecuting attorney of Milwaukee county. He is giving close attention to the details of the work at head quarters, and under his management the work of preparation is progressing very rapidly. C. C. Rogers, secretary of the executive board, is a well known Board of Trade man.

The Uniform Rank numbers upwards of 30,000 men, more than the United States army at the present time. The endowment or Insurance Rank has already a membership approaching 30,000, and nearly $15,000,000 have been spent in charity and in payment to heirs of deceased members.

JOHN A. HINSEY, Supreme Representative, Wis.

The Knights of Pythias order has been and is peculiarly fortunate, not only in the fine body of men composing its membership, but in the ability and efficiency of its officers. No secret order has better reason to be proud of the high character and standing of its officers. Gen. William Ward, the present supreme chancellor, of Newark, New Jersey, was a brave soldier and is a citizen respected for his integrity, business ability and many fine personal qualities. Maj.-Gen. James R. Carnahan, of Indianapolis, who has by his industry and ability made the Uniform Rank what it is, is an able lawyer of the Hoosier state, who served his country well in the war of the rebellion. George B. Shaw, of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, who, as Supreme Vice-Chancellor, is not in line for the promotion to the office supreme chancellor, is a prince of good fellows, a thorough business man, and though but 36 years old is the choice of many voters in his party for congressman from the Eighth Wisconsin district. Howard Douglass, of Cincinnati, who has "passed the chairs," and is now the acting past supreme chancellor, is a prominent member of the Ohio bar, and a leader in many public enterprises. Equally strong words of praise might be bestowed with propriety upon R. L. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., the grand keeper of records and seal; S. J. Willey, of Wilmington, Del., master of exchequer, and many others who hold or have held high and honorable positions in the order.

C. C. RODGERS, Sec. Conclave Com.

Denouncing Bayne.

PITTSBURG, June 9.—About three thousand Republican voters of the Twenty-third Congressional District assembled in the Carnegie library hall, Allegheny. The meeting was called for the purpose of protesting against the action of the recent convention in the alleged nomination of William A. Stone for congress and to request the county committee to order a new primary election at which the Republican voters of the district may make a choice of a representative to succeed Col. Bayne who at the convention received the nomination and whose immediate declination created the political sensation of the day. Hon. B. F. Jones, ex-chairman of the Republican National committee presided at the meeting. The speakers were John Ricketson, John H. Hampton and B. F. Jones. Mr. [illegible] his remark against Hon. T. M. Bayde, denouncing his action and the violation of rule and precedent by the convention in nominating Colonel Stone as Bayne's successor.

Killed by the Cars.

PLAIN CITY, O., June 9.—Peter Donnelly, a painter, aged about 30, was run over and killed by a Panhandle train at some hour last night. He was found in a dying condition at 4 o'clock this morning, and died at about 9 o'clock. His only relatives, he stated to a Press representative, are two brothers in the State of Michigan. Donnelly had been painting for J. B. Margridge, near this place, and on Wednesday came to town and indulged himself in a sojourn at the saloons, which doubtless led to his death.

AWFUL!

The Graveyard Murder Rivals the Work

OF THE BLOODY JACK THE RIPPER IN WHITE CHAPEL.

A Gory Knife Discovered, and Large Clots of Blood Found in the House on Williams Street—Strong Circumstantial Evidence—Another Arrest—The Matter to be Sifted to the Bottom.

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—Saturday, a 13-year old girl, Ida Williams, as uncouth and as uncanny as a dwarf gipsey, was found at a small shackon Williams street on the extreme east side, near the old Livingston avenue graveyard, now a park. The detectives had got wind that in the matter of the disappearance of little Elmer Bradford, a five-year old child afflicted with epilepsy. Detective Peter Murphy went out to investigate. He found that the lad lived with his mother in a little two-roomed shack on Williams street in a neighborhood inhabited in part, by low colored and white people, some of them of the lowest and most desperate class. As he approached the house a little girl who was playing in front, was suddenly grabbed by a woman and taken in doors.

THE DETECTIVE ENTERED

but could gain no satisfactory answers to his questions. Finally he secured the child, and she told him that her mother and a negro had thrown the child to the floor during one of his fits, and taking a carving knife had "cut him up and carried him away in a bag." When brought face to face with her mother, she denied this and claimed that her grand mother done the foul deed. She lied for she has no grand mother. At the station she told her first story again and Detectives Pete Murphy and Charles Kraner were again sent to the house. This time

THREE ARRESTS WERE MADE

The detectives taking the little girl with them, proceeded to make a thorough search of both the house, and the immediate neighborhood. In the front room just where the child said the little boy had been "cut up" were found large splashes and

SPOTS OF BLOOD.

Soon they found a long dull, black handled knife, upon the blade of which were also dark stains. This they took along to be used in evidence. The girl then said that she and her mother had taken the bloody clothing the lad wore and had carried it to a pond, after the body had been taken away "toward Groveport," and had thrown it in. She said she would soon show them where the pond was. After leading them all over the East side, and to a dozen different pools which were

SEARCHED WITHOUT SUCCESS

She finally told the detectives that the clothing had been "thrown into the river." Thinking that by frightening her she would at length tell the truth, Detective Murphy threatened to throw her into the creek, but she burst into tears and refused to answer any more questions. She finally admitted, when taken back to the station that she had fought with her brother shortly before the murder and had struck him in the mouth. She was then locked up. The entire detective force was then ordered on the case.

Certain of the neighbors in the vicinity have told the police that they saw Ida and a woman, supposed to be Mrs. Williams, carrying a bundle of clothing across the commons. This seems to bear the girl out in her statement.

THE DETECTIVES WORKED HARD

On the case all last evening and shortly after eight o'clock they arrested William Williams, who is said to be a clairvoyant doctor, as a suspect. He is said to have remarked that for $20 he could but he would be dead." The body has not yet been found, nor the missing bloody clothing located. As yet the police have turned up no important clues outside of the blood stains and the knife. The mystery will be sifted to the bottom and if the foul crime has been committed—and the police believe it has—the guilty parties will be brought to justice. It is thought that the little girl will tell all she knows about the horrible affair in a day or two.

"LOCATE THE CHILD

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessarry to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Every Two and a Half Minutes

The blood makes a circuit of the body every 2½ minutes, delivering nutriment and taking back waste matter to be filtered out by the liver and kidneys and removed from the body through the bowels and the urinary secretion. Any stoppage or obstruction of this process may produce various forms of disease, such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Headache, Debility and bad blood with its multiplied evils (boils, blotches, pimples, sores, eruptions, abscesses and the like). When such obstructions exist as evidenced by the presence of complaints similar to those just mentioned, the best medicine to use is Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks the secretions; removing all impure and effete matter through the proper channels. By restoring healthy action of the stomach, liver, and kidneys and bowels, B. B. B. removes all impurities of the blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

SINGLE TAX PLATFORM.

The single tax contemplates the abolition of all taxes upon labor or the products of labor—that is to say, the abolition of all taxes save one tax levied on the value of land, irrespective of improvements.

Since in all our States we now levy some tax on the value of land, the single tax can be instituted by the simple and easy way of abolishing, one after another, all other taxes now levied, and commensurately increasing the tax on land values, until we draw upon that one source for all expenses of government; the revenue being divided between local governments, State governments, and the general government, as the revenue from direct taxes is now divided between the local and State governments, or a direct assessment being made by the general government upon the States and paid by them from revenues collected in this manner.

The single tax is not a tax on land, and therefore would not fall on the use of land and become a tax on labor.

It is a tax, not on land, but on the value of land. Thus it would not fall on all land, but only on valuable land, and on that not in proportion to the use made of it, but in proportion to its value—the medium which the user of land must pay to the owner, either in purchase money or in rent, for permission to use valuable land. It would thus be a tax, not on the use or improvement of land, but on the ownership of land, taking what would otherwise go to the owner as owner, and not as user.

In assessments under the single tax all values created by individual use or improvement would be excluded, and the only value taken into consideration would be the value attaching to the bare land by reason of neighborhood, etc. Thus the farmer would have no more taxes to pay than the speculator who held a similar piece of land idle, and the man who on a city lot erected a valuable building would be taxed no more than the man who held a similar lot vacant.

The single tax, in short, would call upon men to contribute to the public revenues not in proportion to what they produce or accumulate, but in proportion to the value of the natural opportunities they hold. It would compel them to pay just as much for holding land idle as for putting it to its fullest use.

The single tax, therefore, would—

1. Take the weight of taxation off of the agricultural districts where land has little or no value irrespective of improvements, and put it on towns and cities where bare land rises to a value of millions of dollars per acre.

2. Dispense with a multiplicity of taxes and a horde of taxgatherers, simplify government and greatly reduce its cost.

3. Do away with the fraud, corruption and gross inequality inseparable from our present methods of taxation, which allow the rich to escape while they grind the poor. Land cannot be hid or carried off, and its value can be ascertained with greater ease and certainty than any other.

4. Give us with all the world as perfect freedom of trade as now exists between the States of our Union, thus enabling our people to share through free exchanges in all the advantages which nature has given to other countries, or which the peculiar skill of other peoples has enabled them to attain. It would destroy the trusts, monopolies, and corruptions which are the outgrowths of the tariff. It would do away with the fines and penalties now levied on anyone who improves a farm, erects a house, builds a machine, or in any way adds to the general stock of wealth. It would leave everyone free to apply labor or expend capital in production or exchange without fine or restriction, and would leave to each the full product of his exertion.

5. It would, on the other hand, by taking for public uses that value which attaches to land by reason of the growth and improvement of the community, make the holding of land unprofitable to the mere owner and profitable only to the user. It would thus make it impossible for speculators and monopolists to hold natural opportunities unused or only half used, and would throw open to labor the illimitable field of employment which the earth offers to man. It would thus solve the labor problem, do away with involuntary poverty, raise wages in all occupations to the full earnings of labor, make overproduction impossible until all human wants are satisfied, render labor-saving inventions a blessing to all, and cause such an enormous production and such an equitable distribution of wealth as would give to all comfort, leisure and participation in the advantages of an advancing civilization.

The ethical principles on which the single tax is based are:

1. Each man is entitled to all that his labor produces. Therefore no tax should be levied on the products of labor.

2. All men are equally entitled to what God has created and to what is gained by the general growth and improvement of the community of which they are a part. Therefore, no one should be permitted to hold natural opportunities without a fair return to all for any special privilege thus accorded to him, and that value which the growth and improvement of the community attaches to land should be taken for the use of the community.

Who Would Gain By It?

It requires no grasp of abstractions for the working farmer to see that to abolish all taxation, save upon the value of land, would be really to his interest, now matter how it might affect large landholders. Let the working farmer consider how the weight of indirect taxation falls upon him without his having power to shift it upon anyone else; how it adds to the price of nearly everything he has to buy, without adding to the price of what he has to sell—how it compels him to contribute to the support of government in far greater proportion to what he possesses than it does those who are much richer, and he will see by the substitution of direct for indirect taxation he would be largely the gainer. Let him consider further and he will see that he would be still more largely the gainer if direct taxation were confined to the value of land. The land of the working farmer is improved land, and usually the value of the improvements and of the stock used in cultivating it bear a very high proportion to the value of the bare land. Now, as all valuable land is not improved as is that of the working farmer, as there is much more of valuable land than of improved land, to substitute for the taxation now levied upon improvements and stock, a tax upon the naked value of land, irrespective of improvements, would be manifestly to the advantage to the owners of improved land, and especially the small owners, the value of whose improvements bears a much greater ratio to the value of their land than is the case with larger owners; and who, as one of the effects of treating improvements as a proper subject of taxation, are taxed far more heavily, even upon the value of their land, than are larger owners.

The working farmer has only to look about him to realize this. Near by his farm of eighty or one hundred and sixty acres he will find tracts of five hundred or a thousand, or, in some places, tens of thousands of acres, of equally valuable land, on which the improvements, stock, tools and household effects are much less in proportion than on his own small farm, or which may be totally unimproved and unused. In the villages he will find acre, half-acre and quarter-acre lots unimproved, or slightly improved, which are more valuable than his whole farm. If he looks further he will see tracts of mineral land, or land with other superior natural advantages having immense value, yet on which the taxable improvements amount to little or nothing; while, when he looks to the great cities he will find vacant lots twenty-five by one hundred feet, worth more than a whole section of agricultural land such as his; and as he goes toward their centers he will find most magnificent buildings less valuable than the ground on which they stand, and block after block where the land would sell for more per foot than his whole farm. Manifestly, to put all taxes on the value of land would be to lessen relatively and absolutely the taxes the working farmer has to pay.

Tear Away this Bar to Happiness.

Lying athwart the pathway of our nineteenth century civilization is a great menance to the liberty of the people. This menace is the monopoly of land—the monopoly of natural opportunities to gain a living—on which and through which every other monopoly depends for its existence. It is because of the monopoly of land that great armies of men and women are tramping the country unable to find employment. It is because of the monopoly of land that in the centers of commercial activity people are huddled together like beasts, breeding diseases and raising to a fearful rate the death roll. It is because of the monopoly of land that industry and enterprise are put at a disadvantage with idleness and fraud. Land monopoly is the creator of a set of base-born children whose hideousness is acknowledged by all, but whose parentage is not so clearly perceived. The monopoly of land is today the great cause of ignorance and poverty; it is the adamantine wall that forms for the civilized communities of the world their unfavorable environment.

To tear away this bar to happiness and good living in its truest sense is the object of the intelligent social reformer. He alone of the vast army of benevolent people who are interested in ameliorating the condition of the unfortunate and downtrodden sees the correct way of reaching the disease. And so he throws aside the plasters and palliatives prescribed by prison reform associations, soup house societies and poor committees, and applies the knife of the surgeon to the very root of these—the monopoly of the opportunity of self-employment.—Detroit News.

The Single Tax Encourages Improvements.

Saginaw, Mich.—A and B own adjoining tracts of land of equal value and productiveness. At the end of ten years the improvements that each has made in the shape of buildings, fences etc., are equal in value; but A has worked very hard, early and late, and by means of thorough cultivation has brought his land to the highest state of productiveness, while B has been content to cultivate his land in a slipshod manner, and as a result his land is no more productive than in the beginning. Now it is obvious that A's land has a greater rental value than B's, not by reason of improvements on A's land, but by reason of improvements in his land, the direct result of the exertion of his labor. How are you going to avoid taxing A on one of the products of his labor. W. P. BOLAND.

Whenever it appears that labor in any form would be put at a disadvantage under the single tax you may be sure there is something wrong in your idea of the operation of the single tax. The great object is to relieve labor from artificial burdens and to make it free. The single tax does not fall upon improvements whether they are on the land or in the land. It would tax improved land for precisely what it would tax the same land if it had not been improved. In the cases you mention, both tracts having been of equal value and the productions of the one having been increased by labor and that of the other remaining as it was in the beginning, both A and B would be taxed alike. And the taxes of neither would be any more than when they took up their tracts, unless B's land rose in value despite his slipsod cultivation.

THE RICH MAN'S FOLLY.

LESSON XI, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 15.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xii, 13-21—Commit Verses 19-21—Golden Text, Luke xii, 15—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.)

13. "And one of the company said unto Him." In the first verse of this chapter we are told that this company consisted of an innumerable multitude, such a throng that they trode one upon another. The following verses down to this first one of our lesson tell us that in the midst of this multitude He taught His disciples that they should beware of the leaven (the hypocrisy) of the Pharisees; that they should not fear the death of the body, but rather fear the death of soul and body in hell (compare Matt. x, 28); that they should not fear to deny Him before men, but rather fearlessly confess Him, looking to the future, and that they should not be anxious as to what they should say when arrested and brought before the authorities for His sake, for the Holy Spirit would teach them to say the right words at the right time. In order to see why He thus teaches His disciples, let the whole of the previous chapter after our last lesson be carefully read, and learn from it the attitude of the religious rulers of the nation towards Him, and remember that He knew that as they treated Him so they would in due time treat His followers.

"Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me." What an unseemly interruption! Jesus had been speaking of judgment and eternity, of future glory and future torment (xi, 20, 31, 32; xii, 5, 8, 9); but here is a man who is more interested in a share of some property in this world than in any future good or evil. He does not seem to have heeded anything that Jesus had said. And yet his is not an uncommon case, for under the most solemn discourses upon eternal realities, there may be found in worshiping congregations, even today, men and women so occupied with present things that the preacher's words are of no use to them. It is just the same if in Sunday school a boy is thinking more about his marbles, or ball, or kite, or top, than about the lesson being taught. Ezek. xxxiii, 31, well describes all such.

14. "And He said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" The man did not know the Teacher whom he had thus addressed. The one seeking a share of an earthly inheritance was a man entirely of this world, while the one whom he asked to interfere on his behalf was a man not of this world. Jesus had come to lead people to the possession of an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven (I Pet. i, 4). The glories of that inheritance He will divide and apportion to the overcomers in due time. (See Luke xxii, 28-30; Rev. xxi, 7; iii, 21; ii, 26, 27). But as to this present world, it is an evil one; it lieth in wickedness (or the wicked one); Satan is its acknowledged prince and god; we are not to love it, for its friendship is enmity with God, and it is reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men (Gal. i, 4; I John v, 19; John xiv, 30; II Cor. iv, 4; I John ii, xv; James iv, 4; II Pet. iii, 6, 7).

What a poor place to possess an inheritance. How much better to be content with food and raiment here and wait for the redemption of this earth, when it shall rejoice in the liberty of the glory of the sons of God and we shall reign over it with Jesus Christ.

15. "And He said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness." The tenth commandment forbids coveting. Moses was to choose rulers who were God fearing men, men of truth, hating covetousness. Ex. xx, 17; xviii, 21. The word has several meanings, such as a wish to have more, love of money, dishonest gain; the first is the meaning of the word here, and in Mark vii, 20-23, it is classed by the Saviour with all manner of evil which proceeds from within and defiles us. All can see that dishonest gain is sinful, but some may question the sinfulness of a wish to have more either of money or possessions.

16. "The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully." Jesus now speaks a parable to make more clear to those who have ears to hear the truth He has presented. Here is an abundant harvest from the ground of one who knew not God. He is already rich and his riches are increased. God's rain and sunshine have done it, and yet it would seem as if the man was no child of God. It was this sort of thing that puzzled Asaph. He saw the ungodly prospering, increasing in riches, their eyes standing out with fatness, having more than heart could wish, not in trouble nor plagued like other men, and yet blaspheming God (Ps. lxxiii); but as he waited upon God he saw the reason of it all and was led to rejoice more than ever in God Himself. Prosperity in the things of this world is no token of the favor of God.

17. "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?" Thus this rich man thought within himself. His increase was an anxiety to him, he looked upon them as his fruits, evidently not thinking of the God who gave them to him, nor that the goodness of God was intended to lead him to repentance (Rom. ii, 4).

18. "And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods." He had talked with himself about it, and this was the decision of the most important person in the world, the only one who knew anything, the only one to be pleased, the only one worth living for, he himself. So the old barns come down, the large new ones go up, and there all my fruits and my goods are carefully bestowed for the personal comfort of I myself.

19. "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." The soul to which he talked links him with the brute creation, for if they could not build barns, they could do any of these four things which he tells his soul to do, just as well as himself; so that he talks simply as an ox or hog might talk (if they had the power of speech) which were being unconsciously fattened for the slaughter.

20. "But God said unto him, Thou fool! this night, thy soul shall be required of thee." How often thus suddenly does the summons come, and from the midst of earth's abundance the thoughtless one is cut off, not having been led to repentance by the goodness and forebearance and long suffering of God, they go out to find that while they have been laying up treasure on earth for their own enjoyment, they have also unconsciously been treasuring up unto themselves wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God (Rom. ii, 4, 5). That side of the case, however, is brought out more fully in the sequel to this story as given in chap. xvi, 19-31.

"Then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" "He heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them." "When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him." "He that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool" (Ps. xxxvii, 9; xlix, 17; Jer. xvii, 11).

Chas. Goodrich, who has been in Toledo for the past few months, returned to Clinton Wednesday.

Geo. Hard and Geo. Codling are now connected with the Commercial Telegraph line at their residences.

Frank Bradley, a member of the Cleary Business College at Ypsilanti, rode over Thursday on his bicycle.

The Clinton Baptist social will meet at J. Watson's Tuesday afternoon, June 17th. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Miss Bertha Weiss, of Monroe, visited her cousins, Charles and Tillie Rupp, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Bert Ames, a member of the Ypsilanti College, was home Friday and accompanied the band to Sand Lake.

A large number of Clinton people attended the opening at Sand Lake last Friday and a good time was reported.

The village board are figuring to build a new fire engine house for the steamer. That is right. Give it room according to its strength.

E. F. Kirchgessner received his new bicycle Thursday noon and you may bet that the Free Press is delivered promptly these pleasant mornings.

The ladies of the Methodist church held a social at Mrs. Oliver Hill's residence Wednesday afternoon and evening. Supper was served from 5 to 7.

The Clinton Second Nine base ball club and the Tecumseh Second Nine crossed bats at Tecumseh Tuesday afternoon. The score was 31 to 21 in favor of Tecumseh.

We have heard from O. A. Sinclair, who is playing with the Ispheming nine. He says it is a little cool up there but they are playing a very good game just the same.

Mrs. Stebbins, the aged mother of Mrs. Ed Somark, died at the latter's residence at 6:30 A. M. Friday. The funeral took place at the house at 3 o'clock P. M., Sunday.

Some boys threw stones at Mr. Fisher's cat the other day and they missed the cat, one of the stones going thro' the door into the house, and now Mr. Fisher is trying to have the boys tell the justice how it happened.

Rob Codling and Olof Oastman went to the Sand Lake opening last Friday with a nice rig and when they got ready to come home they found that somebody had traded buggies with them, and the boys are looking for the traders yet.

One of the woolen mill salesmen recently sold to a Philadelphia house 30,000 yards of their goods, which if stretched out would reach the distance of 17½ miles. The price was $17,000. The mill is turning out an immense quantity of light weight goods at present.

Saturday evening Chas. Burroughs, Clint Rowland and his son went out in the country to get Mr. Burroughs' horse and colt, with W. R. Muir's team. They put the colt in the calf rack and hitched the horse behind the wagon. On their return they came in contact with one of our bicyclists who did not have his goggles on and the mules became frightened and jumped into the ditch, throwing the occupants from the wagon, breaking Mr. Rowland's son's arm. Mr. Rowland's foot became entangled in the lines and he was dragged several rods. Mr. Burroughs and the colt came out without any serious injuries.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Blissfield wants a street sprinkler.

The "Temple of Fame" has struck Brooklyn.

Measles are becoming quite fashionable in Saline.

Morenci will celebrate the coming Fourth of July.

Sheep shearing has commenced in many parts of the County.

The Patrons of Industry have their big county picnic at Adrian to-day.

The Hudson High School graduating class numbers thirteen this year.

Morenci is all stirred up over the new railroad project between Toledo and Chicago.

The Addison Courier will publish the essays of the graduating class in installments.

The county census enumerators were all at work last week and we have heard of no trouble thus far.

The sparrow bounty for May amounted to $69 81, and still the aggressive little fellow does not exterminate worth a cent.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The first matinee of the Brooklyn Park Association was held on Saturday, May 31st. They will be continued once a month through the season.

Manchester will be obliged to get along with only (?) seven saloons this year, one of them having decided not to take out a license.—Saline Observer.

An exchange says that two quarts of wood ashes enclosed in a cotton bag and suspended in the cistern will deodorize and keep the water sweet during the hot weather. This is sufficient for a 40 barrel cistern.

Col. Eldredge improves the pleasant weather with daily carriage rides and seems mentally as clear and vigorous as ever. It is hoped he may recover much of his physical strength with the advance of the warm weather.—Adrian Press.

"Good Example is a language which all men can understand, and an argument which none can gainsay."—Geneva Cor. Gazette.

True, true! It is the actual practice that takes the strawberry short-cake.—Adrian Press.

J. Reid Crowell was obliged to disappoint the Addison people on Decoration Day as he had a heavy cold which settled in his throat, thus hindering the flow of eloquence that would otherwise have issued from his patriotic soul.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Geo. Acker and W. A. Mace are in their seventies, with a large competence, and need do nothing. But instead of saying that their active days are over, they are among the liveliest workers for the new railroad. That's the kind of old men we like to have.—Morenci Observer.

The Milan Leader says the P. of I. celebration at that place was a roaring success. The procession was two miles long. Gov. Luce's speech was two hours and a half long, five thousand people (more or less) were in town and everybody was happy, notwithstanding the threatening weather.

Cohlen's Uncle Tom's Cabin Co. played to a tent-full audience Wednesday night—another demonstration of the fact that this most ancient chestnut is simply undestrovable. The company has a good band and a quite elaborate outfit. Hudson was the next place in which it exhibited.—Morenci Observer.

While cutting trees in the woods near Posey Lake, yesterday afternoon, Clarence VanRiper was caught by the butt end of a tree which he had dislodged and his right leg was horribly crushed midway between the knee and ankle. Some of the broken bones were driven through the skin. Dr. Dodge hopes to bring the young man through, but he will be laid up all summer.—Hudson Gazette.

As the Smead-Kelley wedding party was proceeding to Deerfield Tuesday evening, and when within a mile of that village, Dell suddenly remembered that he had left his marriage license at home. In the excitement of the occasion and Dell's first experience in matters matrimonial he may be excused, but he really will need a better memory if he desires the conjugal relations to continue along smoothly and without a ripple.—Blissfield Advance.

Notwithstanding the fact that Memorial day was a legal holiday, and the saloons are supposed to be closed on that day according to law, we are informed that there was a large amount of drinking done that day. If this is so the saloons violated the law, and there ought to be some one whose business it is to see that they are made to pay the penalty of their violations. What are officers elected and paid for anyhow?—Michigan Messenger.

The editor of the Munith Tidings, a new venture in the newspaper line, started at a four corners in Jackson county bearing that name, is editor, preacher, undertaker and furniture dealer.—Saline Observer.

Here, then, we have a rare fellow! He can libel a man through his paper, kill him when he comes in to lick him, furnish him with a coffin and preach his funeral sermon. It is possible for one man to become a "Trades Union."—Adrian Press.

We fear that Cupid's arrow or somethin' has pierced the heart of the editor of the Gazette. Hear him.

If thou wouldst view Hudson aright, come see it now in its summer splendors. Its tidy business district, gently-sloping and maple lined streets, and picturesque environs combine to make it the loveliest village of the peninsular state. The secret of all this may be found in the superlative goodness of the inhabitants. A less pious people would not be so plenteously endowed with Nature's bounteous charms.

COUNTING THE PEOPLE.

Some of the Inquiries to be made by the Census Enumerators in June.

The Eleventh Census of the United States will be taken during the month of June. The census enumerators will begin their work on Monday, June 2, and will visit every house and ask questions concerning every person and every family in the United States. The questions that will be asked call for the name of every person residing in the United States on the first day of June, with their sex and age, and whether white, black, mulatto, quadroon, octoroon, or Chinese, Japanese, or Indian. Inquiry will be made also of ever person as to whether they are single, married, widowed, or divorced, and, if married, whether married during the census year. The place of birth of each person, and the place of birth of the father and mother of each person, will also be called for, as well as a statement as to the profession, trade, or occupation followed and the number of months unemployed during the census year. For all persons ten years of age or over a return must be made by the enumerator as to the number able to read and write, and also the number that can speak English. For those who can not speak English the particular language or dialect spoken by them will be ascertained. For children of school age, also, the number of months they attend school will be recorded by the census enumerator. In the case of mothers an inquiry will be made as to the number of children they have had, and the number of these children living at the present time. This inquiry is to be made of all women who are or have been married including all who are widows or have been divorced. Foreign-born males or adult age, that is 21 years of age or over, will be asked as to the number of years they have been in the United States, and whether they are naturalized or have taken out naturalization papers. Of the head of each family visited the question will be asked as to the number of persons in the family, and whether his home is owned or hired; also, if owned, whether the home is free from mortgage incumbrance. If the head of the family is a farmer, similar inquiries will be made concerning the ownership of the farm. In addition to these inquiries, all of which are made on the population schedule, the law under which the census is taken makes provision for special inquiries concerning such of the population as may be mentally or physically defective in any respect, that is, insane, feebleminded, deaf, blind or crippled, or who may be temporarily disabled by sickness, disease, or accident at the time of the enumerator's visit. Certain special inquiries will also be made concerning inmates of prisons and reformatories and of charitable and benevolent institutions. Besides this, a statement will be called for concerning all persons who have died during the census year, giving their name, age, sex, occupation, and cause of death.

This official count of the people comes but once in ten years, and every family and every person should consider it to be their duty to answer the questions of the census enumerators willingly and promptly, so that definite and accurate information may be gained concerning the 65,000,000 people living within the bounds of this great country.

The Rev. Wm. Stout, Wiarton, Ont., states: After being ineffectually treated by seventeen different doctors for Scrofula and blood disease, I was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters. Write him for proof.

THE MOST obstinate cases of catarrh are cured by the use of Ely's Cream Balm, the only agreeable remedy. It is not a liquid or snuff, is easily applied into the nostrils. For cold in the head it is magical. It gives relief at once. Price 50c.

will be at the Lilley House on Wednesday June 18th. Four weeks ago, Dr. B. explained what piles were. In his explanation he claimed that Itching Blind and Bleeding Piles were not piles, only inflammation,—both piles which were bursted blood-vessels and inflammation were easily cured, but one must know the difference between the two in order to know just what must be done.

This fever kills people but piles never does. Piles are only inconvenient and may cause much suffering, but never cause death (when let alone.) This fever never may be therein leaving no external recognizeable results so far as we have been educated. With this education (and this has been only from experience) it can be seen everywhere, in every family almost, in so much that he now says, 'tis not where can you find them but where not. Results given must alone convince them.

Now let us see how this was done. Here was one who came and says, Dr., I have got the piles awful bad; I hear you cure them and do not cut or tie them. These piles were with him paramount as the thing he complained of. On examination I find not a vestige of a pile only inflammation; in a few months this is well and then he says to me: I used to have that catarrh wonderfully; that is all gone since my piles got cured. Did that come from the fever that was down there? Another one who came in like manner with piles, I found no piles, only this fever and when that was gone, why says he, since you got me well down there my stomach which used to be so bad every once in a while and my headache that was distracting once in a while have all passed away. Did they come from down there? Another one coming and complaining in the same way and when cured would say, I used to have that trouble with my water every once in a while or, I used to have the bad uterine trouble (so called) and since that has got well I have none of them at all. Did all that come from the trouble I had down there? Now let me ask some of you can think and reason a little, would it not make one open their eyes, would they not think something down there had an influence with some of these troubles, could they follow them up and by and by not know?

Seven years at this ought to give one some knowledge of them. More next time before he comes; and should you wish to learn more before he comes, go and see him Wednesday. All talks free.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM.

The above society met at L. E. Taylor's Friday night, June 6th. It was the first meeting they have had in nine weeks, owing to stormy weather every night that was set for meeting. As a last resort, to baffle the storm bureau, the time of meeting was changed from Saturday to Friday evening. Song—Dora Davenport and Inez Allen.
Music—R. Welch and Mrs. Witherell.

The next meeting will be held at S. N. Munger's, June 20th. A good program will be presented.

An infallible sign of physical decay is sleeplessness; if this is dangerous in an adult, it is deadly in early childhood. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will always assist in comforting the baby. Price only 25 cents.

THE RIDGEWAY EXHIBITION.

We had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of the Ridgeway school, held on Thursday evening of last week. Under the efficient management of Prof. Daniels, assisted by Miss Clara Temple, the school has been highly prosperous during the past year, and the closing exercises afforded abundant proof of this fact. The exercises were held in Cottage Hall, which proved entirely too small to accommodate the crowd. The audience was packed in, like sardines in a box, and it was fearfully hot, but the crowd was a good-natured one, and they roasted and fanned and enjoyed it until the final drop of the curtain. We present the program in full as announced by Prof. Daniels.

Duet—Boston School Regiment—Flotie Smith and Clara Temple.
Rec.—Dolly's Christening—Mary Culbertson.
Rec.—He Didn't Think—Blanche Wiggins.
Dia.—The Book Agent and the Farmer.
Oration—The Barbarism of Civilization—Charles O. Hiscock.
Dia.—Cat and Dog.
Chorus—The March.
Rec.—Mary's Prayer—Luina Wiggins.
Essay—School Friendships—Alta Gilmore.
Dia.—Two maidens.
School Chronicles—Lulu Gilmore.
Rec.—The Blind Boy—Martha Lawton.
Essay—The Better Things are the Enemies of the Best—Ida Easlick.
Duet—You're Another, I am Nothing of the Sort—Floyd Smith and Bertie Cadmus.
Rec.—Boys May Whistle—Bertie Temple.
Rec.—The Sinking Ship—Nettie Bannister.
Prophecy—Jennie Osgood.
Dia.—Only a Chicken.
Rec.—A Racy Stump Speech—Montie Florence.
Rec.—Which Loved Best—Glen Smith.
Dia.—Making the Best of It.
Rec.—Because—Freddie Temple.
Rec.—Toot's Mistakes—Jennie Lawson.
Essay—We Advance, Step by Step—Lottie Arner.
Chorus and March—Juveniles.
Dia.—Colloquy of Nations.

The program, although lengthy, was sufficiently varied to relieve it from monotony. The original essays and orations by the older students showed careful training of superior teachers, while the recitations by the little folks were all nicely rendered. The comic dialogues brought down the house. The musical part of the program was especially creditable. The chorus entitled "The March," and the chorus and march by the juveniles showed thorough training and rehearsal. The excellence of the music, however, was taken as a matter of course, for that part of the program was in charge of Miss Belle Barlow. Two interesting episodes occurred that were not "down on the bills." Near the close of the program Prof. Daniels gave a short address in the nature of a farewell, as he intends to enter another field next year. His remarks were appropriate and affecting. Miss May Jones, in behalf of the scholars, then presented to Miss Clara Temple a beautiful presentation volume entitled, "Ballads of History and Romance." The gift was handsomely presented, to which Miss Temple responded in a few well chosen words. The closing dialogue, "Colloquy of Nations," was an elaborate piece in costume, in which the older pupils participated, which closed with an elegant tableau illuminated by the red light, thus fitly ending the evening's entertainment. We have attended a good many school entertainments at Ridgeway but never a better one, which was the general sentiment of all who were present. We are afraid the School Board has made a mistake in not retaining Prof. Daniels another year.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 12.
F. E. C. MEDICINE CO.—I picked up one of your circulars advertising your F. E. C. Kidney Remedy, and being a great sufferer, I was induced to try it. I have tried all other remedies and got no relief. I have taken one bottle of your medicine, and it has been worth more to me than its weight in gold.
CHARLES H. REEVES.

"Husband, I Want You to Try It."

I had suffered for years with a complaint the physicians called Gravel, and they had given up the attempt to help me. My wife heard of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and spoke as above. To please her I got a bottle. Used that and two or three more, and presently the trouble vanished never to return.—Washington Monroe, Catskill, N. Y.

To enjoy good health, aim to always have abundant sleep: this can generally be secured by management, unless you have a crying baby, in which case Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will greatly assist.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JUNE 19

If the ocean greyhounds do not stop their racing, some of them will follow McGinty some of these days.

La Grippe has gone and so has McGinty, but the "original package" epidemic is now having a big run.

If Mrs. Grover Cleveland could be a Presidential candidate there would be no doubt whatever as to who would be the next President.

President Harrison's economical fits always come upon him when he wishes to veto a public building bill for some Democratic city.

The Illinois Democrats have planted themselves on solid ground. They will begin their campaign early and make it hot all along the line.

Speaker Reed predicted that Congress would adjourn by July 15th, but the Senate is likely to take longer than that to riddle the McKinley tariff bill.

The House Republicans have passed the tariff revision bill. The senate will now proceed to revise the revision. Next November the people will revise the action of both Houses.

Napoleon once said: "Your hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets." Figured on this basis, the tariff reform newspapers constitute a big anti-Republican army.

Speaker Reed says that no more beer or whisky can be sold over the bar of the House restaurant. That settles it. The members will have to get their cold tea in the original packages.

The same American plow which costs a Wolverine farmer $6.75 is sold in Mexico for $5.75, and this is one of the blessings which protection confers upon the Michigan tiller of the soil.

It is reported that the water melon crop of the South for the present season will reach ten millions of dollars. No wonder the colored brethren are waxing fat and voting the Democratic ticket down there.

The College commencement season is now at its heighth. College commencements have always been interesting but never more so than since the sweet girl graduate has divided collegiate honors with the young lord of creation.

An exchange says: The rubber manufactures of the United States met in New York day before yesterday, agreed to put up prices and then adjourned subject to call of the chair. This is a great country. Present average of protective taxation, 46 per cent. Average under McKinley bill, 51 per cent.

This is how labor is protected. A good Republican in this vicinity, last week, hired nine and one-half days road work for four dollars, being about forty cents per day. If he was a Democrat he would be denounced as an enemy to the laborer, but as he voted for Harrison, and good wages to the laboring man, comment is unnecessary.

William E. Curtis writes from Washington to a Chicago paper that protests have been made by more than 1,500 of the largest importers of the country against the increase of duties on certain articles by the McKinley bill. Also senators from almost every state are receiving letters opposing the bill. "It is therefore safe to say that most of the schedules in which the duties have been increased will be cut down again to the present rates, or even lower."

The new tariff bill is catching it from all quarters. An exchange says: McKinley has already learned that the pathway of the tariff "reformer" is not through a bright parterre of red roses and pink hollyhocks. Even the Administration is disgusted with the McKinley bill. Blaine flatly says that the man that framed it is a fool, and those who support it are no better. Opposition is developing in the Republican ranks, and the chances now appear to be decidedly against any tariff changes at all until the Democrats again take the matter in hand. Every provision of the bill meets with bitter Republican opposition; even the stab at the Southern sugar industry appears to have fallen with a metallic ring upon the breastplate of Western Republicanism.

CURRENT COMMENT.

HE WILL NEED IT.

Mrs. Harrison says Benjamin will save half his salary as President. He will need it. This term will end his officeholding.—Madison Democrat.

THE TAX ON RYE.

Who consumes the 16 bushels of rye annually imported by the people of the United States, and upon which Mr. McKinley has placed a duty in order to enrich American rye-raisers? Does it go to make refreshments for Mr. Morton's temperance hotel?—Courier-Journal.

NOT A BOSTON IDEA.

It is considered a great reform in Boston to force people who do not want a sandwich to buy it before they are allowed to take a drink. This is a Boston idea, but, like most other Boston ideas, it is a plagiarism. It originated with Hon. Levi P. Morton, Vice-President of the Shoreham buffet.—St. Louis Republic.

BUT KEEPING PACE WITH THE PARTY.

The decadence of the Republican press is one of the most remarkable phenomena of the times. It surely indicates the decadence of the party, its descent through all the grades of political degeneracy, until it stands for all that is corrupt in politics, all that is false in political economy, and all that is bad in legislation.—Madison Democrat.

THE WAY OF THE MAJORITY.

When they can't answer a Republican opponent, they shut off debate; and when a Democrat defends himself from an insolent, bullying, abusive attack they censure him, Reed "counting a quorum" to get the resolution of censure through the House. The gag will be gradually perfected, until as a last resort those who offend by beating the majority in argument may be sent to jail.—Chattanooga Times.

SOUTHERN REPUBLICAN INFLUENCE.

It is a fact that Republican influence is waning among the negroes of the South, and either directly or indirectly this means a Democratic gain; indeed, the list of Democratic negroes is daily growing larger, and the Republican evangelist has a hard road to travel and is making few converts for his labor.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE AMERICAN HOG IS SAFE.

The American hog is expected to give a grunt of gratitude to McKinley since the late amendment offered by him which fixes a duty of 10 per cent. on bristles. The indignity offered by the German Government is resented. The hog is vindicated and his bristles protected. Great is McKinley.—Fort Worth Gazette.

WE WILL CHEERFULLY FORGIVE HIM.

Senator Blair is said to be preparing a speech on the McKinley crazy-quilt Tariff bill. The New Hampshire Senator succeeded admirably in talking his Educational bill to death. If he should be able to accomplish the same result for the McKinley iniquity, a grateful country might, perhaps, be persuaded to forgive his errors of the past.—N. Y. Star.

INFANT INDUSTRIES HAVEN'T GROWN.

The percentage of manufactures in our exports during the last fiscal year was only 18.99. Agricultural products made up 78.87 per cent, and mining, forestry, fisheries, etc., 8.14. The per cent of manufactures has not perceptibly increased during nearly thirty years of high tariff maintained ostensibly to protect infant industries.—New York World.

DON'T MENTION IT.

There is a little matter connected with the recent Oregon election which the republican papers of limited circulation appear to have overlooked. It is that the republican majority in the legislature has been reduced from 54 to 20. It is only a little matter of a republican loss of 34 members of the legislature; but for the sake of truthful history the matter should be mentioned.—Dayton Times.

BUT THEY WILL NOT.

It is a clear case that McKinley protection for the Sugar Trust will enable that monopoly to vastly increase the profit which it now wrings from the people. With the demonstration of this fact before their eyes, ought not the Republicans in Congress, as honest Representatives of their constituent's, to amend the sugar schedule, and thus reduce the exorbitant profits of a merciless Trust which monopolizes an article of common use and necessity, and fattens itself at every poor man's table?—Buffalo Courier.

APOSTATE REPUBLICANS.

The Cleveland Leader takes the floor to say that "when Mr. Butterworth began 'monkeying' with reciprocity it was apparent to every consistent protectionist that he was straying from the Republican path, and his exploit in the House has created no great surprise." Even so. What, then, has the Leader to say about the great Republican chieftain, Mr. Blaine, who has been "monkeying" with reciprocity pretty extensively? And what has it to say of the Republicans in the House who have given their support to the Hitt Reciprocity resolution? They would all seem to be on the broad road to apostasy.—Chicago Times.

THE McKINLEY BILL AND PRICES.

Republican Merchants Denounce the Measure—They Assert That It Will Increase Prices 25 Per Cent.

The Detroit News says: The effect of the McKinley bill upon the prices of dry goods is a question of interest to every one, and just how much that class of goods would be enhanced was what the News sought to find out from those in this city who are competent to speak on the subject of the effects of the tariff legislation upon business. With this object in view, several of the heavy wholesale and retail dealers were questioned, and, regardless of political affiliations, all agreed that the result would be very bad, if not disastrous, to trade for some time to come.

Robert J. Thompson, of Metcalf's dry goods house, said that already, in anticipation of the McKinley bill becoming a law, the importers and commission men were notifying customers that prices would advance sharply. The lines most affected were hosiery, underwear, dress goods, and linens. The advance was greatest on linens, but on all classes it would average from 15 to 25 per cent., enough to make a serious addition to the prices which purchasers of necessaries must pay. There was strong opposition to the bill in commercial circles, and some hoped that it might not pass the senate, but he thought partisanship would carry it through, and the people would have to pay dear for their fall and winter clothing.

W. H. Elliott was of the opinion that if the bill became a law, and was given effect on July 1, it would imply disaster for the fall trade. Of course all large retail houses had already placed orders for fall goods, but every order had been taken by the importers and commission men with a proviso in regard to any increase of duty being added, and under the McKinley bill this would mean a prompt advance of all grades of dress goods and other necessities of about 25 per cent., an addition in the case of most of the producing class, who after all were the chief buyers, that would limit their purchase by just that percentage. If the bill took effect July 1, the country would have to face dull business during the rest of the year, and this would mean a change of politics in the house and more business uncertainty. He was in hopes that if the bill passed it would, by all means, not be given effect before January next. In his opinion, there were better ways to arrive at the results desired by the republican party than the present measure. "Take for instance, linen, which is not produced in this country; it is a necessity in every household, and the price under the new law is to be enhanced 35 per cent., in the hopes of some one building up that industry in this land. I am no free trader, but while the manufacturers are to be protected there should at the same time be adequate protection afforded the great purchaser of manufactured goods, the laborer. Manufactories may be built, but as long as there are three men brought into the country while there is work for only one, the prices of labor will be low, in spite of any tariff laws. Carnegie may discourse on the protection of labor, but the influx of cheap labor into the country and into industries in which he is engaged compel him, by competition, to use the same kind of labor. Farmers are in a bad way also. Cereals bring terribly low prices, with but little prospect of increased demand in foreign markets. Taken all together, the situation, in our trade at least, is such that the increase which the McKinley bill will bring about in prices cannot but prove highly detrimental to business."

George F. Moore, of Edson, Moore & Co., in discussing the question, said: "Of course, if the bill passes the senate and becomes a law, the prices of imported goods will be advanced. Really such an advance should not affect the market until about the first of January, but it is safe to say that those who have stocks of imported goods on hand, which they cannot replace at the prices paid for them, will not await the coming of January, but advance prices at once. I do not think, however, that the McKinley bill will ever become a law. It will probably be killed in the senate, as the effects to be expected from it become better comprehended by the business men of the country."

Frederick G. Stoepel, of Burnham, Stoepel & Co., denounced the McKinley bill quite warmly: "We believe in protection, [illegible] protection is all right, but should not be carried to the point where it hurts trade. This country is now manufacturing too many goods to be able to get along without any foreign trade. This agitation is having a bad effect. Trade, although fair in volume, has no life in it. I do not think the McKinley bill, in its present shape, will ever become a law; if it does then there will be an advance, and a sharp one, in the prices of all imported goods, linen probably showing the greatest."

Such strong language in denunciation of the McKinley bill as is given above, and by such staunch republicans as Messrs. Moore, Stoepel and Elliott, are a fair indication of how deep is the dissatisfaction in commercial circles with the measure which for partisan purposes is likely to be forced with disastrous effects upon the business of this country.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

In view of the wide spread attention now centered in the Yellowstone National Park, the following expressions from two of the most eminent American citizens, one a scientist and the other a clergyman, are of great interest.

Prof. John Muir, California's distinguished geologist, speaking of the National resort says: "situated in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, on the broad rugged Summit of the continent, amid snow and ice, and dark shaggy forests, where the great rivers take their rise, it surpasses in wakeful, exciting interest any other region yet discovered on the face of the Globe."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, the eminent divine, says: "After all poetry has exhausted itself, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other revelations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone Park is the geologist's paradise."

The Northern Pacific Railroad, the celebrated Dining Car Route is the only all rail line to this region. For copy of Wonderland, Yellowstone Park folder and other illustrated publications, address any traveling Passenger Agent of the company, or Chas. S. Fee, G. P. & T., N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

An Editor's Faith.

The editor of the Advocate, published at Greenville, Ala., expresses his faith is S. S. S.: "The good this preparation has accomplished is incalculable, and thousands of men and woman that it has saved from an early grave to day rise up and bless the originator and those who placed it in their power to procure it. A number of our acquaintances have used this wonderful medicine to their great benefit, most of them to their perfect healing, and their testimony has been given to the public that others like then may take the healing balm. We know that Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) is no humbug, and can recomend it, and we do most heartily. The proprietors are genial, liberal and charitable, and have done probably as much or more good than any other firm in the South. Read, reflect and be relieved." Greenville (Ala.) Advocate, Nov. 1889.

Treatise on blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

FIGURES AND MARKETS.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS HAVE NO REGARD FOR "SANCTITY."

Facts to Show Who Will Breathe Hardest After McKinley Has Bottled Us Up—The Foreign Market More Valuable to the Farmer Than the Manufacturer.

"What peculiar sanctity hangs about the foreign market?" asks Mr. McKinley. That is his way of casting doubt on the fact that the foreign market is worth consideration at all by free born Americans, and of hinting covertly that the only thing that is necessary for us to do is to cut ourselves off from this foreign market and keep an American market all to ourselves. What else does he mean when he calls his bill an American bill, when he asserts with a needless display of ignorant, patriotic gush that his bill is not a European bill?

The long and short of the matter is that McKinley looks upon foreign trade as harmful to the country and with "the touch of his unhallowed hand" he would throttle that trade. He is willing that we should sell in the foreign market, though we must understand at the same time that no sanctity hangs about it; but he is by no means willing that we should buy in that market at all; it has too little sanctity hanging about it to admit of such a thought.

But if the country should adopt Maj. McKinley's views, and should decide to buy nothing at all in the foreign market, what then would be the result? If we cease to buy in those markets it must follow, as the night the day, that we shall cease to sell there. Foreign commerce is carried on by barter—goods are given for goods, and the balance only is made up in money. For example, our total exports last year were $814,287,961, and of this large sum only one dollar in every eighteen would have been sent to us across the ocean, the other seventeen dollars being made up in goods shipped to us. In point of fact, however, this balance was not made up to us at all; but, on the contrary, we shipped more gold and silver coin and bullion abroad than we received back. The figures are as follows:

Gold and silver coin and bullion exported	$91,627,690
Gold and silver coin and bullion imported	31,223,894
Leaving an excess of exports amounting to	$60,403,796

But our imports of foreign merchandise last year were $779,524,847, against our exports, as shown above, of $814,287,961. Our exports, moreover, were further increased by some $18,000,000 of foreign goods which we re-exported, and our total exports amounted thus to $827,250,468.

Now here is a problem for the protectionists to solve. They say that when we sell more goods abroad than we buy, the balance of trade is in our favor, and money will flow into the country to make good that balance. Very good; but what do these figures from the treasury department at Washington show?

First, that our exports were greater by $56,725,621 than our imports, which, according to the "well laid plan" of the protectionists, ought to have come back to us in money.

But, secondly, the reports show that the gold and silver coin and bullion exported was greater by $60,403,796 than that imported.

And, thirdly, combining the two sums, the excess of merchandise and of coin and bullion exported, we find a sum of $117,129,417 apparently unaccounted for. That is the value of money and merchandise which went out of the country last year with no visible return to show for it. Did the "blarsted foreigners" cheat us?

Not by any means. Every separate article sold across the water was bargained for by two intelligent merchants, the buyer and the seller. Neither of these could ship a penny's worth without the consent of the other. The old saying holds true, that it takes two to make a bargain; and it may be added that these two can make their bargain more satisfactorily between themselves than it can be made when some other power intermeddles.

But what became of the odd $117,000,000? The explanation is simple after all. Foreigners, especially the English, own vast properties in America in the form of government, state and corporation bonds. The operations of the British syndicates last year were famous; and it is well known that many mining properties, many breweries and other manufacturing establishments have fallen into the hands of foreign buyers.

Now the larger part of these millions, not yet accounted for, went to pay the dividends on these foreign investments. Another large part went to pay freight to the owners of the foreign ships that carried away our goods; for only a ridiculously small proportion of our products went out in American bottoms. Besides these two ways for absorbing the excess, there is a third which deserves mention. Thousands of Americans go to Europe every year. These travelers take with them drafts which are cashed at banks in Europe; and our goods must go to Europe to satisfy the holders of these drafts finally.

In these three ways, then, the $117,000,000 are accounted for. It is not a thing to be alarmed about.

But suppose now that the Republicans succeed in carrying out Mr. McKinley's notion that buying in foreign markets is essentially a bad thing and we will have none of it. Then we must take the other side of the matter, which is necessitated by this McKinley notion, and give up our sales in foreign markets, except to make up for the few free goods left us and for the dividends of the foreign investors in America.

If this shutting of ourselves out from foreign markets is carried into effect, who will be injured most by that? Let us examine our treasury report again. Of the $814,000,000 of domestic merchandise exported last year, our farmers sold $599,507,055, and our manufacturers $150,184,940. Mining, forest and fishery products making up the remainder of some sixty millions.

Now the difference between the exports of the farmers and those of the manufacturers is seen to be $449,379,565.

This means that our farmers have three times as much interest in preserving the foreign market as the manufacturers have.

Are the farmers ready to see that market of theirs sacrificed to Maj. McKinley's whims and to his subservience to the manufacturers?

Is is not a hollow mockery, too, for McKinley to call his tariff a farmer's tariff?

THE EIFFEL TOWER TO BE OUTDONE.

American Patriots Decide to Build a Great Wall.

The Nineteenth century is the greatest of centuries for high building. The Washington monument at the national capital is 555 feet high, and is the highest monument in the world. After it was finished the city of Philadelphia determined not to be outdone, and so it was decided that the tower of the new city hall should be five feet higher than the Washington monument, but it is not yet finished.

These were, of course, efforts to beat Europe, but last year the French built their Eiffel tower at Paris, which is about 1,000 feet high. This naturally aroused the spirit of American enterprise, for we all know that we can build higher than the effete nations of the Old World when we try.

Congress has taken the matter up and has determined that we shall hold the first place as high builders. Two committees were appointed upon the assembling of congress in December to devise ways and means for satisfying this laudable desire of American patriots. These committees have been working diligently ever since their appointment, and many specialists have been in consultation with them. The specialists were almost unanimous in their patriotic support of the ideas of the committees.

It may seem singular that two committees were appointed for this purpose; but, in fact, it has been found that this was the best thing that could have been done—the committees rival each other in their praiseworthy endeavor, neither one wishing to be outdone by the other. It is also very gratifying to note that the less prominent committee has been willing to make its plans with reference to those of the other committee.

Every American will be glad to learn that the two committees have at last worked out plans that will lay the Eiffel tower in the shade. The chief of these committees reached the conclusion that it would be much more striking to the world and much more in keeping with the greatness of America to let our structure take some other form than that of a tower. A tower is at best in one place only, and it can be seen from a very limited distance. In order to obviate this difficulty and to give all our people and the whole world besides an opportunity to see our high structure most conveniently, it was decided to build a great wall along the sea coast and along our Canadian and Mexican borders.

At the seaports a kind of trap door, like a flood gate, is to be built in the wall, which will be so constructed as to let all ships pass through which are going outward with our grain and other products; but these doors are so cunningly devised that ships attempting to come in with the goods of other countries are turned aside and dashed in pieces against the wall.

This wall is to be much higher than the Eiffel tower, and it will, doubtless, become the wonder of future ages. It will not only be remarkable for its great height and solidity of construction, but also for its remarkable effects upon the wealth of the people.

As the trap doors at the seaports can only open outward, our ships can go freely to foreign lands with our goods—and that will make us rich. Moreover, as the ships of other lands cannot come in through these gates at all, we shall escape the calamity of cheap, pauper made foreign wares, and, therefore, we shall grow still richer.

Now the other committee has devised a plan of equal wisdom. It has observed that we have few ships upon the seas, and that when swift winged maidens encircle the globe they return very sorrowful of spirits because they do not see the stars and stripes at all on distant waters. The committee has therefore determined in its wisdom that this disgrace shall no longer sadden the hearts of swift winged maidens; and it now proposes to take vast sums of money from the treasure houses at Washington and pay men to build great ships and go forth upon the seas to plant the American flag—this being very easy, as the trap doors in the McKinley wall, for so it is called by some of wicked mind—will permit the ships to pass through and bear the flag forth upon the vast and billowy deep.

And thus it appears that the labor of our two committees will produce the desired result. We shall have the highest wall in the world and our empty ships shall float their flags more proudly than all the heavily freighted vessels of less fortunate nations.

Protectionists are never weary of pointing to the English working classes as a proof of the bad effects of "British free trade" and of the superlative wisdom of the American system of protection. Let them answer this question: How does it happen that forty years ago, when England began her present policy, she had one pauper to every twenty-three of her population, and that now there is only one pauper to every forty-one? Some of our states have more paupers now than they had forty years ago, and the tramp is a decidedly modern institution.

Woolen hosiery and underwear costing thirty-two cents a pound started out just 100 years ago with a protective duty of 5 per cent. These goods have gradually climbed up the protective ladder till now McKinley puts on a duty of 214 per cent. When do stockings cease to need protection? Is this a decent way for our stockings to celebrate a century of protection?

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.
"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. THE FIGURE "9."
The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain two years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

THE REUNION OF CO. F. OF THE TWENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT OF MICHIGAN INFANTRY.

The Twenty-fifth Anniversary of their Return from the War Commemorated by a Meeting and Exercises at Jehiel Davidson's.

Co. F. of the 26th Michigan Infantry was recruited almost wholly in this section of the county. Lemuel Saviers was captain, A. L. Randall, Lieutenant, Jehiel Davidson, Orderly Sergeant, and most of the privates lived either in Tecumseh or some of the adjoining towns. Twenty-five years ago last Friday, June 13th, 1865, the Company arrived in Tecumseh on their return home from the War. That date seemed to be a most fitting time for a Company reunion, and as Jehiel Davidson was the ranking officer still alive and living in this vicinity, it was decided to call the meeting at his residence. The day proved to be a very propitious one. The guests began to assemble about the middle of the forenoon and by noon a company of over one hundred had gathered. Both house and grounds had been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The two principal rooms inside had been transformed into a bower of roses and flags. Upon the walls of the parlor were suspended the portraits of A. L. Randall, Morris Roberts, Abel W. Harding and Emory Waller, deceased members of the Company. Beautiful boquets and small flags were scattered about the room in profusion. The lawn outside was equally inviting. A canvas awning was stretched the entire length of the yard, which, with the trees, afforded abundant shade. A large tent was pitched at the South end of the awning, and at different points about the grounds were hung the national emblems. Among the old relics which were displayed either within or without the house were these:

THE RELICS.

A sword presented to Lieut. Randall by the Company during the war; a Revolutionary sword belonging to L. E. Montgomery's family; Lt. Randall's musket; a photo album containing portraits of the Company, which Sergt. Davidson carried through the war; the muster-in roll of the Company, dated Sept. 15, 1862; the muster-out roll, dated June 10, 1865; an old company account book; a soldiers' record chart, containing a complete roster of the Company at the date of their muster-in; a box full of Company pay rolls; the flag which the Company enlisted under, now owned by Wm. Hayden; several muskets carried by different members of the Company in the field; the camp chair used by Sergt. Davidson all through the war, and several large flags that were loaned by their owners to help ornament the grounds; also a dried boquet in a frame, which Mrs. Davidson made Aug. 10th, 1864, at Alexandria, Va., while there nursing her husband in his sickness.

THE DINNER.

Shortly after noon the City Band put in an appearance, and promptly at one o'clock the gues tsthered their camp chairs under the awning. Comrade Haines invoked the Divine blessing, and a bountiful collation was then served, comprising both the substantials and delicacies of the season. In addition to the Company members and their families, there were also present the friends and relatives of some of the deceased members and many old residents, who had been honored with an invitation. About one hundred and twenty dinners were served altogether and a jollier picnic party we have seldom seen.

THE ROLL CALL.

After the refreshments had been properly disposed of the old vets present were ranged in line by Sergt. Davidson, were ordered to "right dress" and "front face" and the roll of membership was called. Thirty members responded to their names in person, and when the names of the deceased members were called, the tearful eyes of many in that gathering betokened that they too were present, in spirit if not in person. Below is the roster of those answering to their names:

John Britton, Jr., and James K. Crane were afterwards lieutenant's in other companies.

After the roll call the Company gathered on the sidewalk and M. P. Brown took a group picture of the boys. He was successful in getting a good negative, which he has since developed into a fine picture. The entire company then collected beneath the awning to listen to the literary exercises of the day.

THE LITERARY PROGRAM.

Mr. M. J. Tremaine, Mrs. S. W. Anderson and about a dozen other good singers were present, who, with the assistance of an organ, made some fine vocal music. The Band first gave two or three selections and the choir followed with a couple of choruses, "Marching through Georgia" and "Rally round the Flag." The Band then gave that good old patriotic air, "Red, White and Blue. At the request of the company S. C. Stacy then favored the audience with a short address. Sergt. Davidson read a lot of old official orders that were issued in the spring of 1865. Among them were these: An announcement of the resolution of thanks voted to Gen. Wm. T. Sherman by Congress in January, 1865; a notification of exchange of prisoners of war, March 20; the announcement of President Lincoln's assassination April 16, and the taking of the official oath by Andrew Johnson, April 16; announcing the guard and escort to accompany the remains of the deceased President from Washington to Springfield, Ill. These orders were very interesting and brought to mind many old incidents which were fading from the memory of the old vets with the lapse of twenty-five years. The choir then sang, "When Johnny comes marching home."

BUSINESS MEETING.

The members of the company then resolved themselves into a business meeting and formed a permanent organization. Jehiel Davidson was chosen President, Jno. Britton, Sec'y, N. H. Ackley, Treasurer, and Chas. Haines, Historian. An invitation from Jno. Britton to hold the next year's reunion at his house was accepted. M. P. Brown again appeared on the scene with his camera and took a group picture of the entire gathering. Three cheers were given to the ladies who provided the entertainment, three for the band, and three more for the HERALD and the NEWS. The credit of the affair is due to Mrs. Jehiel Davidson, Mrs S. W. Anderson and Mrs. Morris Primrose, the two latter being sisters of Lieut. A. L. Randall. These three ladies fixed the date of the meeting, furnished the entertainment and took general charge of the arrangements, and when the old vets lifted up three cheers for them it made the welkin ring. The Company also tendered a vote of thanks to these ladies and the band. Mr. Britton read the following letters of regret from members who could not be present:

SAINT JOHNS, Mich., June 1, '90.

MR. AND MRS. JEHIEL DAVIDSON; Dear friends:—It will not be necessary to tell you how glad we would be to be with you all June 13th, were we able to come. But we will be obliged to deny ourselves the pleasure of being with you in person, and be content with joining you in spirit, which I assure you we will do most heartily.

Yours most sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. O. L. VREELAND.

NEW RICHMOND, June 2, '90.

MR. DAVIDSON AND WIFE:—Your invitation is at hand. I regret the opportunity, but business is such I cannot be present. Remember me to all of the old comrades present. If possible send me program of those present and proceedings.

Yours truly,
N. ERSKINE.

LANSING, Mich., June 5, '90.

MR. AND MRS. JEHIEL DAVIDSON; Friend and Comrade:—Your very kind invitation to attend a reunion of Co. F, 26th Mich. Vols., was duly received and right glad would I be to be able to attend, but circumstances beyond my control will surely prevent. You have my best wishes for the success of this, the first general gathering of the old Company since their muster out of service. My heart is with you and I wish to be kindly remembered to those who are with you on that day.

Yours most sincerely,
A. A. KENNEDY.

ST. LOUIS, Mich, June 3, '90.

DEAR FRIENDS:—Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to accept your kind invitation to be present at a reunion of Co. F at your home on the 13th. Unfortunately for me, business engagements will prevent my leaving here at that time. Please give my warmest regards to all present, reserving a large share to yourselves. I need not assure you of my hearty wish that all may thoroughly enjoy this reunion, as such a gathering of old comrades cannot be otherwise than thoroughly enjoyed. Wishing you all many more of these pleasant gatherings I remain, Sincerely yours,
L. SAVIERS.

BACK IN THE FIFTIES.

Chas. Culbertson, Sr., presented to the Jonathan Hall Library of Ridgeway, last year, a bound volume, or rather two volumes bound in one, of the Tecumseh Herald, running from Oct. 28, 1852 to Nov. 9, 1854. This covers a period earlier than any number of the HERALD we have yet made mention of. Through the courtesy of the officers of the Library we were permitted to borrow the volume, and we give a few extracts therefrom which will doubtless be of interest to our readers. The paper at that time was a seven column folio sheet, all home print. The first page contains a column of business cards and household reading. The second page contains several editorials and a column memorial on the death of Daniel Webster. It was the first number of the paper issued by Richard, Baxter & DeMott, who bought the plant after the paper had suspended, and gave it a new start in life. The third page—properly the local page to-day—is devoted wholly to Southern and European news and advertising. The fourth page is given up entirely to advertising. PROSPECTUS.

For two years our little sheet has kept its way steadily on under adverse circumstances, having several times changed hands, rather as a matter of accident than choice, and with its editorial department oftentimes almost entirely neglected, its patrons have still given it a steady and uniform support.

It is now once more out of debt, and placed, as we flatter ourselves, upon a firm and permanent basis. In purposes and character, it will be put upon its original platform. It will be neutral, but not neutralized—never pro-Slavery—never Anti-Temperance—never, so far as we may be capable of judging, irreligious or immoral, but liberal, out-spoken, independent and free.

SAW MILL BURNED.

The Saw Mill of Satterthwaite and Comfort was burned to the ground during the night of the 16th inst. How it should have taken fire is a good deal of a mystery, as there had been no fire in or about it for many days previous.

The readers of the TECUMSEH HERALD will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hunderd Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Girls and Mothers Read This!

I wish to tell you of the case of a girl 16 years old, who had been sick with suppression two years. Her father had paid over $300 for doctors' bills, still she was failing. She had the worst countenance that I have ever seen, a kind of greenish yellow, she was emaciated, had constant bowel trouble, and had to take morphine every night in order to sleep at all. All who saw her thought she would die. Her parents said thay had done all they could. I repeatedly urged them to try Zoa-Phora, but they were strongly prejudaginst "nostrums." Finally the mother said, "We must do something and this is as likely to help her as anything She and I pursuaded the father to let the girl try it. As a result, in four months her functions were established and regular, and in six months she was the picture of health—a living wonder to all who had known her.

I could describe 20 other cases, not as wonderful as this, but still very remarkable cures.

Happy Ending of Two Friends

John M. Allen, of Charlotte, N. Y. said to his friend, "Parsons, I am about dead with the Gravel, and can not find help." Mr. Parsons induced Mr. Allen to give Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., a trial. Weeks went by and the friends met. Mr. Allen said Dr. David Kennedy's Favorit Remedy has saved my life. It is a cure for Gravel—and the only cure.

Remarked by R. C. Joiner, of Allen P. O. Hillsdale Co., Mich.: "Nothing gave my rheumatism such quick relief as Dr, Thomas' Eclectric Oil—believe it infallible for rheumatics."

A BEAUTIFUL OPERETTA.

The operetta of Genevieve, which was presented at the Opera House last Friday evening, was a rare musical entertainment. The characters of the play are all ladies, the plot is easy and natural, the music inspiring and yet not so difficult as to be beyond the capacity of amateurs. The general plot can be gathered from the following brief synopsis:

ACT 1.—The friends and schoolmates of Isadore, formerly of Genevieve, while enjoying their recreation in a park near town, are petitioned by a flower girl who approaches in her humble dress and manner to buy the flowers, which it is her occupation to sell. They gather about her with interest, and on questioning her recognize her to be Isadore's lost sister, Genevieve.

ACT 2.—Isadore is discovered alone in her beautiful home, singing her pensive twilight song, "The shades of night are stealing." Her two maids enter, light the lamps, draw the curtains, and soon, as is their custom, they join in their evening prayer. Then the two maids playfully entreat Isadore for a ballad, which she in a humorous vein commences, when they are alarmed by the abrupt and noisy entrance of the girls who bring the wonderful news.

ACT 3.—The scene is laid in the rude cottage where Genevieve lives, a servant to the cruel Roxana and Theresa. The act opens with the entrance of Genevieve weary and dispirited, who sings her plaintive song, "They bid me call it all a dream." At its close her mistresses enter and severely chide her for the noise she is making. They then go out, leaving her to do some menial work. While at her work she sings, "If the world were mine to give." During the last verse, Isadore having approached with the others, is observed—unseen by Genevieve. As Genevieve is pronouncing the words, "If all alone," comes forward in plainer view, Isadore, convinced of the truth flies to her, and the others following cry, "It is Genev'eve!"

Much tact was displayed in the casting of the characters. Miss Agnes Woodward as Genevieve, Miss Grace Heck as Isadore, and Miss Julia Wood as Grace, filled their roles very finely. Mrs. John J. Orr and Miss Etta Coddington as maids filled simple but difficult parts most acceptably. Roxana and Theresa were very unpleasant characters to personify, but they were carried in true artistic style by Misses Ella Jackson and Hattie Conklin. Their costume and general make-up, as well as their singing, fitted the characters they assumed exactly.—Miss Grayson led all the choruses in person, and the chorus itself, composed of fifty young ladies dressed in white, presented a beautiful sight. The position of pianist was one of much difficulty, but it was admirably taken by Miss Anna Osborne. The manner in which Will Ingersoll handled his part in the overture showed that his hand has lost none of its cunning with the cornet.

The Opera House was well filled with a delighted audience, and we are glad to know that the financial receipts were sufficient to compensate Miss Grayson for the time and trouble expended in getting up the concert. It surpassed all her previous efforts in that line, and added new laurels to her well earned reputation for musical ability.

They report a lively and interesting meeting, although small on account of the school closing that evening. Mrs. Rappleye, at whose home the meeting was held, provided a very nice supper for all in attendance. The ladies of that place are arranging for a Demorest Medal contest. While waiting to return on the evening train, they visited the Library, and only wished that Tecumseh could boast of such a beautiful building and such a pleasant reading room. Perhaps some of our boys, whose evenings are spent in the streets, or the saloons, might thereby be saved.

Wm. H. Hendershot of Leslie made a flying trip to Tecumseh yesterday.

Go and get a dish of ice cream at Mrs. N. M. Sutton's to-morrow afternoon.

The Senior High School class has plenty of banqueting on the tapis now. Last Thursday evening the class was entertained at Mr. S. P. Hosmer's. On Saturday evening Prof. Wilson entertained them at his father's residence, Wm. R. Wilson's, near Ridgeway. It is needless to say that they spent two very pleasant evenings.

The Union Picnic committee met last Saturday and changed the date of meeting from Aug. 2d to Aug. 6th. A motion was adopted to invite the Cambridge Farmer's Club to join the organization, and the Secretary will extend the invitation at once. The committee on Program will meet at the HERALD office on Saturday of next week June, 28th, at two o'clock P. M.

Last Tuesday evening the debate on the tariff question before the Tipton P. of I. was concluded. The question was: Resolved, that Protection is better for the masses than Free Trade. Clem Bramble led the affirmative and L. E. Taylor the negative. A. P. Coddington of Tecumseh, was present and took part in the debate by invitation. The Negative beat, two to one. Yes, gentlemen, the tariff is a tax.

A pleasant little episode took place at the M. E. parsonage last evening. After the supper, given at the Church parlors, was concluded, the company adjourned to the parsonage to pay their respects to Rev. Joslyn and his family. After some music, Mr. Tremaine stepped forward and presented to Rev. and Mrs. Joslyn two sets of solid silver spoons, two sets of silver knives and forks and one dozen napkins, which had been purchased by members of the church. In making the presentation Mr. Tremaine spoke of the success which had attended Rev. Joslyn's ministrations here and the great obligations which the Church was under to his family. He responded in a few touching words, after which the guests took their departure.

Thos. R. Kyle has received the Agency for this vicinity of the Buckeye Harvesting Machinery. The Buckeye light mower has been a standard article of farm machinery for over a third of a century. It is the most perfect mower ever sold in this country. It has remained unchanged in its mechanism for thirty-three years, and no mower of late years has ever surpassed it. The Buckeye Binder is the lightest, strongest and most durable. Dynamometer tests always prove it to be the lighest draft binder ever made. Its knotter is adapted to the use of all kinds of twine, and it never fails to tie. Farmers wishing to buy a new mower or binder should examine these machines.

MARY'S SECRET.

Miss Anderson Courts Retirement,

AND THE DATE OF HER WEDDING IS UNKNOWN

To Any Person But Herself and Her Own Navarro—Next Tuesday Probably the Date.

LONDON, June 16.—Very few people know where the wedding of Mary Anderson and Mr. Navarro is to take place. The relatives and friends of the high contracting parties have apparently been instructed to keep this point a profound secret. The fact that Tuesday is to be the great day has been allowed to transpire—other than this is all mystery. "Our Mary," who formerly lived before the public, seems to have now a perfect passion for retirement.

MR. DE NAVARRO.

Seven four-in hands have just raced from Presburg to Vienna, for a prize of one thousand florins. The winner's time was two hours and forty minutes; distance 34 miles.

Owing to the recent failures of the Proerna, Mr. Jameson will make several alterations in the yacht with a view to increasing her speed. The centreboard will be removed.

The strategic railways in Germany have been finished, and it is now possible to throw a million men upon any frontier within three days.

Much excitement has been caused at Inglestadt by an outrage upon a tradesman by a lieutenant. The officer accused the citizen of staring impertinently at him, and receiving no satisfaction he struck the man with his sword, inflicting a dangerous wound. The lieutenant is still at liberty, but his action has been reported to the emperor, and as the monarch is very severe in his treatment of unmilitary conduct it is believed that an example will be made of this offender.

The cotton mills at Reichenberg have been destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $100,000.

TORRENTS OF RAIN.

Joliet, Ill., is Flooded With Water.

JOLIET, ILL., June 16.—A cloud burst deluged Joliet Friday night and was followed by an all night rain, the heaviest ever known here. The upper, eastern and lower portions of the city are inundated by from three to five feet of water. One house was carried away and dashed to pieces on the Second avenue bridge over Hickory Creek. The occupants were rescues.

In Wisconsin.

MADISON, WIS., June 16.—A terrific storm commenced in the south-western part of the state about 9 o'clock Friday night and a perfect deluge of water fell. Reports say that the Pataconica, near Dodgeville, was a raging torrent and tore out several miles of tract of the Illinois Central railway. Large washouts are also reported on the St. Paul near Mineral Point, and also on the Illinois Central railway near Rockford, Illinois. The storm was very heavy here, but no great damage was done.

In Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—A Cedar Rapids, Iowa, special to the Tribune, says: Reports just coming in from neighboring towns show that the railroads have sustained serious washouts in consequence of the fearful downpour of rain yesterday Washouts on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern road north of here will delay their trains for several hours. On the Milwaukee road toward Dubuque a number of washouts have occurred and trains will not be likely to run till tomorrow, while the Illinois Central tracks for ten miles north of here are inundated and all travel is suspended. No serious washouts are reported south. The Cedar river at this point has raised over two feet since four o'clock this afternoon.

HE WAS A WOMAN.

Curious Development at the Burial of a Sailor.

LONDON, June 16.—A sailor going by the name of Hans Brandt, who shipped as an apprentice on the Bark Ida at Pensacola, Florida, was aloft a day or two ago performing some duty, when he fell to the deck. He was apparently uninjured, and arose to his feet. Suddenly he staggered and fell through an open hatch and was killed. While the body was being prepared for burial it was discovered that the supposed male was a female, no one having mistrusted the fact during the voyage. Disappointment in a love affair is said to have led to the girl's escapade.

TURNS UP ITS TOES.

A Newspaper Succumbs to its Big Liabilities.

UTICA, N. Y., June 16.—An application for the appointment of a receiver for the Utica Herald was made Saturday. The application will undoubtedly be granted. It is understood to be made by friendly creditors. The Herald is owned by a stock company under the name of Ellis H. Roberts & Co. It has been understood for a long time that business was embarrassed by very large indebtedness, estimated at considerably above its capital stock, which was $80,000.

Will Get the Contract.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—It is considered reasonably certain at the navy department that Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, will be awarded the contract for building the 8,100 ton cruiser and that the Union Iron Works of San Francisco, will receive the contract for the 5,500 ton cruiser.

IN THE SOUTH.

MEMBERS OF A FISHING PARTY KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

An Aeronaut Falls 2,000 Feet and is Fatally Injured—English Syndicate to Buy Louisville Tobacco Houses.

PARIS, Ky., June 16.—A terrific lightning and thunder storm passed over the northern part of this county and two of a fishing party were killed and two others badly injured. They took shelter under a couple of cattle troughs, lightning struck the troughs, and Joseph Speaks, aged 18, and Lish Wilson, colored, aged 15, were killed. Blanton Speaks was badly burned about the face, and one of his eyes was forced from its socket. Edward Kennedy was also stunned and dazed, and knew nothing for several hours, although able to walk home, a distance of two miles. He was unable to talk or give any account of his companions. After while Blanton Speaks got home. All he could say was, "the trough," meaning that the other boys could be found at the trough. He has since been unconscious and will probably die.

Now They are After the Tobacco Interests.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 16.—An English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of all the tobacco warehouses in this city and Cincinnati. Ex-Congressman Albert S. Willis is attorney for the syndicate, and Julius Barkhouse is its agent. These two gentlemen left a few days for England to perfect the plans. It is said $2,000,000 is the price asked for the good will in this city without any real estate. With the Louisville and Cincinnati markets, the syndicate could control the tobacco market of the world, Louisville alone last year selling nearly 200,000 hogsheads.

His Last Baloon Voyage.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., June 16.—Professor Ed. Hutchinson, the noted aeronaut, was to leap 2,000 feet from a baloon here yesterday. When up, but seventy-five feet, the ropes broke and he fell to the ground, striking on his head. The spinal column was splintered and it is feared he will die.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY.

Slowly, But Surely, Passing to the Bourne From Which There Is No Return.

CINCINNATI, O., June 16.—A special from Philadelphia says: Poor little Cedric Hodson Burnett, the blue-eyed, curly haired son of the authoress of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," is slowly, but surely, passing away among the leafy glades and beautiful dells of picturesque Wayne. The stricken mother, who made her darling boy the type upon which she formed the character of the entrancing little lord, which brought her so much fame and fortune, has left no stone unturned to try and snatch her loved one from the jaws of death. For some time the mother and child stopped at the Stratford, and Dr. J. Solis Cohen assiduously attended upon the little invalid. The result was for a short time satisfactory but as the hot weather set in the poor boy seemed to get weaker and weaker and the anxious mother took him out to peaceful, breezy Wayne in the forlorn hope of putting off the inevitable as long as possible. The little lord drives about the leafy lanes with his parent watching over him. Lovely as ever is he with his large bright eyes and pensive look, but wasting disease gnaws within, and as the summer days pass by the boy is drawing imperceptibly nearer, and nearer that bourne from which there is no return, and from which his mother is making such a brave fight to rescue him. Dr. Cohen says that little Cedric is in a slow decline. He may last for some time yet, but he is doomed beyond all the power of human skill and science.

OBJECTS TO THE CAMERA.

A Popular New York Actress Fights Against Being Photographed.

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was decided some time ago that pictures of the leading artists of the DeWolf-Hopper Opera company should be printed as an advertisement. Miss Marion Manola refused to be photographed in tights, saying that she did not want her little girl to see in every shop window her mother in abbreviated costume. Miss Manola was stubborn, and her manager, by a little strategy last night obtained the desired picture. A flash light was suddenly turned upon the actress when she was in stage costume and the photograher got a good snap at her. Miss Manola turned and ran off the stage, trying, as she did so, to cover her limbs with her hands and a diminutive lace handkerchief. It was some time before she could be persuaded to return and go on with her part. Her lawyer, Judge Dittenhoffer, will early on Monday morning obtain an injunction restraining the photographer from printing any of the photographs until the case is heard and decided. Miss Manola declares she will not go upon a stage in New York again if that picture is printed and issued.

NO REFLECTION ON CORRIGAN.

Satolli Does Not Slight the Bishop of New York.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Michael Walsh, editor of the Sunday Democrat, has received from his correspondent at Rome a letter contradicting the statement published here that "Monsignor Satolli, in his written report, speaks highly of all the bishops and archbishops in America. The name of Dr. Corrigan is not even mentioned in it."

The correspondent says: "Monsignor Satolli has directed me to give an emphatic contradiction to this statement. Archbishop Satolli has availed himself of every opportunity of praising the zeal, wisdom and piety of the archbishop of New York. Archbishop Corrigan was received very favorably by the holy father immediately on his arrival in Rome, and since then."

About the Richmond Terminal Deal.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Edward Lauterbach, who is connected with the Richmond and West Point Terminal, and is also vice president of the Pacific Mail Steamship company, was at his office last night. He refused to talk about the B. & O. deal or the prospects of a subsidy on American tonnage. On the first point he said that Mr. Bacon was the one man who had exceptional facilities for conducting the negotiations, and on the other hand that he knew nothing about the possible action of congress. Mr. Lauterbach may have gone beyond Washington, but he was not willing to volunteer information. He desired that his name should not be used in connection with either matter.

Death from a Fly Bite.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 16.—James Baker, a 17-year-old lad, died from the bite of a blue fly. He was picking chickens in a poultry house here when the fly flew against his lip. He felt a sharp sting for an instant, but paid no attention to it. An hour later his lip began to swell and blood poisoning resulting, he died today.

A Proposition to Purchase Manuscript of the Great Statesman.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Mr. Evarts, from the committee on library reported to the senate an original bill appropriating $20,000 to purchase the manuscript papers and correspondence of Thomas Jefferson, now in possession of his descendants. The papers now offered to congress include 3,600 autograph letters of Mr. Jefferson, about 5,000 letters addressed to him by distinguished men of this and other countries, 19 volumes of original notes and memoranda, etc. From the same committee Mr. Evarts reported a proposed amendment to the sundry civil bill to appropriate $14675 to purchase the Capron collection of Japanese works of art now in the National museum.

HONOR TO RANDALL.

HIS LATE COLLEAGUES IN THE HOUSE

Deliver Eulogies to His Memory—Those Who Spoke and What They Said.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The afternoon in the house was devoted to speeches eulogistic to the late Samuel J. Randall.

Mr. O'Neil, of Pennsylvania, reviewed at length the public life of his deceased colleague. Feelingly referred to the strong friendship which had existed between them for many years, and in conclusion said: His simplicity of manner, his kindly greetings, his devotion to the individual, his courage to do what he believed was right, his fearlessness in asserting his opinions, endeared him to all men.

He was honored in death, as in life, as few men have been honored. Mr. Mutchler, of Pennsylvania, added his tribute of respect to the memory of the dead statesman, eulogizing his public services and dwelling feelingly upon his high and upright private character. Mr. Forney, of Alabama, who for many years served with the deceased upon the committee on appropriations, bore testimony to Mr. Randall's integrity of purpose and indomitable will when battling for the good of the people.

Mr. Butterworth, of Ohio, characterized Mr. Randall as a prince among his people, made so not by the touch of royalty, but by the touch of a greater and mightier hand.

Mr. Vaux, of Pennsylvania, saying that he wished to pay his personal tribute to the character and memory of his predecessor, made an eloquent eulogistic address.

Other eulogies were delivered by Mr. Caswell, of Wisconsin, Mr. Blount of Georgia, Mr. McComas of Maryland, Mr. Dunnell of Minnesota, Mr. Mills of Texas, Mr. Osborne of Pennsylvania, Mr. McCreary of Kentucky, Mr. Ealzell of Pennsylvania, Mr. O'Ferrall of Virginia, Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey, Mr. Mansur of Missouri, Mr. Williams of Ohio, Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky and Mr. Kerr of Pennsylvania. The house then at 5:30 p. m. adjourned until Monday.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessarry to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers. For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Every Two and a Half Minutes

The blood makes a circuit of the body every 2½ minutes, delivering nutriment and taking back waste matter to be filtered out by the liver and kidneys and removed from the body through the bowels and the urinary secretion. Any stoppage or obstruction of this process may produce various forms of disease, such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Headache, Debility, and bad blood with its multiplied evils (boils, blotches, pimples, sores, eruptions, abcesses and the like). When such obstructions exist as evidenced by the presence of complaints similar to those just mentioned, the best medicine to use is Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks the secretions; removing all impure and effete matter through the proper channels. By restoring healthy action of the stomach, liver, and kidneys and bowels, B. B. B. removes all impurities of the blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

WHAT SHE DID NOT SAY.

"I wish to tell you," she firmly said,
"Yes, once for all"—here she caught his eye.
"When faith is ended and hope is dead"—
She looked as if she would like to cry.

"Whatever of love—but that time is past,
That dream is over. You needn't speak,
The bitter truth you must know at last;
Oh! I will be strong though I have been weak.

"But now that you plainly understand"—
Her soft voice faltered, he drew more near.
"I need say no more"—here he caught her hand,
And the word he murmured was simply "Dear!"

And then, as a loving woman should,
She wept on his heart in the old sweet way,
And she said no more, but he understood,
Ah! better far, what she did not say.

HIS FIRST LOVE.

Traddles Tells About It and How It Culminated.

"We must write stories of our love, my lord."
"And chaste ones, madam."—Old Play.

"I thought it among the possibilities to find you here," said Traddles, who flung himself in upon me one evening last week. "I'm in trouble again, as usual. There's a young friend of mine heels over head in love with the nicest little girl in the universe. Every body in our crowd opposes their marriage because they're too young and haven't enough money to buy the National Capitol. Now he's a decent, hard-working, right-minded lad, and the dear girl herself knows the importance of beefsteak and Irish potatoes in the domestic scheme.

"I declare," continued the perennial Traddles, "I have no patience with the sordid obstructionists who seem determined to keep these two youngsters apart. I do protest I'd like to be young again myself merely for the joy of going through another first-love experience. Show me the man who has never felt the irresistible witchery of a pair of girl eyes and I'll engage to show you a case of monstrously thwarted nature."

There was a mere shade of banter in my friend's tone, but I was confident that under his airy manner lay the old kindly gravity which is the corner-stone of his character.

"Traddles," I replied, "I hope you don't believe there lives a man so inhuman as to deny that he has been in love."

"Well, drat 'em! I have heard a good many of 'em say they didn't believe in it. Why, when I remember my own youth I want to get right out of town and take a nap under some rosebush in a country garden, so as to make sure of dreaming the old dream again. Of all my pleasures of memory none is more relishable than those which come laughing out of my boyish past, attended by the fond conceits and the romantic darings of school-day loves. I'm not sure that some of my maturer dreams haven't been as welcome."

He relighted his cigar, and I pushed aside my work.

"Never heard that story of my earliest love, did you?" he asked.

I shook my head.

"You shall hear it now."

Traddles flung himself back in his chair and laughed long and loud. His color came and went. I seemed to read in his look a mixture of mirth and tender regret. Perhaps it was regret for lost youth; may be a chaste memory of a sweet companionship of two innocent and untried souls walking hand in hand along a road bordered with kingcups and daisies.

"She was the daughter of our member of Congress," my friend went on. "I was a lad at school. Our seats—hers and mine—were on the same line, separated only by a narrow aisle, in the little village school-house. I must have been about fourteen then. I recall that I had already cultivated a friendly intimacy with Brown's Grammar, Sanders' Fifth Reader and Somebody's Physical Geography. I had also some indistinct notions of physiology, and had lately spelled down the school, because all the other fellows, including the girls, insisted on terminating dishonor with o-u-r. But my chief claim to scholastic distinction then lay in the awe-inspiring fact that I had reached algebraic equations of the first degree. Thus, if A bought a harness and B a new mowing machine at such and such figures, and A's grandmother wanted a new gingham frock, it was the easiest thing in this world for me to ascertain the cost of it by a deft manipulation of that magical X. (I have since applied it to many unknown quantities, but I seem to have forgotten the trick. It never comes out right any more.)

"Well, as you may guess, the little girl across the aisle and I soon become lovers. I have always felt sure it was that X that brought it about, and, when I discovered that she preferred my sled to all others in the village, and used to have errands after school that led past my house, my condition of mind was simply blissful. But that was nothing to the thrill of triumph that ran through me when I bore her away to supper at a donation party in the very teeth of a sixteen-year-old chap who had come up from New York to spend the winter and who carried the unmistakable air of the city-bred boy, with endless good clothes and a real gold watch and chain. He had cast admiring eyes on my daughter of a Congressman and my victory gave me the grimest satisfaction. I often wondered how he could stand up and smile so unruffled when I glared at him. However, we became friends, and he himself went to Congress, where he distinguished himself for eloquence and patriotism. He was shot through the head while leading a a charge at Five Forks.

"How gladly and rosily the years went by! My little lover and I had reached the age when sleds must be laid aside, but all the time we had been weaving romances. My first and most inspiring thought was to run away and go to sea. The respectably dull life of a merchantman was not to be endured; but there was no war in which I could win deathless renown and come home laden with prize money and decked in a dazzling uniform, principally gold lace. You must know that her parents were inimical to me, so of course I looked upon them as heartless and sordid beings, whose lives I would spare a little longer in consideration of their daughter, the sun-kissed peach that by some unaccountable freak of nature had ripened on a crab-apple tree.

"I determined on a whaler. Aha! That was my grand opportunity. A three years' voyage would do the whole business. I secretly resolved not to write home, though what I expected to accomplish by that I do not recollect. I have an idea, though, that the dear girl for whom I was to carve out a blubber fortune was to mourn me as one dead; that I would return home bronzed and bearded, indulge in a vast quantity of nautical talk incognito, and in the end disclose myself as her long lost love."

I smiled at the enthusiasm with which Traddles recounted the details of his boyish romance, so very like certain memories of my own; but he merely relighted his refractory cigar, and with his head enveloped in a fragrant blue cloud and his voice in voluntarily taking on a gentler tone, resumed:

"For some reason now out of mind, the whaling expedition was abandoned, and the object of my heart's adoration was sent away to a boarding-school. I saw her put on board the train, and, as she was whirled into the distance, every roaring iron wheel ran over my heart. I remember that she had on her first long dress that day, and I can still see the crystal tears that stood on her cheeks when she turned on the platform and moved her lips in mute farewell to me. Oh! the letters we exchanged! I will not try to tell you what we wrote in that long separation. She was away one whole year, and when she returned I was gone from the village and had begun my tussle with the big world. There were no more whalers in it—for me; no gold lace, no romantic and magical acquisition of fame and wealth, but a very earnest, steadfast and plodding devotion to a very prosy and commonplace apprenticeship. At intervals the old dream recurred with painful fidelity, and, now and again, I was seized with spasms of unrest and discontent.

"In the pangs of them I labored chaotically with other grand schemes, one of which involved writing a book and sending a copy of it to my girl lover, with the 'author's compliments' on the fly-leaf. But that, and all my plans for similar grandeur, were rejected one by one in the press of immediate and hard necessity; and when, at the end of my apprenticeship, I went back to the old home for a brief visit, almost the first person I met was the original of the image I had carried in my heart during six mortal years."

"Dear me," I found myself saying (for the story had wrought upon me greatly), "what came of your reunion?"

"I am coming to that," was Traddle's reply, with the rapt manner and the far-away gaze of one whose vision is alight on the rainbow that always bends across the morning sky of life. "She had finished her school course, and been home I think about six months. When I spoke to her of our past and looked at my coarse clothes with a kind of sad humiliation (of which I am ashamed) she adroitly changed the subject. I saw her at church a few times after that, but—well, our story had been told and the volume was closed. The next time I left the village it was forever. About a year later some thoughtful friend sent me a newspaper containing an account of her marriage to the handsome son of the village storekeeper, whom I remembered as a lad chiefly by the circumstance that he always had his hair dressed with something agreeable that we less favored youngsters were unable to achieve."

"Have you ever met her since?" I asked, with genuine solicitude.

"Yes, once," he replied. "She chanced to be passing through the city in which I was living and stopped to spend a day with one of the companions of her boarding-school time. That was something like twenty years after I left the old home. I called on her and found a fine, matronly and most comfortable woman. Four sturdy boys hung over her with a fondness that was beautiful—not unlike the picture Miss Mulock drew of Edna Kenderdine and her sons, all proud of their mother and as careful of her as if they had been lovers. I loved those lads of hers, and told them so, much to their wonderment."

"But the mother: you surely—oh, Traddles!"

"I merely exchanged a few conventional and quite unmeaning commonplaces with her. There was no word of allusion to the romance that glorified our youth and to this hour tinges my life with a sweet melancholy, in which is more pleasure than pain. Good-night."

Queer Scenes in a Maine Court.

The Skowhegan correspondent of the Fairfield Journal gives the following description of the homelike appearance of the Maine Supreme Court room during the present term of court: "Ladies in the gallery bring their needle-work and sit out the hours of the session. It is interesting to watch them threading needles, tying knots, basting, occasionally pausing to catch some portion of the evidence and again to confide in a neighbor something relative to some newcomer, interspersed with the slight click of the scissors, all of which tend to impress the lookers-on with the solemnity of the occasion and add perceptibly to the 'homelike' appearance of our judicial residence."

The Great Greenland Whale.

Few even among the most thoughtful of the genus homo, ever stop to consider the immense size of the great Greenland or Bright whale (Balena mysticetus, L.) Nillson says that it will weigh over 100 tons. Just think of it, 220,000 pounds! At that rate the gigantic creature would outweigh 83 of the largest elephants or 500 grizzly bears. Sliced in chunks of 1,000 pounds each, his carcass would load a freight train of eleven cars to its fullest capacity. The whalebone in such a whale would weigh as much as three of the largest Norman horses, and his oil would fill 150 kerosene barrels

OUR HEAVENLY FATHER.

LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 22.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xii, 22-34—Commit Verses 27, 28—Golden Text, Luke xii, 30—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

22. "And He said unto His disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on" (R. V.). The previous verse, which is the last verse of the last lesson, contrasts treasure in this world for one's self, and treasure with God, which is enduring. Men who live only for this world will naturally seek treasure here; but disciples of Christ who are no longer of this world should seek to have their treasure where they belong. His disciples may have thought, as He told of the man building larger barns in which to store his corn, well, we shall not be troubled that way; but the question with us is, now that we have left all to follow Him, what about the necessaries of life, our food and raiment which we actually need. If these were their thoughts He read them, and met them with the command, "Take no thought," or "Be not anxious," even for these things. Obedience to this command would take out of many lives about three-fourths of all their trouble. Then in Phil. iv, 6, is the command to be anxious about nothing, which will certainly cover the other fourth, so that there is no permission for a single anxious thought in the life of a Christian.

23. "The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment." When He, after fasting forty days, was tempted to turn stones into bread, His reply was, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. iv, 4). And again when weary, hungry, and thirsty, He sat on Jacob's well and the disciples brought Him food He said "I have meat to eat that ye know not of."

24. "Consider the ravens; * * * God feedeth them." In the sermon on the mount He called their attention to birds generally; but here He selects one kind, and that an unclean bird, classed among those which God had said were to be an abomination to Israel (Lev. xi, 13, 15). This is the only place where the word is used in the New Testament. In Job xxxviii, 41; Ps. cxlvii, 9, God is said to provide for the raven its food and hear the cry of its young. And in I Kings xvii, 4-6, it is this unclean bird which brings Elijah his food morning and evening. There is surely something very special in this command to consider the ravens. Are we not reminded that He maketh His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust; and maketh the wrath of man to praise Him (Matt. v, 45; lxxvi, 10). If God cares for and can make use of even the abominable raven, surely He will not fail to supply the need of those who have been made whiter than snow by the precious blood of His dear Son.

"Of how much more value are ye than the birds!" The sparrows, two of which are sold for a farthing, or five for two farthings (Matt. x, 29; Luke xii, 6) are cared for by Him; how much more will He care for those who are bought with such a price.

25. "And which of you by being anxious can add a cubit unto his stature;" (R. V.) Or "age" as in the margin? To add a foot and a half to one's height would certainly be a great matter; and as the next verse indicates that what is here referred to is some small matter, it must be that the meaning is "who by anxious thought can add even a half step to the length of his life?" Who can with all his care prolong his life a single moment unless God so wills it? Or if it should possibly signify increased importance in the eyes of others in this world, such as might come from great stature, even then we must remember that "Promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south; but God is the Judge, He putteth down one and setteth up another" (Ps. lxxv, 6).

26. "If, then, ye are not able to do that which is least, why are ye anxious concerning the rest?" The little child resting in a mother's love, entirely dependent on a mother's care for food and raiment and comfort, not knowing enough to have an anxious thought, not thinking of growth or attainment of any kind, is a picture of the unconcern and rest which every child of God should have concerning all things temporal. It is hard for a strong man to realize it, but even the strongest physically is as dependent upon God for everything as the little child upon its mother. Look up; leave all to God; be trustful and obedient, and "rejoice in the Lord alway."

27. "Consider the lilies, how they grow." Now He directs us to the flowers painted by His own hand, growing so quietly, so noiselessly, so beautifully, and He assures us that these excel in glory all the raiment of the wealthy Solomon. However rich and fine and costly might be the garments of Solomon, they were all put on, they were not his personal glory, but only such as any one could obtain with the same money. The beauty of the lilies could not be bought with money, it was not put on, it was from within, the glory of each flower was a part of itself.

28. "If then God so clothe the grass * * * how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?" If such beauty is bestowed on flowers which fade in an hour, surely He will not fail to provide suitable clothing for bodies which he will one day make just like Christ's glorious body.

29. "And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind." The margin says "Live not in careful suspense." If it was not possible for every child of God to banish forever every anxious thought concerning food and raiment, our Saviour would not so insist on it. And when He so insists on it, how dishonoring to God all such anxiety must be;

30. "Your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things." Here is the ground of our quietness and confidence: we have a Father in Heaven, and He knoweth. The nations of the world who have no Father in Heaven, all people who are of their father the devil, may well be anxious and careful to provide food and raiment for themselves and their households, but children of God by faith in Christ Jesus should have confidence in their Father and be at peace.

31. "But rather seek ye the Kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you." Not only does He tell us that our Father knows of our need, but here is the un- [illegible] if we do the one thing here commanded, all the temporal things we need shall be added.

32. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom." They are to have no anxiety about such temporal things as food and raiment; they are also to have no anxiety about the Kingdom for themselves. Their Father, whose children they now are, will surely see to their eternal as well as temporal welfare.

33. "Sell that ye have and give alms; provide yourselves * * * a treasure in the heavens that faileth not," etc. There is such a thing as adding to our treasure in heaven.

34. "For where your treasure is there will your heart be also." The hearts of Israel were often back in Egypt; the heart of Lot's wife was in Sodom; the hearts of 22,000 of Gideon's army were at home; hence these were of no use to God.

Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. STONE IN THE KIDNEY.

I was first taken with sharp pains in the lower part of my bowels in the region of the bladder. Shortly blood appeared mixed with my urine, and a few weeks later I had an attack of gravel. I tried a number of doctors. One said it was gravel, another and another stone in the kidneys. For three months I was under the care of an eminent doctor at Albany, but constantly growing worse, went home to die. At this time I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and am now robust and strong. A remedy which can do this for one so near death as I was should be known everywhere. I hope this statement will cause others afflicted as I was to use the remedy.—C. W. Brown, Petersburgh, N. Y.

Inflammation of the Bladder,

THE PATRONS OF INDUSTRY

And their Big Mass Meeting held at Adrian Last Week Thursday.

The Lenawee County Patrons rallied in force at the County seat on Thursday last to hold their first County mass meeting. The weather proved to be propitious and the patrons responded with a big, jolly crowd, and to say that the affair was a rousing success would be simply stating the unvarnished truth. Early in the forenoon farmers' teams, most of them carrying the whole family, came pouring into the city from all points of the compass. A procession of several hundred teams was formed and proceeded to the fair grounds. A picnic dinner was served and the crowd proceeded to the grand stand where the speaking was held. The grand stand was packed and the entire space between the grand stand and the judges' stand on the race track was filled with the sturdy yeomanry of Lenawee. The speakers were A. S. Partridge, President of the State Organization, and Gov. Luce. We have only room for a few extracts from each speech. Mr. Partridge said:

The time has come when every farmer, and every one engaged in other pursuits for their daily bread, should closely study the question of economy. Those who represent the people in our legislative halls should pass laws for the benefit of the people—not for their own pecuniary benefit but for the good of the commonwealth. Business men under the laws of the State have become independent, and the majority immensely rich, while the working people have, comparatively speaking, merely subsisted. Monopolies and trusts have so combined as to cause the industrial interests of the country to be governed by a few. That the order of the Patrons of Industry was drifting into politics, a thing that many thought was wrong, was true, and it was to their good that they should do so, as the question with which they were battling was a national one, and should be governed to a great extent by the statesmen of our land. Many of the lawmakers of this Union are interested in trusts and monopolies, and work their own individual purposes. Is it right that foreign syndicates should usurp the western domains of our country, and that the farmer who struggles single-handed should fight such opposition? The farmer of to-day reads the newspapers and is fast becoming awake to the imposition which is being practiced upon him. And for these reasons it has become compulsory that the farmer should be represented in legislative halls, and have laws made by which he would be fairly dealt with. In regard to the order, it would be a benefit to the business man, as it would to the members, as they pay as they go, and no bad debts are left upon the books of the merchant.

The English brewery trust which has been securing the largest concerns in the United States, is an example of the foreign octopus which is encircling Americans in its deathly meshes. If they can control breweries, they will control saloons, a place where politics are muchly talked, and with their money consummate the changes in our laws which will make us aliens. The Patrons are organizing all over the country, and are a class that know it is possible for farmers' co-operative associations to live, and will stand together for the interest of the masses. Business men have their associations by which to protect themselves, which is perfectly right. But what is not right is that business men should solidify themselves and make the consumer pay an exorbitant profit, while the working man and farmer strive for a mere pittance. Farmers want to trade with home business men, but want to do it on a fair plane. As it is, the farmer cannot pay the present prices and raise the mortgage on his farm. Unless the farmer boldly comes out for his rights he will soon be put on an equal with the serfs of European countries.

Gov. Luce made a lengthy speech, a portion of which is given below.

"What the farmers need, what they want more than anything else, is 'knowledge.' They wanted that more than they did money. A farmer needs to be a broad man; an educated man. It doesn't take much of a man to be an insurance agent or a banker; most anybody can do that business, but it takes a well posted man to run a farm right. I've done everything of farm labor. I've done a deal of hard work on a farm, but I have done a deal harder work trying to make people believe it. But to-day he could see where he could make his brain help his hand. Farm work of itself did not stimulate much brain force. There must be a quickening of the brain power to stimulate us to action. Too many of us go out educated, but we forget. We do not know as much at 40 as we did at 20. I wouldn't give a 'shuck' for an organization that does not take in our wives and daughters.

"We need these associations to help to brighten us up and give us new ideas. Formerly the majority of patients in insane asylums were farmers' wives; they went insane for lack of association. That is all changed now and our asylums are not crowded with the wives of farmers.

"The successful farmer is more valuable to business and to all interests than the one who just manages to get along. The farmer ought to be strong in whatever party he casts his lot. The great evil of to day is the combination of wealth. Merchants have to struggle the same as others. The oil trust is the most gigantic in the country. They reach out not only for the oil business, but for other matters. Rockefeller is worth $130,000,000. He has just given $600,000 to a church for a building at Chicago, and do you think the members of this church all over this country would say a word against this man? Ah, here's the danger.

A celebrated artist in town has just finished a new sign. It reads: Use Laxador, the golden remedy for all liver diseases. Price only 25 cents.

MILLIONS UPON MILLIONS

OF HIDDEN WEALTH AWAITING A LUCKY DISCOVERY.

The Wonderful and Gigantic Mining Works of a Vanished People—The Immense Mineral Wealth of Michigan—An Exhibition of Rare Interest and of Great Value to the Country—It May Be Worth a Fortune to You to See It.

Among the unsolved mysteries of the American continent not even the strange remains of the mighty works of the Ancient Mound Builders are so extraordinary or so puzzling to archæologists as the ancient mines discovered in various sections of the country, but most frequently and on the most gigantic scale in the state of Michigan. When the first white men visited this continent they found that the Indian races of Mexico and Peru included workers in gold and silver. These metal working arts were confined to a small class of peculiar artisans, closely related to the priesthood. The art of working copper, though not of smelting it, was also partially practiced in Mexico. But copper was not mined in Mexico, and the small pieces of native copper used then came from regions unknown to the Mexican people

Both in North and South America were found gold and silver mines that were worked. Cinnebar (quicksilver) mines were also worked; but not for the metal, whose reduction was not understood, but for the ore only, which was used for paint. An extensive was discovered in North Carolina. Inasmuch as mica was unknown among the Indians, and the mine workings exhibited signs of vast antiquity, conjecture is lost in imagining the race and the civilization that excavated these mysterious works. There are unquestionable evidences also of slight workings of some of our lead mines.

The most immense prehistoric mining works of America are the ancient copper mines of Michigan. So immense was the work done by the long vanished ancient race of miners that it is doubtful if a hundred years of mining by the white race, with all the skill and machinery of the nineteenth century will excavate more tons of rock or leave upon the face of the earth vaster traces. All the evidences lead to the conclusion that these ancient and unknown miners must have been at work in the Michigan copper mines not merely hundreds, but thousands of years. Not only are their left, but their abandoned works—over which the debris and vegetation of lost centuries has grown—yield upon examination many of their rude ancient tools, and plain indications of most of their mining processes. Some mysteries remain, as their lost art of tempering copper like steel, which is attested by a few specimens only, showing that it was probably rarely practiced by a few experts.

Michigan is remarkable, however, not only for the vast extent of its ancient copper mines, but also because there exist traces of a greater variety of ancient mining than is known elsewhere. Michigan mines produce iron, copper, silver, gold and mica. Until recently the silver and gold mines were not discovered; but, to the astonishment of archæologists, faint but significant traces have been found indicating that these difficultly discovered veins were known and explored in by some prehistoric people. There are also signs of ancient workings of mica.

It has been and still is generally supposed that the prehistoric people of America knew nothing of iron. Certainly the Indians did not. No where else in either North or South America is there a trace of the use of iron; but several ancient mounds of Michigan have revealed from their lowest recesses traces that indicate, if they do not prove, the burial of iron, either as weapons or ornament, so many ages ago that only the peculiarly marked color in the soil tells unmistakably of the work of man, and microscopic and chemical research reveals traces of iron. With these indications as pointers and certain appearances occasionally observed in the iron mining regions, indicating surface removals to a slight extend from various bodies of outcropping ore by some ancient and unknown agency, there is an increasing conjecture that the prehistoric miners of Michigan were just discovering the art of working iron, and had probably been developing it for some time, when occurred (whatever it was) that overwhelmed their civilization, drove them away, and finally abolished their arts if not their race.

At the Detroit International Exposition, which will open August 26 and close September 5 this year, is expected to be exhibited a large and rare collection of the ores and mining products of Michigan, mining machinery, curious archæological collections of ancient mining tools and implements, constituting an exhibit of the rarest interest, alike to the student, to the curious, and the business men seeking or already interested in mining stocks or property. There has never before been a showing upon any large or well ordered scale of or of the strange works of that remote and unknown past, and people whose history and fate are the despair of archæological science and the unsolvable mystery of prehistoric conjecture.

One great advantage of this display will be its instruction to the general public. Very few men know valuable ores when they see them. Here they will see all kinds, properly labeled, and learn to distinguish them. Many a man, no doubt, on his farm or land, and never suspects its existence, from not knowing valuable mineral ores when he sees them. Some of the richest ores are difficult to find, even by miners. Think how many years all sorts of mining explorers have been prodding almost every square rod of Michigan; and yet it was only lately that the silver, gold and corundrum mines of Michigan were discovered, because the experts who were looking for copper and iron did not know the other ores. And still there are no doubt hundreds of new mines yet to be discovered. The general people do not even know the signs of ordinary minerals, and still less many other more evasive natural treasures, some of which may exist in their vicinity. To some the object lessons of this exhibition may prove the beginning of happy fortunes. To all it will be interesting; and it will be of great value in advertising the splendid possibilities and vast natural wealth of the state.

WALKS EVERY DAY OVER A BIG FORTUNE

The annual camp-meeting of the Seventh Day Adventists of Iowa, was auspiciously opened Tuesday at Des Moines.

"THE HORNY HANDED."

WHAT THE LAST DECADE HAS DONE FOR THE TOILING FARMER.

An Extraordinary Decline in Prices Joined with a Great Improvement in Quality of Agricultural Machines and Implements and Almost Everything the Farmer Buys—Grand Opportunity to See All the Latest Inventions and Improvements, and to Learn Factory Prices—Ten Days of Profit and Pleasure.

"In the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat thy bread," was the doom pronounced in holy writ upon the whole human race. But this, which seemed a curse, has been the greatest blessing. For all the advance that mankind has ever made from idle savagery up to the highest civilization has been the direct result of hard work, in the ever enduring effort to make life easier and better.

If there is any one class of men more than others to whom the biblical doom applies, it is the farmers. In all ages and nations the tillers of the soil have labored early and late, have been exposed to sun and storm, heat and cold. Their toil has always been almost incessant. But, within the last generation mostly, science and invention have come to their aid, and have marvelously improved their condition. The modern farmer is not compelled, like his father before him, to rise at the earliest dawn and toil till the latest daylight with the ax, the maul and wedge, the heavy old style hoe, the ancient back-breaking as well as sod-breaking plow, the flail, the scythe and the grain cradle. The mowing machine, patent reaper, sulkey plow and harrow, tedder, seeder, cultivator, thresher, sawing machine, and other improved tools, have vastly increased his capacity and at the same time lightened his labor. And his wife's toil has also been lightened by invention.

The modern farmer is both a mechanic and a scientist to some extent. He breeds valuable blooded stock; he knows how to use machinery; he aids his wife and pretty daughters to "dress like folks;" his home has its piano, and books, papers, magazines, carpets, curtains and good furniture. He keeps his carriage, has some leisure, and he belongs to the intelligent classes. Still he is

THE HORNY HANDED.

Invention and improvement cannot quite remove the ancient doom; they can only slowly change it more and more into a blessing.

This is the national census year, therefore it is a good time to take stock of improvement, and note what advance has been made by and for the farmer in the last decade. The advance has no all been confined to new inventions and improvements in machinery, implements and appliances, though these have done much. The farmer has had a great benefit from the general advance of the country and the world. There has been a of almost everything he has to buy. A careful comparison made in the market prices for the month of April, 1880, and the month of April, 1890, in a village in the midst of a farming region—the data being obtained from the market reports for the two years in the same country paper, and also from the books of the same merchants—shows the following astonishing results:

	Price 1880.	Price 1890.
Harvester (self-binder)....	$316.00	$128.00
Mowing machine.....	86.00	50.00
Two seated spring wagon..	100.00	60.00
Farm wagon	87.00	48.00
14-inch steel beam plow...	3.00	12.50
Sulkey cultivator.....	45.00	29.50
Walking cultivator.....	35.00	18.50
Horse corn planter and check rower.....	76.00	36.00
Barb fence wire per lb.....	.10	.0[illegible]4
Fence staples per lb.....	.10	.04½
Cut nails (iron) per keg, 8-p	5.75
Steel nails, per keg, 8-p....		2.78
Cook stoves.....	30.00	22.00
Wash boiler.....	2.25	1.70
Horse shoes, per keg.....	8.00	4.50
Pick axe with handle.....	1.38	.82
Plow clevis.....	.20	.10
Milk pans, per dozen.....	2.25	1.00
Post augur.....	2.25	1.15
Chain, per lb.....	.21	.11
File.....	.62½	.25
Cistern pump.....	4.25	2.20
Wringer.....	7.00	2.80

Cutlery in general, corn shellers, harrows, and many other articles reduced one half or more. Sugar, best granulated, 8 lbs. for 1 in 1880; 16 lbs for $1 in 1890. Kerosene oil, Michigan test, 24 cents in 1880; 10 cents in 1890. Salt, per barrel, $3 in 1880; $1 in 1890. Reduction in teas, crockery, dry goods, boots and shoes, furniture, lumber, drugs, and most other goods, 25 to 35 per cent. Reduction in men's clothing over 50 per cent. on the average.

Not only have prices thus been reduced, but the machines, tools, and all goods are

than they were ten years ago. Steel nails have taken the place of iron nails. Mowers and reapers, corn shellers, cultivators, plows, wagons, harrows, and all the goods you buy, have been improved by invention, and machines are largely steel now where they were iron then

To many persons this will be a very surprising showing; but they will find it substantially true in their own market village or city; only, of course, some of their prices may vary a little from those given, as the above figures are from a rural village, which may be more favored than some and less favored than others in distances from manufacturers, freight rates, profits of local dealers, etc.

What the farmer and his wife need is the latest inventions and improvements in agricultural machines and implements, household wares and tools, and also in most other manufactures; and a chance to learn factory prices as well as retail, so that he may know whether his home market is giving him a fair show. At the Detroit International Fair and Exposition to be held in Detroit, Mich., the last week in August and first week in September, will be the largest exhibition of agricultural machines, implements, and also of all other tools, machines and manufactures, goods, wares and products ever collected in America. He and his wife and children can see and get prices on the best of everything they have to buy, from clothing to tools, and from luxuries to necessities, either for the family, household or the farm. And he can also see and compare the best farm stock—horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry—of the American continent, including the most costly and famous animals; and the best grains, fruits, vegetables, flowers and other products; besides furniture, carriages, pianos, clothing for both men and women, and all rich and fine goods, jewelry, art goods; and everything that money can buy or heart wish, in enormous profusion. And in addition will be with the delights of a great international fair, and its games, concerts, spectacles, races, exhibitions, balloon ascensions and other thrilling shows of all sorts, a vast and costly art gallery with the most famous paintings and statuary on this continent. The city of Detroit is also one of the most charming cities in America to visit, with broad maple-shaded avenues; theaters, operas, delightful river and lake excursions, the cheapest in the world; and a host of various attractions. At that time all roads will lead to Detroit, with big excursions over them, at low rates, and it will be in the most delightful season of the year to visit the lake region and its beautiful queen city.

RAISIN RACKET.

James Taft has been seriously ill for the last few days, but at the present is better.

Corn in this section of the country looks very well. Haying will be begun generally this week.

It looks as though Raisin was going to have a Hutchinson in the form of E. G. Wilson. He now has in the neighborhood of 1300 sheep that he has bought.

School at the Seminary closes Friday, June 27th, at 10 o'clock, at which time a class of six will graduate, and in the evening will be the Alumni exercises. Geo. Kelley of '89 will give the oration.

The Baccalaureate sermon at the Seminary last Sunday, P. M., delivered by Rev. Kerridge of Adrian, was very instructive, and the advice given to the class of '90 was something they could well listen to and carry through life's journey.

About seventy-five people came up on the excursion train last Sunday, from Toledo. Judging from the racket that was made by the whistles on four steamers at the time the train arrived one would think that the fourth of July had sprung suddenly upon us, and that a thousand people had come up to spend it.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. Jas. Lanning is having a contest with the grip.

A nice, gentle rain would be a pleasant sight to the farmers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley and daughter spent Sunday last at J. Fridd's.

Mrs. Herbison's funeral services were largely attended, Tuesday last Rev. Williams of Clinton, conducted the services.

The excursion to Devils Lake last Sunday was not very well patronized from Tipton. Most people can find time to go the lake, aside from going on Sunday.

Miss Addie Halladay of Napoleon, returned home Saturday, after a week's visit with friends here. The party of girls who were entertained at J. B. Kemp's last Thursday, report a pleasantime and Miss Halladay to be a pleasant and genial acquaintance.

A great opportunity to visit the Northwestern country at a very small expense. Do not miss it.

Send to A. J. Smith, Gen'l Passenger & Ticket Agent, Cleveland, O., for circular of information.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Joe Exelby is failing slowly.

Erve Hause was home over Sunday.

Foot Ball is the chief amusement on our streets evenings now.

Peter Covel lost a horse last week by the breaking of its leg.

J. B. Vanvleet from York State, was a visitor at Will Osgood's the first of the week.

The Devils Lake excursion last Sunday was not patronized from here very largely.

Gravel hauling has been done on our streets for a short distance, but how we long for a "Bank of gravel" all over town.

I. S. Osborne will soon have another house on North street ready for a tenant. Irve is bound to keep Britton booming in the buiding line.

"Husband, I Want You to Try It."

I had suffered for years with a complaint the physicians called Gravel, and they had given up the attempt to help me. My wife heard of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. TECUMSEH TABLE CO.

ANOTHER NEW MANUFACTORY SUCCESSFULLY STARTED UNDER MOST FAVORABLE AUSPICES.

A Brief Sketch of the Enterprise, with a Description of the Present Plant and Future Prospects.

As the Tecumseh Table Co., began work last Monday morning with a regular force of hands, this seems to be an appropriate time to take a little review of the establishment, and show what has been accomplished in the period, since the enterprise had its inception. The company was formally organized on the 21st. day of January 1890, with the following stockholders: Wm. Hayden, C. A. Slayton, H. S. Lee, J. H. Smith, H. W. Conkling and O. P. Bills. Mr. Hayden was chosen President, C. A. Slayton, Treasurer, and J. H. Smith, Secretary. As soon as the company was organized it took immediate steps to procure a good location and purchase the necessary machinery for a first class manufacturing plant. The old Agricultural Works building owned H. W. Conkling was leased for a term of years, and upon the 1st. of April, when Mr. Kinney vacated, workmen began to put the building in proper shape for the new business. The structure is an admirable one for such a purpose. The part on Chicago street is 25 by 80 feet, and the wing on Pearl street is 40 by 70 feet, both three stories high. The engine room is located in the angle beween the two wings, and is very finely arranged, having a brick floor, and skylights, and all the modern conveniences to make it perfect. The engine and boiler, of 75 horse power, with tank, heater and all other appurtenances, were furnished by the Lansing Iron and Engine Works, and were put in under the personal supervision of Mr. H. W. Conkling.

The machinery now placed and ready for use comprises the following: One 8 foot swing saw; one No. 2 sawing machine one No. 1 band sawing machine; one improved large sawing machine; one 30 inch buzz planer; one 30 inch No. 2 furniture planer; one double spindle shaping machine; one 42 inch, 3 roll Invincible sand papering machine; one 24 inch drum sanding machine; one Prybell boring machine; one combination boring machine; one carving machine; one corner block machine; two wood turning lathes; one table machine and V jointer combined; one double emory grinding machine; two coil pipe boxes; two Towsley glue heaters and fixtures. Besides the above there is a large amount of small tools and machinery. The heavy machinery is set on the lower floor, and the lighter machinery on the second floor of the South wing. The second floor of the North wing will be used for finishing and the entire third floor will be used for storage purposes.

Among the other equipments may be mentioned these—A steam elevator has been put in which will lift one ton. An exhaust fan is used, having pipes connecting with each machine by which all shavings and sawdust are collected and conveyed to the fuel room. A few feet from the South end of the building is located a dry kiln, which will hold 10,000 feet of lumber. The ends of the dry kiln can be lifted up bodily, and a track runs therefrom into the main machinery room. It is heated by the Sturtevant dry kiln apparatus. The company already have a stock of 200,000 feet of lumber on hand and are making large additions every week. W. C. Grobhiser of Sturgis is Superintendent and D. V. Farman, of Coldwater, is foreman, while L. D. Jolly will have charge of the engine room, all of whom are men of skill and experience.

Their work at present will be confined to the manufacture of folding extension and center tables under the Lee Patents, which the company control. The business starts out with a most encouraging outlook. A large number of orders are already booked, and traveling salesmen will be put on the road at an early day. This week they have sixteen regular hands on the pay roll and confidently expect to increase the number to fifty by the first of next January.

Important to seven out of every ten people.—The moment constipation begins, that moment the blood begins to be impure and poor, and the system to demand the use of Laxador.

If you want to have your baby healthy beautiful, four things are necessary: Fresh air, good food, bright sunshine and Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JUNE 26

Where does Congressman Allen stand on the silver question? Is he acting for his constituents, or obeying the dictates of Wall street?

Wall street has dominated both parties altogether too much heretofore, but the silver question has come to the front at last and it has come to stay.

If the U. S. Senate will kill the Silver and Tariff bills passed by the House the people will freely condone many of its sins of omission in the past.

Speaker Reed's tyranny met with a fitting rebuke in the struggle over referring the Senate silver bill. Honest Republicans voted with the democrats and free silver gained a victory.

The Senate has come to the scratch manfully and passed a free coinage bill. Let the House, under Speaker Reed's dictation, refuse this measure of justice to an overtaxed people, if it dare.

The House should pass the Senate silver bill without delay. Then if the President chooses to veto it, at the dictation of Wall street, let the veto come. The people are prepared to meet that issue.

The Binghamton Republican says: "We want a clean, straight republican party, if it is not larger than the democratic party of Vermont." All right, Get Congress to pass the McKinley bill and you'll have a party of just about that size.

The Republican split in the Senate which resulted in the passage of a free coinage silver bill is a political event of far reaching importance. It is the beginning of a new alignment of parties which will shift political control from Wall street to the Mississippi Valley.

The U. S. Senate has at last felt the public pulse and passed a free coinage silver bill. The whirligig of politics brings queer changes. The House, which has been supposed to represent the people, is now a mere puppet of Speaker Reed and the protection barons, while the Senate has taken up the cudgel for the peoples' rights.

What a pity it is that there are not a few more contests in the House. With twelve Democrats turned out and Republicans put in their places, Speaker Reed still found a majority against him on the silver debate, even when he counted a quorum. Some other method must be devised to increase the Republican majority.

The Union of the South and West is a natural political alliance, and the wonder is that it has been delayed so long. That union has been affected on the Silver issue by the action of the Senate on the free coinage bill, and it will extend to other issues during the next two years. The politicians may as well make a note on't.

The news comes in a way that seems reliable, that Secretary Blaine is violently opposed to the McKinley tariff. Whatever criticism one may make on Mr. Blaine, he is certainly a politician of ripe experience and keen foresight. His opinion of that bill, "that it is the most dangerous, if not the most infamous measure, ever concocted by any party," is therefore entitled to some consideration.

In his speech in the Senate upon the pending silver bill John Sherman gave utterance to an expression that will be approved by the majority of persons, irrespective of party. Said he:

I would vote for any measure that would, in my judgment, secure and maintain a bi-metalic standard—one that would not demonetize gold nor cause it to be hoarded or exported, but that would establish both gold and silver as a standard, at a fixed ratio, not only in the United States but in all the nations of the world.

"It is possible," remarks the Minneapolis Journal (Rep.), "that purely personal political reasons may work the McKinley bill, 'pure and simple,' through the Senate. If the President signs that measure, which, indeed, he is likely to do, it will require very astute political management to keep the great Republican party from a melancholy 'decline and fall off' at the Congressional elections. That McKinley bill is too hard to defend and the party doesn't want, certainly, to be forced into the field perpetually explaining and apologizing for its own acts."

CURRENT COMMENT.

THE PEOPLE WILL RESENT IT.

The reason why the leaders of the Republican party failed to indorse the Australian Ballot bill in their platform yesterday can be stated in four words: They distrust the people!—Portland Argus.

INDULGE IN SENSIBLE READING.

Mr. Clarkson complains loudly because so many Republicans are reading Democratic newspapers; this is the best claim the g. o. p. has to be called the "party of progress and intelligence."—Louisville Times.

THE SPIRIT IS NOT DEAD.

The revolution against George the Third and his ministers was a consequence of taxation without representation. If Western voters do not rebel against the Reed and McKinley caucus they have lost the spirit of '76.—Kansas City Times.

TWO ABOMINATIONS.

The McKinley bill has rendered a good service to the tariff of 1828. The latter has always been known heretofore as the "abominations tariff." It can never be so known hereafter without doing grave injustice to the McKinley measure.—Detroit Free Press.

A SIGNIFICANT VICTORY.

"Little Rhody" has proudly taken her position in the Democratic column. Rhody is not very big, but as she is covered about nine stories deep with factories, and Democracy means a lower tariff, her change of front is significant.—Houston Post.

BEGINNING OF A REVOLT.

There is not on record a party measure which has caused such an upheaval in its own camp. The revolt will go on. The tariff debate has already shown that there are some Republicans who cannot be forced into this wholesale robbery of the masses for the benefit of the classes.—Atlanta Constitution.

A GOOD BEGINNING.

The Illinois Senatorial campaign is the beginning of a great popular movement against the gerrymanders and the caucus corruption by which the Republican party holds the Senate. The time is at hand when the plutocrat who wishes to buy a senatorship will have to conduct his negotiations at the polls.—St. Louis Republic.

COSTLY LUXURIES.

Reed and McKinley are costly luxuries to their party. It cost $135,000 of fat from the tariff men to pull McKinley through in the last election. The regular price of votes to elect Reed is $5 per vote, and in some precincts $25 per vote was paid. But the contributors of boodle think it a good investment if they can only get their McKinley bill through.—Madison Democrat.

GOOD REASON FOR REJOICING.

No wonder that the Republicans are hilarious over the election of a Congressman in Oregon! That victory is the one solitary oasis in the vast desert of defeat that they have been traveling since the Harrison Administration came in. To be sure, they lost the Govornorship of Oregon and have the Legislature by a decreased majority, but no one would deny them such consolation as they may be able to derive from their solitary successful Congressman.—N. Y. Star.

THE FARMERS' REVOLT.

The Illinois farmers would reach the end they seek much quicker by supporting the people's party, as represented in Congress by the Tariff Reform Democracy, as the efforts of all opponents of the Republican party would thus be solidified, but the step they now take is an important one, and in the end must lead to the downfall of the common enemy. When the farmers of the West and Northwest refuse to be longer fooled, the downfall of the McKinley idea is assured.—Manchester Union.

WHICH SHALL BE SUPREME?

Now all clouds are scattered. The meaning of the Republican platform of 1888 has been given by authority. It has been embodied in the McKinley bill which will, at every crossroads, be compared item by item with the measure drawn by Mr. Mills and supported by the Democratic party. It is not now a question of State supremacy, or of any conflict between National and State authorities; it is a question as to whether, in the legislation of this country, the people or the plutocrats shall be supreme.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ANOTHER REPUBLICAN BLUNDER.

A Texas Democratic postmaster named Page, who recently became the father of four children at a birth, has just been deprived of his postoffice by Clarkson, who, like death in the New England primer, "cuts down all, both great and small." Texas has protested against this supposed attempt to discourage that state from hanging on to its 100 000 Democratic majority. It says, however, that Clarkson is very short-sighted, for the quadruplets are all girls, and if not thus early prejudiced against the injustice and cruelty of a Republican Administration, might grow up and marry Republicans and so help in time make Texas a Republican state.—Chicago Times.

MR. McKINLEY'S WORST.

The Philadelphia Telegram is an ardent republican paper, but one which occasionally permits its conscience to get the better of its politics. We reprint the following from its columns, on the McKinley monstrosity:

"Of all the silly things Mr. McKinley has yet done in connection with the tariff question, his report to the house in favor of the ways and means committee bill is the most grotesque. What possible sense is there in trying to fool the farmers of the United States by the statement that their industry is being prostrated on the account of the crowding of American markets with foreign agricultural products. In order to back up this utterly absurd declaration Mr. McKinley is driven to quote the importations of sugar, tea, coffee, fruits, tobacco, animals and fibers, the latter including wool, hemp jute, etc. What does the sugar industry in nine-tenths of the United States amount to? It is practically unknown in thirty-six of the forty-two states. How much tea and coffee are raised in this country? The importation of animals, as everybody knows, is chiefly confined to first-class breeding stock, brought in by fancy farmers. The carpet men have clearly shown that the class of wool most needed in this country is not and cannot be grown here profitably.

"The fact of the matter is—and no man knows the truth more clearly than Mr. McKinley himself—that when he puts our total agricultural imports at nearly $350,000,000 he is guilty of the most idiotic deception. This statement is made for the purpose of carrying with it a false impression. Until Mr. McKinley's report appeared the friends of the so-called "farmers' tariff" bill were quite content in speaking of agricultural imports coming into competition with American productions in placing the amount in the neighborhood of about $75,000,000. This, too, is an outside figure, and is at least very largely the result of trade with Canada. When the argument was quickly met and demolished Mr. McKinley and his friends shifted their ground and made a bold advance that must make them ridiculous in the sight of intelligent men everywhere. It being clearly shown that this $75,000,000, even if the farmers got the full benefit of it, would be more than swallowed up under this tariff bill in the increased cost of clothing and other necessaries of life, it became necessary to swell the figures, and, pull the wool, if possible, still further over the eyes of the doubting agriculturists. Mr. McKinley's report in this respect will prove a boomerang of the most destructive sort.

"It don't pay to indulge in this kind of deception at any time. The bill is now before the house and before the country, and it must stand or fall upon its own merits. What people want is facts. They want to know how their industries are going to be affected, for good or ill, by this proposed legislation and it is the duty of the republican leaders not to juggle with the figures, not to misrepresent the facts in any particular. Under the pressure of the party lash, and through studious misrepresentation, a bill may be passed not based upon the truth or equity, but it will be the worst political blunder of them all. There will speedily come a reckoning time, and it will be a costly period for those responsible. This determined effort to make the agricultural element of the country think that it is being specially cared for in the tariff revision at this time, as the matter stands, has the appearance of being one of the boldest and most unscrupulous political schemes ever attempted. In plain English, it rests on a mountainous fabric of lies and ignorance."

FREE TRADE IN FINE CLOTHES.

The new tariff bill, which the Republican members of the House from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and other Western States assisted in passing, permits American tourists on their return home from Europe to bring back with them $500 worth of clothing and other personal effects free of duty. If the duties on these personal effects were added, their value in this country would be increased about 70 per cent. or to $850.

Look at this. There are about 100 000 well-to-do Americans, chiefly Eastern people, who go to Europe every year to see the world and acquire the English habit of pronouncing their words. Because they are well-to-do and able to go abroad, the new tariff bill accords them the special privilege of free trade in clothing to the amount of $500—more than an average Illinois farmer's whole crop is worth. But there are some 60,000,000 other Americans too poor or busy to go abroad, who are denied this favor extended to the 100,000. If they want clothes and other personal effects they must buy them at the market price in this country, which is the foreign price and 70 per cent. added for protection to the home manufacturer, Five hundred dollars' worth of English clothing is enough to supply ten ordinary citizens a year; but if ten ordinary stay-at-home citizens purchase that amount of clothing the new tariff bill would charge them a penalty of $350—so that what costs the well-to-do tourists $500 would cost the ten stay-at-homers $850.

If each of the 100,000 well-to-do Americans who go abroad every year fits himself out with $500 worth of foreign-made clothing and other personal effects, then we have an aggregate of $50,000,000; that is, these European tourists go abroad in British steamers and come back in British steamers, and bring back fifty million dollars worth of British goods, free of duty, with them, under a Republican tariff which does not permit a stay-at-home Illinois farmer to buy a knit shirt or a saddle blanket without paying a tax of 40 per cent. on it.—St. Louis Republic.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

In view of the wide spread attention now centered in the Yellowstone National Park, the following expressions from two of the most eminent American citizens, one a scientist and the other a clergyman, are of great interest.

Prof. John Muir, California's distinguished geologist, speaking of the National resort says: "situated in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, on the broad rugged Summit of the continent, amid snow and ice, and dark shaggy forests, where the great rivers take their rise, it surpasses in wakeful, exciting interest any other region yet discovered on the face of the Globe."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, the eminent divine, says: "After all poetry has exhausted itself, and all the Morans and Bierstadts and other enchanting artists have completed their canvas, there will be other revelations to make, and other stories of its beauty and wrath, splendor and agony, to be recited. The Yellowstone Park is the geologist's paradise."

The Northern Pacific Railroad, the celebrated Dining Car Route is the only all rail line to this region. Cancer of the Lip Cured.

I suffered from Cancer on my lip that defied the skill of the best physians of the State. I had it burned out, but the operation only made it worse, causing it to spread over more surface and eat deeper in, I finally had it burned off again, and used Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) to heal it up and drive the poison out of my blood. The effect of the Specific was magical! It healed up the Cancer entirely without leaving a scar as a reminder. This was over four years ago, and since then there has been no sign of a return of the Cancer. I will cheerfully answer any enquiries in regard to my case.

A Prominent Druggist Cured.

"Eleven years ago I was suffering from an attack of White Swelling. A great many prominent physicians attended me but failed to effect a cure. I commenced using Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and after using it for a few mos. I was entirely cured, and since then have had no symptoms of its returning. I feel that the cure is entirely due to the curties propertive contained in S. S. S. I can cheerfully recommend it as a medicine to all suffering humanity

THREE SHEETS IN THE WIND AND ANOTHER DRINK CALLED FOR.

Highly Protected Manufacturers of Philadelphia Want Higher Duties—The Infant Hercules Will Drogden the Milky Way—"Balance of Trade" to Be Upset.

A correspondent of The New York Dry Goods Economist, writing from Philadelphia, gives the feeling in that city in regard to the McKinley bill. Nobody has ever accused the Pennsylvania manufacturers of too great modesty in making and enforcing their demands for higher protective duties. This correspondent says:

"While many admit that the proposed duties are excessive, nearly everybody holds that something must be done to still further protect domestic manufacturers. Nowhere in the United States can this feeling be more general. In reflecting the feeling of this city it cannot be denied that the McKinley bill is a very popular measure. In the first place this is a great Republican stronghold, and though a few Republicans would have been gratified if the measure had not been so prohibitive, speaking generally there is no doubt of its great popularity. Another reason is that manufacturing interests for some time have been very depressed, and the cause is laid at the door of foreign competition. As a remedy the manufacturing interests demand a higher tariff. Many, to be sure, favor free wool, but generally the depressed industries regard the McKinley bill as the only remedy."

All this is a curious commentary on the familiar old time Republican doctrine—now no longer heard—that a tariff is necessary for a limited time in order to get a "struggling industry," an "infant industry"—or whatever pet phrase they use—started well, and then it can go of itself.

This was the kind of protection Henry Clay advocated.

In 1840, in debate with Calhoun, Clay said: "No one, Mr. President, in the commencement of the protective policy ever supposed that it was to be perpetual. We hoped and believed that temporary protection, extended to our infant manufactures, would bring them up and enable them to withstand competition with those of Europe. If the protective policy were entirely to cease in 1842 it would have existed twenty-six years from 1816, or eighteen from 1824—quite as long as, at either of those periods, its friends supposed might be necessary."

But the Republicans have departed so widely from this doctrine of Clay that they have almost ceased to quote him as one of their saints in the household of protection.

Clay taught, too, that "in general it may be taken as a rule that the duty upon an article forms a portion of its price." In these latter days, however, false prophets have crept in, who try to beguile the feeble minded and unwary, teaching them that the foreigner pays the tax and thus leading astray many who are weak in the upper story.

Moreover, protection is to be, as these Philadelphia manufacturers seem to feel, no longer the milk to feed babes of industry, but the daily bread and meat of full grown and sinewy industries. It is no longer a thing to be "in some measure relinquished at the end of eight years and a half," as Henry Clay said in 1833; but it is to be maintained as the permanent policy of the nation, to increase the dose, even, when the infants cry for more; and "Damned be he who first cries, Hold, enough!"

This greed of the Pennsylvania manufacturers recalls a witty passage in the tariff speech of the late Sunset Cox in the house of representatives, May 17, 1888:

"It is said, sir, of the infant Hercules that when he was suckled by his mother he pulled so hard that he spilled the lacteal fluid and produced the milky way in the heavens. Hercules is Pennsylvania." [Applause and laughter.]

Philadelphia has a number of idle mills, and others threaten to shut down "unless something is done." Instead of petitioning congress for free wool, which "many, to be sure, favor," the movement is for higher duties. Like a man rollicking drunk, they must have another drink, and still another, if it lands them in the gutter.

But the prohibitory duties of the low high tariff maker will have an effect which will delight the soul of Chief Headsman Clarkson. This correspondent of The Dry Goods Economist says: "In view of the prohibitory duties which the new act will impose, one or two foreign manufacturers have visited this city and are considering the question of starting up the empty mills. If the McKinley bill becomes law there is no doubt there will be an immigration of some well known foreign manufacturers to this locality."

Now it is singular that the Protectionists, who parade themselves as the only true defenders of what they call "American interests," should take delight, like Clarkson, in the fact that European manufacturers will be driven by the McKinley bill to establish manufactories here. It is one of the pet notions of the Protectionists that protection helps us to export more than we import, and thus "money flows into the country." In this way the innocent souls fancy that "the balance of trade is kept in our favor, and we are growing rich."

But last year the "balance of trade" was in our favor to the tune of $56,725,000; and this sum, according to the protectionist theory, ought to have "flowed into the country" in money. But it did not. On the contrary, we sent out of the country in gold and silver coin and bullion the further sum of $60,403,000. This makes a total of $117,129,000 which went out of the country with absolutely nothing coming in to take its place. The explanation is that this sum—made up of money and commodities—went abroad to pay interest to foreign bondholders, owners of factories and other properties in this country, and the owners of the foreign ships for freight on our exports and imports.

The "British syndicates," which have been the bugbear of many protectionist people for the past few years, have taken away a large proportion of this money, and will take away more and more in the future.

These facts and figures are stated here in order to ask how protectionists can be pleased to learn that foreigners will open factories in Philadelphia. Do not the simple souls see that if this notion of theirs be true about "money flowing into the country" when our exports are more than our imports, that the planting of foreign industries will make the money flow out of the country faster than ever instead of the contrary result which they so much desire? The foreign owners of these industries must collect on the other side the money they have made over here, and this must go from here either in specie or in produce.

But how about "money flowing into the country" then? When the outward stream has thus been augmented by the very protectionist legislation which was to keep it flowing "in our favor," how shall the righteous souls of McKinley and his protectionist cohorts preserve their equanimity? Will it not be a state of things for them to view with alarm?

McKinley Blocks the Way.

The velvet ribbons which have come into such general use during the past few years for women's hat trimmings will be advanced in price under the McKinley bill all the way from twenty-five cents to seventy cents a yard. The latest market report from New York is that very little business is being done in this line of goods, owing to the pending tariff measure and the unwillingness of importers to accept orders, unless subject to certain advances, if the threatened tariff bill should become law. These velvet ribbons are very popular among the less wealthy class of people, and are now very scarce in the market. The people — the American people — want them; the importers stand ready to order them; but McKinley threatens with his boasted "American bill," and so nothing can be done. The "American bill" prevents the American people from getting what they want.

We get large quantities of cheap stockings from Germany. The same market report in The New York Commercial Bulletin says of the hosiery market: "This department is virtually at a standstill as a result of the threatened tariff changes and the consequent refusal of importers to do business for future delivery on a basis of present prices as insisted upon by buyers."

The people will notice here that the importer is merely an agent in ordering the goods which they themselves want—the importer can do nothing but for the wish of American consumers to get certain foreign goods—through him as their agent.

What kind of bill is that which defeats the will of these American consumers and yet calls itself an "American bill?" How can McKinley boast that it is "made for the American people and American interests?"

The women who wear these ribbons naturally want to buy them as cheaply as possible, the cheaper the better. But in answer to these women McKinley proclaims in his speech on the tariff the singular doctrine that "when merchandise is the cheapest men are the poorest," and that "we want no return to cheap times in our own country."

The country will have to settle the matter with McKinley. There must be a counting of noses—on the one side those who believe with him in keeping prices up by means of tariffs; on the other, those who believe that the people of these United States have a natural right to the pursuit of happiness in buying their goods as cheaply as they can get them.

Jackdaws Stealing the Canary's Feathers.

Maj. McKinley claims that it is a custom in some foreign countries to adopt American brands for goods shipped to this country. He says: "Well known articles of American production with high reputation have been copied by the foreigner, and then by the addition of the American brand or American marks have fraudulently displaced American manufacture, not in fair competition, but under false pretenses. The counterfeit has taken the place of the genuine article, and this we propose to stop."

Now this is a most singular state of things. Some of our manufacturers make such excellent articles that the wicked foreigner steals our brands to make their inferior wares sell here "under false pretenses."

There is an old saying that "imitation is the sincerest flattery." Now if any of our manufacturers have reached such a degree of excellence that the wicked foreigner steals their brands, what need have such manufacturers for "protection" against that foreigner? When an article is so excellent that men try to imitate it, how does it happen that the maker needs protection from the mere imitator further than to forbid the fraudulent use of his brand? Is it not as if the canary should ask "protection" from the jackdaw's feathers?

It is one of the marvelous freaks of the protectionist mind that it can still persist, even under these circumstances, in its belief in the weakness and incompetence of the American manufacturer. When the foreign manufacturer goes to putting our brands upon his goods he confesses that we have conquered—and yet it is the conqueror who cries for help!

Is not the whole thing so unmanly and so unreal, so transparently a mere pretense, adopted in order to wring exorbitant profits out of the dearly beloved home market, as to bring discredit on the whole army of protected interests? Especially so when it is remembered that many of these same manufacturers make enormous reductions from their American prices in order to sell to foreigners.

Maj. McKinley does well in shielding our manufacturers from fraudulent imitations of their brands. But in doing that he performs the excellent additional service of proving the shallowness of the pretense that such manufacturers need his sort of "protection."

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

Delivered at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday Evening Before the High School Graduating Class by Rev. Frank Adkins.

MANLINESS.

Quit you like men, be strong.—1 Cor., 16:13.
Gird up the loins of your mind.—1 Peter, 1:13.

It is a proud and beautiful scene which we contemplate to-night. A class of young men and women, having reached the bloom and glow and strength of youth, and having completed a course of mental training preparatory to life or further study—this, to one with any just appreciation of the endowments of mind, is a sight to awaken emotions of highest interest. Having successfully passed the tests required, your day of graduation, my young friends, is now near at hand; and you are ready then to claim the testimonials due to your fidelity and success, with all the honors accruing. And pursuant to a prevailing custom, and to your invitation, I am here to speak some simple words that may perchance befit this happy consummation. I am to speak these words as a Christian minister; am to speak them in the house of God and in the name of Christ, whose religion inspires and consecrates all true education.

I congratulate the School Board, as trusted representatives and servants of the people, and the teachers of the School, and the citizens themselves of our fair village, upon this large and interesting class of graduates—the largest class, I am told, ever sent forth from this High School. Comparisons with other classes as to quality would be invidious. But it may be said with propriety, and with just pride, that these 26 young people have accomplished their course with credit to themselves and their teachers. I congratulate you, my young friends, upon the success with which you have achieved this stage of your educational advancement. I say "this stage," for other stages are yet before you. We hear sometimes of people whose education is finished. They are generally people whose true education has not begun. You will not be so foolish as to conceive that an education is or can be finished in the few years of school life. You will soon separate from these associations which you have together found so delightful—your paths hence to diverge—some to pursue further courses of study in institutions of higher learning, or of technical instruction; some to enter at once into positions of business or teaching; some perhaps to enter walks more homely, though no less honorable. But in all cases, if you rightly view and use the discipline you have acquired, the future years will be years of further culture. Life is the school of education and the process is continuous.

"Forget the steps already tred
And onward urge thy way."

It is fitting, then, that my words to-night should have some helpful bearing upon your work in that broader school, entering into which you are now prepared to pursue your educational progress.

And what more fitting than these words of Paul and of Peter, which I read for my twofold text?—words of Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, and of Peter, the apostle of the Circumcision, and therefore together words of world-wide import and application.

"Quit you like men, be strong," says Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles—Paul, the herald of that Evangel whose mission is to follow the course of empire westward to its utmost limit, and attend its returning currents to the Orient, until the globe is encircled with the light of a Christian civilization. Fitting words to come from such a pen. Paul wrote them to the Corinthian Christians. Recall the difficult and perilous position in which these Christians were placed. On the narrow isthmus joining the two parts of Greece, seated on her rocky and impregnable citadel, by her two ports, one on either sea, commanding the commerce of the Mediterranean, the emporium of the trade of the ancient world, Corinth rose, a populous city of great magnificence. Its wealth, its luxury and its profligacy were proverbial in ancient days. Paul visited it in the days of its queenly splendor, and seizing this strategic point founded there a Christian church. The converts gathered into it, passed their lives amidst the vices and corruption of a splendid heathenism. Surrounded by a whirlpool of luxury and effeminacy, they were to display the manly virtues of the Christian character. Christian teachers of distinguished gifts had been and were to be sent to them to teach the Gospel and train them in every grace. But they are admonished that the success of their teachers would depend upon the spirit of their own efforts. And the Apostle urges them to personal watchfulness and steadfastness. In the midst of a luxurious and effeminate heathenism he says: Stand ye forth with firmness in the strength and nobility of your Christian manhood. "Quit you like men!"

Turn now to the words of Peter, of oriental mission and ministry: "Gird up the loins of your mind." I need scarcely stop to explain the allusion of the metaphor. The long and loose folds of the flowing robes of oriental costume needed to be gathered in a girdle about the loins, to be ready and unimpeded for the race, for travel, for toil, or for war. So the mind that rules the man needs to gather up and wield its faculties, wresting them from all distractions and listlessness and morbid excitements and gain a girding of mental strength. Peter wrote this to Jewish Christians, scattered throughout the ancient Peninsula of Asia Minor, living amidst heathen immorality, but reared as Jews under ancestral formalities; familiar with ceremonials from which all life had become extinct; trained under teachers "whose life," as Robertson says, "was droned away in litanies, and frittered into genuflexions." Judaism was as effete and lifeless as heathenism. In its blind reverence for austere forms it had in its dead ripeness bred laxity of morals and languor of life. The loose, trailing robes of Jewish formalism were unfit for earnest, manly work and spiritual power. The ruling element in man is mind—intelligence—and it needs a girding for work such as befits manhood's powers and such as divine grace supplies. Be alert and alive, then, is Peter's charge to these Jewish Christians, "Gird up the loins of your mind."

These exhortations of Paul and Peter are timely for the educational conditions of our day. Ours is an age of superior wisdom, of marvelous energy and strength. Yet in the tendencies of the times there is much of effeminacy and childishness; much of morbid sentimentalism—much that is superficial and puerile. Ours is a boasted age of advanced thought, of surpassing virtue. But there is much of laxity, both of thinking and of morals; much of unbridled license and of lawlessness. These tendencies—confusion of thought and looseness of morals—are unfriendly to mental strength. That you may not fall into these drifts heed the counsel of these apostles: "Gird up the loins of your mind," and in readiness to toil or to suffer, to fight or to endure; "Quit yourselves like men;" act like men. And remembering that the majority of you are young ladies, I ought perhaps to say that Paul means this as much for women as for men. Certainly there were women in that church of Corinth to whom he sent this message, who had as much to do in that corrupt Corinthian society to exalt the Christian virtues as had the men. But when Paul says to you, young women, "act like men," think not he means you to covet and cultivate those qualities distinctly masculine which belong to your brothers, nor to entertain such a view of woman's mission as to forget your sex. In the Christian ideal, woman is the equal and companion of man. The two spheres, equal, not identical, however interlaced, are counterpart. Both are to illustrate and adorn those princely human virtues which in the two may not essentially differ, though in one they may be manly, in the other, womanly. What Paul interdicts is effeminacy and weakness, whether in man or woman. Womanishness is as essentially unwomanly as it is unmanly; while manliness, rightly conceived as a basal trait of character, is no less becoming in woman than in man. What Paul enjoins is that manly vigor and grace of soul which is the truest adornment of a human character. "Quit you like men;" that is conform to the highest ideal of your nature as made in the image of God. This is the lofty ideal to be realized alike in a true manhood and a true womanhood.

To develop this root idea and principle of manliness is the true aim of education. Recur to the familiar derivation of the word educate. It comes from the Latin educo, to draw out. Says Fleming's Vocabulary: "The business of education is to educe or bring out that which is within, not merely or mainly to instruct or impose a form from without." It is true, since growth is always nourished from without, "instruction must ever be a chief element of education." But its processes must chiefly consist in that "which tends to bring out, to nourish and cultivate the faculties of the mind; not that which merely piles a mass of information upon them." Do not suppose that education consists in a knowledge of books or facts; that because a man has read many books, and knows something of Latin or Greek or German or science, he is on that account, and to that extent educated. Another may not know half so much and be better educated. Learning and education are not identical; nor does one necessarily involve the other. It is the power to command and use what he has learned that makes the educated man.

Nor does education consist merely in technical and professional training or skill. Is education to be measured by the money it can earn, the bread it can buy, the mercantile value it can produce? Nay, it is broader than any trade or avocation. It covers the breadth and altitude of manhood. It gives a man that mastery of himself, and that command of the resources of the world which lays broad foundations for usefulness in any chosen calling. "To educate, then, is to bring to the highest possible perfection" all the faculties of the man. An eccentric speaker lately said, "a man is the biggest thing in this world" (and we may add, a woman is just as big—being his equal); and the great business of education is to produce men and women—to mould manhood. * * * *

It lays hold first of the intellectual powers and subjects them to wholesome discipline, cultivates the reason, the judgment, the memory, the imagination; gives power of discrimination, of concentration, of just inference; trains a man to think, to think soundly, accurately, independently; to hold his mind with concentrated attention to any point required, until he has mastered the subject. Dr. Emmons, so says Dr. Mark Hopkins "wanted a student who could look fifteen minutes at the point of a cambric needle without winking." This is the power of rational self-mastery. This power education imparts to the mind.

And it lays hold not only of the mental, but also of the moral faculties—brings these under solemn tuition. It draws out and cultivates the conscience, teaching it to respond to the attraction and authority of the moral law as the planets respond to the immutable force of gravitation, as sensitive as the photographer's plate to the sunlight of eternal righteousness. Man is a moral and religious, no less than a rational being. And it is irrational—it is unmanly to cultivate the intellect and neglect the moral and spiritual nature. He who does this is not, and cannot be educated.

A true education takes account also of the sensibilities. There are feelings of the heart in man, as well as powers of thought, and these are equally susceptible to cultivation and training. The emotions may be brought under control and guidance and the heart schooled to keen and generous appreciation of all that is good and pure, and to those lofty sentiments of sympathy and love which refine and enrich the soul. A man with no gentle heart, or generous sympathies, no keen refinement of feeling, is so far uneducated, no matter what his mental capacity or acquisitions may be.

Then again, man is endowed with that most mysterious power, the will. It has been called "chief executive in the republic of faculties." There is no more important nor more perilous part of education than the discipline and right direction of the will. Tho' accomplished in all the arts and sciences the young man, if irresolute and fickle and infirm of purpose, is but half educated. The will, rightly disciplined in righteous choices, acquires that energy and firmness which fits it to rule, and that self-surrender which brings the whole nature under subjection to God. "Our wills are ours to make them thine," says Tennyson, and in this surrender of the will by which it is taught to move and rule in free accord with right, is the true strength of manliness. * * *

And now, in the light of this discussion, it is easy to name some of the leading characteristics of manliness. According to Thomas Hughes, author of "Tom Brown's School Days," manliness "is the perfection of human character," and courage is its foundation principle. He explains that he does not mean that low, rude form of mere animal courage which consists in tenacity of will, coupled with scorn of danger and death, which in its best form is only a heroic self-assertion. But he means that courage, of manly quality, which is tempered by the surrender of will, by the spirit of obedience and by calm self-control, and rises to the sublimity of self-sacrifice. He means that kind of courage which summons us to "take our stand in the eternal battle" against falsehood and wrong and wretchedness and suffers us not, for the price of all the world's treasures, to lower the standard of this knightly devotion to right. It is a false courage—indeed it is cowardice—which dares to transcend the sphere of virtue. Said Macbeth, before he reached the cowardly decision to murder poor Duncan, and while his better nature was still struggling for mastery,—

"I dare do all that becomes a man;
Who dares do more, is none."

(1) Manliness, then, first, will dare to work. It will place on honest toil the crown of honor. In any calling energy and patient industry becomes the true man. A young man without property or station, but of high and earnest spirit, became suitor for the hand of a fair and accomplished young lady. When her father asked what means he had to afford her a worthy support he replied, with a flush of conscious manhood: "Sir, I have no fortune, but I am chuckfull of days' works."

Do not spend your energies nor exercise your wits too much in devising short cuts to success. There are, indeed, some geniuses who spring at once into place and power and achieve brilliant exploits. These are not likely to be undervalued. But the most are not such. Usually it is hard work that wins. The best results of life, after all, are the fruits of honest, patient toil. And oftentimes even those who are accounted geniuses, if you knew their history, have risen to the zenith of their power only after a slow and patient ascent from the horizon. The American aloe in a few days throws up its tall stem and bursts into gorgeous bloom; but it has been gathering and preparing its forces through the slow growth of almost a century. The race-horse may excel in fleetness, but the tough, hardy roadster will bring in a load brimming with richer treasure. It often requires a manly courage to undergo the toil and the plodding that conditions real success.

(2) Again, manliness will dare to be loyal to truth. And this is by no means a common or easy thing. Not seldom does it incur fiery trials which put to a searching test the mettle of our manhood. This sterling quality was richly exemplified in the character and life of our Lord: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." To bear this witness is the high mission and purpose of every true life. The true man will have courage to maintain what his conscience approves at any cost; to stand alone and suffer personal loss in its defense. He will have courage to stand by what he believes to be true and right in face of the opposition of the world; and he will have that rarer grace to do this, though it causes grief to his dearest friends and costs the alienation, or even the enmity, of those whose sympathy and support he holds most dear. It is easy to see how priceless is this lofty human virtue; how much the world needs men of sterling integrity and inflexible courage, who will hear and obey the voice of duty above the din and smoke of the world's battles; who in church and state, in business and society, in the political arena, in courts of justice, in legislative halls, in executive chairs, will prize truth above party or place, whom no bribe can corrupt; who will "buy the truth and sell it not."

(3) Again, manliness will dare to be gentle and kindly. That severe and inflexible temper of soul required for the vigorous enforcement of right is by no means inconsistent with tenderness. No one ever denounced the wrong with more unsparing severity than Jesus of Nazareth. And, no heart ever overflowed with more tender feelings than his. The "Lion of the tribe of Judah," was also the meek, gentle Lamb of sacrifice. Inflexible loyalty to truth need not make us bigoted nor ungenerous. We may still be courteous and conciliating. In the soldierly champion of right the lion-like and the lamb-like traits of character will blend in full accord. He will look with indignation upon falsehood and wrong, but he will look through streaming eyes; and rightous reproof will be suffused with tears of tenderness and sympathy. Jesus was a man of most refined and delicate feelings and intercourse with him had a refining influence on his followers. "Friendship with Jesus, breeds the gentle heart," And in all the intercourse of life the manly man will not think it beneath the proper dignity of his manhood to cultivate the finer feelings of the soul, the sweeter graces of the spirit, the heart which is the home of every pure and generous emotion. He has a distorted manhood who cultivates the severe and neglects the graceful virtues; who omits those kindly courtesies which sweeten home, smooth the rough edge of toil and enrich life. "Thy gentleness hath made me great," says the Psalmist. Gentleness gives luster to all true greatness; gentleness itself is greatness.

"The bravest are the tenderest,
The loving are the daring."

(4) Once more, manliness will dare to serve. Its very glory is reached by service, its kingly power consists in service. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." This great lesson He taught the world, the duty and the nobility of a helpful ministry. But the world has been slow to learn the lesson. Even the Nineteenth century has something yet to learn in that school. We have overthrown kingly crowns and have exalted the liberty and sovereignty of the people. We have insisted that all men shall rule and this is right. But those only are fit to rule who have learned to serve. And if all men should rule then all men must serve. Amidst the warring of classes and the jarring of factions and the clamors of selfishness and greed, let this voice be heard: Whosoever of you will be the chiefest shall be servant of all." When this Republic of royalty shall rest on a Republic of service, when all classes and all men shall "in love serve one another," when selfishness shall surrender to brotherhood, we shall have a free and stable government and a brave, happy and prosperous people. A thoughtful regard for the interests and rights of others, a spirit of helpfulness is an essential trait of a manly character.

I have thus tried to point out some of the chief characteristics of manliness. And I have said that to develop this was the highest aim of education. It remains to be said that an education adequate to this aim must be essentially Christian—must be informed and swayed by Christian faith and grace.

Peter, in connection with those stirring words of his in my text, makes the caliber of the girded mind to consist of sobriety, hope and obedience. These are Christian qualities and the grace that produces them is the true girding of the mind. Jesus, in his earthly life, is the noblest illustration, the highest model of manliness furnished by our race. The profound study of that matchless life will awaken a lively sense of its surpassing loveliness. A personal union of soul with the living Christ will evermore be the pure fountain of all holy endeavor.

Propose to yourselves, then, my friends, this exalted aim, whether it be in pursuing further study or in the school of life. Pursue your studies, not merely with a narrow, mercenary view to their naked market value, but to develop and broaden that which is manliest in you, and in practical life seek to bring to bear these lofty principles of manhood. We shall always take a lively interest in your success in life. But we would remind you that success is not the highest aim, but character. Or, rather, we would say true success is not what some people think it is. What passes for success is oftentimes really the worst kind of failure. Too often its ideal is that false one expressed in the famous line of Horace, which Pope thus translates:

"Get place and wealth, if possible with grace;
If not, by any means get wealth and place."

But observe to "get there," as they say, is not always the most important thing. It is quite as important to ask, "Get where? and how? and what are you, after you "get there?" To bring things to pass is not an infallible criterion of the successful man.

Complaint has been made to the officers, by old Mrs. Woodard, now 94 years of age, that the boys collect on the corner of Union and Logan streets and make evenings hideous with their boisterous clamorings and firing of large and small fire-crackers. Another manufacturing enterprise will soon be started in Tecumseh, which bids fair to develop into a fine industry. Heesen Bros. & Co., have begun the erection of two large additions to their hog ringer shop, and the extra room will be utilized for the manufacture of gray iron castings. There is a large demand for that kind of work, and this firm is just the one to build up a good trade.

We have another brand new grocery store in town. Ed. Williamson has enlarged the room in the north end of his store and put in a full stock of groceries and canned fruits. The new firm will be Williamson and Babcock. Mr. Babcock has had ten years' experience in that line of trade and Ed is a hustler in whatever he undertakes. The firm is a strong one and we predict for them a good trade from the start.

The Masonic Decoration at Clinton last Sunday drew out a large gathering. The Tecumseh and Manchester lodges sent large delegations and about 140 brethren were in line on the march from the hall to the cemetery. At the close of the exercises the members returned to the hall and partook of a banquet provided by the Clinton Lodge. The entire exercises moved off very pleasantly and the visitors are profuse in their praises of the Clinton bretheren.

Thos. R. Kyle has received the Agency for this vicinity of the Buckeye Harvesting Machinery. The Buckeye light mower has been a standard article of farm machinery for over a third of a century. It is the most perfect mower ever sold in this country. It has remained unchanged in its mechanism for thirty-three years, and no mower of late years has ever surpassed it. The Buckeye Binder is the lightest, strongest and most durable. Dynamometer tests always prove it to be the lighest draft binder ever made. A HOT WEEK.

THE CONGRESSIONAL FORECAST GETS INTERESTING.

The House to Dissect and Pass the Federal Election Law—A Lively Time Expected in Its Discussion—The Silver Question Still in Doubt.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The House will dissect and probably pass the new election bill during the week. The discussion will begin on Tuesday immediately after the reading of the journal, and will continue until Saturday at 3 o'clock when a vote will be taken. There is every reason to believe that the bill will be passed. There is a chance that the silver bill will be brought into the House today by the coinage committee and its immediate discussion demanded.

The Senate will devote some time next week to the consideration of appropriation bills, as it is the desire of both House and Senate to get these bills to the president before the close of the fiscal year, June 30, if possible. The consular and diplomatic appropriation bill is now on the calendar, and when it is called up for consideration, the old and much debated question of the relative rank of the representatives of the United States, and the representatives of other countries at foreign courts, are likely to be revived and consume some of the time of the Senate. The post office appropriation bill also is on the calendar and the Indian bill and the sundry civil bill are likely to be reported during the week. In spite of the intention to get rid of these bills it is altogether likely that before the end of the week a resolution will be offered and agreed to in both houses extending the appropriations for the current fiscal year to cover the month following so as to avoid as far as possible any deficit in current and necessary appropriations. The bill for the admission of Wyoming to the Union is the unfinished business in the Senate and except for the intervention of appropriation bills, it will be the business discussed until it is disposed of. Following it, the bill for the admission of Idaho will be called up. It was the expectation of the friends of the friends of the river and harbor bill that that measure would be called up during the coming week, but Senator Fry, who is in charge of it, says that if he can get the floor for business of the committee on commerce, he will call up the shipping bill.

Thursday afternoon has been set aside by the Senate for eulogies on the late Representative Cox, of New York.

Senato Morrill's agriculture bill, may be taken up during the morning hour some day and disposed of.

FACTS FOR THE FARMERS.

The Weather Crop Bulletin—Harvesting Wheat in Kansas—Condition of Corn in Good Shape.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The weather crop bulletin for the week says: "The crop conditions generally throughout the northwest, south-west and the Ohio valley were improved by the favorable weather of the past week, except in some localities in the Upper Mississippi and Central Ohio valleys, where heavy rains caused temporary damage. The harvest of wheat is in progress in Kansas, Southern Illinois and Southern Indiana. In the former state the crop is reported as fair and of good quality The condition of the corn crop is much improved throughout the principal corn states. Reports from Kentucky and Tennessee state that crops were somewhat injured by rain, but that the outlook is favorable; tobacco and cotton is in fine condition. Wheat harvest in progress with prospect of a half crop, having progressing, good yield, work well advanced. The weather of the past week has been especially favorable for the cotton crop, which has improved in all sections, except in limited localities in the South Atlantic states where local rains caused some damage. The high temperature, and slight rain fall generally throughout the Gulf states has caused rapid growth, and the general outlook here is more favorable for this crop than at any previous report.

Alabama reports the wheat crop a failure, oats light and clover good. Tobacco was improved in Virginia, and some replanting is in progress.

A good growing week is reported in the New England and Middle Atlantic states, haying is in progress with prospect of a large yield; wheat prospects continue good in Pennsylvania, where oats are badly damaged by rust and insects; in this state a large acreage of tobacco has been planted which is in good condition. Along the Pacific coast the weather for the week was especially favorable, much needed rains occurring in Oregon, which proved of great benefit. Haying has been completed in California, with large yield. The grain acreage is below the average, and the crop is about ready for harvesting, with prospects of a light yield, but of good quality; the prospects are excellent for a good yield of fruit."

Every Two and a Half Minutes

The blood makes a circuit of the body every 2½ minutes, delivering nutriment and taking back waste matter to be filtered out by the liver and kidneys and removed from the body through the bowels and the urinary secretion. Any stoppage or obstruction of this process may produce various forms of disease, such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Headache, Debility and bad blood with its multiplied evils (boils, blotches pimples, sores, eruptions, abcesses and the like). When such obstructions exist as evidenced by the presence of complaints similar to those just mentioned, the best medicine to use is Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks the secretions; removing all impure and effete matter through the proper channels. By restoring healthy action of the stomach, liver and kidneys and bowels, B. B. B. removes all impurities of the blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

19 YEARS OF PAIN

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

St. Jacobs Oil

THE CASE.

Milroy, Mifflin County, Pa.

Editor of The World, New York, N. Y.—Dear Sir: The case of Mrs. Gemmill presents a striking example of suffering and marvelous cure. She has lived in and near Milroy for 80 years, and is 69. In 1864 she was thrown from a wagon, sustaining serious injury to her spine. From that time till 1882 she was a helpless cripple, unable to walk.

THE CURE.

During these long 19 years of suffering, she found no relief from the numerous remedies she had tried. In 1883 her daughter read the advertisement of St. Jacobs Oil, and she bought two bottles. The oil was applied, and before the second bottle was exhausted by Mrs. Gemmill she was able to walk about, and has been completely cured.

THE VILLAGE SCHOOL-BOYS.

Every morning at half-past eight
There passes by my garden gate
A merry crowd—
With laughter loud.
Little school-boys, happy are ye—
Ah! would that you could ever be
From care so free.

Indeed I have learned to love the noise
Of these hearty, happy little boys,
With faces bright,
Hearts so light,
And I can almost see them grow
As in the morning to school they go,
Through rain or snow.

Here comes Tom Brown, the blacksmith's son,
A sturdy fellow full of fun,
With Arthur Roy,
The doctor's boy;
The lawyer's son with ragged Phil,
The parson's John with fighting Bill
Runs up the hill.

No social monarch here holds sway,
True Democrats alike are they:
The high and low,
Together go.
Their happy lives have just begun,
And here the poor and rich man's son
Both feel as one.

And when their faces bright I see,
Often I wonder where they'll be
When years have flown,
And they are grown.
Perhaps the humblest in this band
Among the greatest in the land,
Some day, may stand.

We can not tell as on they glide,
Borne by life's swift uncertain tide
Where time will place
Each happy face.
All with the Father's love are blest,
In His wise hands we leave the rest.
He knoweth best.

A SKETCH FROM LIFE.

Silas Peters and His Wife Institute a Loving Reform.

"I guess I won't go to church this morning, Silas," said Mrs. Peters, while sitting at the breakfast-table one lovely Sabbath in June.

"Why, Mandy! I thought you wanted to hear the sermon. You know Elder Bishop is going to preach to-day."

"I know all about that," replied Mrs. Peters, with a sigh; "but it's nine o'clock now, and with all I have to do I can't possibly get ready to start by half-past ten."

"Let me help you, Mandy. I can wash dishes; yes, and sweep too," he added triumphantly.

"Yes, and probably you can make all the beds, and get the children ready for Sunday school, and clean off the stove, and skim the milk, and wash the pans, and peel the potatoes for dinner, and get the meat cut and in the spider, and lay the fire ready to light when we get home," replied Mrs. Peters, scornfully.

"Now Mandy," said the by this time crest-fallen Mr. Peters, "I meant all right. Can't you let the sweeping and cleaning the stove go for this time? and we can do without potatoes for once. It will make a change," he added dryly.

"Change! Yes, I guess so. If you want a change so bad, you had better go and board with Mrs. Russell. You'll get change there, I reckon," and she smiled grimly. "Why, when I went over there the other morning to borrow a little flour, they had just finished breakfast; and such a breakfast!"

"Why, what was it, Mandy?" asked Silas, with his curiosity aroused.

"What was it? You had better say what wasn't it. That was just exactly it! There wasn't a single bit of pie on that table, nor pickles, nor cheese, nor jelly, nor anything—much."

"Well, they had something to eat, didn't they?" queried Mr. Peters.

"Yes, they had bread and butter, and mashed potatoes and steak, oatmeal and cream, and coffee and cookies," with a sniff of scorn; "but not even one smitch of pie."

"Well, she's a good cook, anyway, for I've eat there," said Silas, decidedly. "And I don't see but what they had as good a meal as we've got, Mandy."

"Humph! Guess you better board there a while, Silas Peters," and Mrs. Peters rose from the breakfast-table.

"Any way," said Silas to himself, as he was harnessing his horse for church, "I'd rather just eat bread and milk for dinner if Mandy would only go with me once in a while. Yes, and for breakfast and supper too," he added, heroically. "There goes Tom Russell now, with his wife and baby. How happy he looks! and well he may, for he's got his wife. She goes 'most everywhere with him. I do wish Mandy would go with me. It seems kinder lonesome;" he mused, getting into the buggy with his two furbelowed children, and chirping to the old horse.

The women of the little hamlet of Ashville had followed strictly in their forefathers' (or rather foremothers') footsteps—tables crowded with every thing set on promiscuously—pickles, cheese and pie for breakfast, pie, cheese and pickles for dinner, and cheese, pickles and pie for supper. And at each "society" or tea party that was held, each lady tried to outdo the one before her. If Mrs. A. had three kinds of cake and two of pie, Mrs. B. would have four or five kinds of cake and three of pie, with perhaps tarts as an addition; while Mrs. C. would by no means diminish the quantity of pie and cake, but would also add dried beef, jelly, cheese, etc.

Elder Bishop's sermon that morning was excellent; so thought every one, with perhaps the exception of Silas Peters. He sat in his pew with his two children, but his eyes kept wandering to the Russell's pew.

"She's 'most as old as Mandy," mused he. "Mandy's a little past thirty, and Mrs. Russell, so Jim Snyder's wife said, is twenty-eight. She doesn't look worried; no wrinkles or lines. Poor Mandy! May be I haven't helped her as much as I might. Mrs. Russell looks so happy and contented. Wonder if she had as much to do as Mandy this morning?" as a sudden thought struck him.

After service, he returned home to find a clean house, beautifully shining stove and a delicious dinner; but a worried and irritable wife.

"It's been so warm," she said: "it tired me all out cleaning up. I haven't sat down a minute since you've been gone;" with the air of a martyr who faces duty at whatever cost.

"Mandy, why don't you let something go once in awhile and rest a little? This dirt fight will wear you out."

"Rest! Me! With all this work? Leave some? Cleanliness is next to godliness, Silas Peters."

"Yes, Mandy, next to godliness. The godliness cames first, dear," hesitatingly.

Mandy looked quickly up, a pink flush on her face. When had he called her dear before? Not since their old sweet courting days. It touched a tender spot in her heart; and after the dinner work was done up, as Silas sat thoughtfully on the porch in the shade, she said, softly:

"Silas, wouldn't you like to take me to church to-night as you used to?"

He looked up quickly.

"Like to? Why, Mandy, you know I've wanted to for ever so long, but you are always so busy or tired. Will you go, Mandy?" with an eager light in his eyes.

"If you will take me," she said, half smiling.

He looked at her a moment, and then said, abruptly:

"How pretty you look, Mandy! Why, what makes your cheeks so pink? You look almost as you used to eight years ago." Then, with a sudden daring look in his eyes: "Have you heard how Tom Russell uses his wife?"

"Why, no, Silas Peters; he's kind to her, I know he is. You needn't tell me any bad stories about Tom Russell. I know better. But what did you hear? How does he use her?"

"This way," answered Silas, and suddenly rising and going to where his wife was leaning against the lattice work, he slipped his arm around her slender waist, while his other hand he tipped her face up to his and softly kissed her lips.

"Why, Silas!" and she burst into a passion of tears upon his shoulder.

"Mandy, I know I haven't been very kind to you of late years. I've been thinking all the time of getting my work done, and making money, and I guess, Mandy, may be it's a good deal my fault that you don't go more, and are getting so worn and tired; but, please God, dear, I will try to do better," holding her close to him.

"Silas, forgive me!"

"For what, dear?"

"Being so cross to you."

"It's all right, dear. I don't blame you; being so tired and worried, it was natural. But we will try to do better, won't we, little woman?"

And standing there that lovely afternoon, her head on his breast and his arms around her, they seemed nearer and dearer to each other than they had in many long years.

Mandy is not the only woman who carries this dirt-fight to an extreme. But, as dear Samantha Allen says: "Do be mejum." If it cannot be both—and with many, especially those with children to care for, it can not be—which shall it be? The "mejum" course making the home a true home, the best and dearest place on earth to husband and children; a home which will always be remembered in connection with mother, love and sympathy; the dear home refuge fron the outside world—or a home remembered in connection with spotless floors, shining stoves, duster, mop and scrubbing-brush?—Marion W. O. Brown, in Northern Christian Advocate.

THE BUSINESS PROMOTER.

A Man Who Spends Three Thousand Dollars a Week in Postage.

"What do you think of a man's spending $3,000 a week in postage?" said a clerk in the stamp department of the post-office to a New York World reporter. "I know an advertiser now in this city whose stamp bill is often that much. He pays $20,000 office rent for the quarters in which he carries on his various businesses, too. As soon as he gets a company on its feet he sells it out, invents or thinks up a new specialty, or what purports to be one, rigs up a high-sounding name for it and for the concern which it is supposed to manufacture and sell, gets a new office and sends out quite a batch of circulars and advertising books and pamphlets. Of some of his pamphlets he orders 10,000,000 copies. Where does he get a list of names long enough and reliable enough to justify such an expenditure for printing and postage? Well, he owns every city directory and every blue-book, red-book and elite book published in North America. He also owns hundreds of dozens of old letters, which he makes a business of buying up all over the country, wherever he can get hold of them, just for the sake of the names and addresses they contain and suggest. Does he make money? You may infer an answer from the fact that he paid $390,000 for a country home at Islip, L. I."

Sounds Made by Light.

A wonderful discovery has been attracting the attention of scientists. A beam of sunlight is made to pass through a prism so as to produce the solar spectrum or rainbow. A disk, having slits or openings cut in it, is made to revolve, and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it and fall on silk, wool or other material contained in a glass vessel. As the colored lights fall upon it sounds will be given by the different parts of the spectrum and there will be silence in other parts. If the vessel contains green worsted and the green light flashes upon it loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds will be heard when the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel, and other colors make no sound at all.

A Colorado Ice Mine.

There is a mine just above Howardsville, Col., that is a curiosity to tenderfeet and a source of profit to the saloon man who lives near by. It is an ice mine, and the ice is as clear and pure as that to be obtained from the purest lake. The claim is owned by the Neigolds, who in the early days ran a tunnel through the frozen ground and struck a spring beyond. As the water flows out of the tunnel it freezes, and the tunnel is now filled nearly to the roof with the ice. It has long supplied all the saloons of Howardsville with ice, and as it never thaws, winter or summer, the place is an objective point for curiosity seekers.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

LESSON XIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 29.

The Quarter Opens with a Great "Stumbling Block"—Christ's "Law of Love" and the Mosaic Law—Human Nature Could Not Conceive of Such a Law.

The quarter now closing opens with the first clear announcement of the essential principle of Christ's gospel and continues with alternate miracle and teaching to the closing lesson on the fatherhood of God. The pupil who would be rooted and grounded in the Christian faith should at the very start face the fact that the sermon on the mount is utterly at war with what we call human nature—that it is, in every sense of the word, truly a stumbling block. It is idle to discuss whether human nature, so called, is really worthy of the name, or whether it is simply a fallen and debased nature. The fact every student of our holy faith must face at the start, and the point he must be prepared to defend, is that the natural man is there flatly forbidden to follow the dictates of his nature.

"Love your enemies. Pray for them which despitefully use you. Give to every man that asketh of thee. Judge not and ye shall not be judged. Be ye merciful, as your Father also is merciful." Human nature never prompted these sentiments, and human wisdom never uttered them. The unquestioned fact that millions of human beings have in a poor, feeble way even approximated towards an obedience to them, is in itself a proof of their divinity which no argument can overthrow. That unnumbered Christians persecuted to the death have spent their last breath in prayers for their persecutors; that men and women of whom the world was not worthy have suffered every indignity which human malice could invent, and yet "reviled not again"—this is the unanswerable and truly sublime proof of Christ's divinity. And this proof, be it noted, cannot be cited for any other faith, and is not denied by the most skeptical historian.

The stumbling block is seen when one inquires how far the maxims should be carried in every day life, and the devout student should not seek to evade or deny it. It is admittedly among the most difficult portions of Scripture. Moses announced the law according to righteousness; Christ announced it according to love; the message of Christ was the perfect flower on that of which the law of Moses was but the stem. In Moses it was a law "to be lived up to;" in Christ it was an indwelling spirit "to be worked out." The law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. With this as the basis principle the student may readily comprehend the following exegesis by Rev. George F. Pentecost:

"If we accept the precepts as binding statutes, it must be seen that in a literal sense they are impracticable; if we say they are not to be carried out literally, then we are in danger of making void the commandments of Christ. It seems to me that we must not so much regard them as statutes, but as containing the fundamental principles of the law of love, to be held in mind and heart in all our dealings with men and to be applied in every case to the last extent of possibility. Put the Christ spirit into all you do, and show in all your intercourse with men that you are not acting from personal and selfish motives, but as the children of your heavenly Father."

In the second lesson we study the affecting narrative of the widow of Nain and the raising of her son from the dead. We are told that the effect on the bystanders was great and especially that they remembered the Scriptures—that is, they recognized the fulfillment of prophecy concerning the Messiah. The lesson on Christ's power to forgive sins therefore follows most appropriately; and the lesson is emphasized by the character of the woman whose sins were forgiven. The modern "paragrapher" or satirist might find material for humor in the quiet but most effective way in which Simon, the host, is contrasted with the repentant woman. There is a miracle involved in the quick recognition of what was passing in the mind of Simon.

The parable of the sower follows—a practical exposition of the effect of preaching and the operations of the spirit; and then, pursuant to the alternating plan of the series of lessons, comes a narration of the healing of the ruler's daughter. After a short but most explicit address on the power of faith follows the miracle of feeding the multitude, and then there is a sudden and most surprising change in the daily mode of life of Jesus. This change is inaugurated by the transfiguration. At this point the careful student begins to perceive the plan on which Christ developed His earthly mission: First the nativity and ordinary life of a Jewish child, then the first manifestation of divine wisdom, then manhood and observance of the law, and after that the calling of His disciples, the development of doctrine and manifestation of power, after which came the transfiguration and preparing for the last scenes.

Thereafter his disciples were to be instructed more and more in the practical details of their coming work and the truly awful judgments they were to announce. The seventy were sent out, the disciples were taught how to pray and a model given, reasons for prayer were set forth in language which carries conviction and an answer specifically promised to the prayer of faith. Here again, as in the sermon on the mount, arises a difficulty which the devout student should neither evade nor deny. Nothing is ever gained and much may be lost by seeking to cover up or evade the difficulties of scriptural interpretation.

It is our duty to study them reverently, to call to our aid all other passages bearing on the subject, to give modest expression to such light as we may attain to, and in case we still "see through a glass darkly" to frankly admit our ignorance and hope for future enlightenment. The Bible is not like a novel or a newspaper, to be read once, fully understood and then laid aside. It is to be read daily and diligently through life, with the perfect confidence that new light will come with each reading.

The parable of the rich fool and the concluding lesson on trust in God amplify previous lessons and most appropriately bring believers to the practical exhortation, "Fear not, little flock." The coming quarter's lessons will show each addition raising the disciples to successively higher conceptions of the Christian life.

Removing Warts with Electricity.

Now that electricity is so generally employed for the removal of warts and facial imperfections, the following description in Medical Review of the method employed by Dr. Patrzek, of Oppeln, is of interest: He first thoroughly moistens the wart with a warm solution of salt. Both needles are then thrust through it just above the surface of the skin and the current turned on, one element after another being added until pain is felt. Five cells are sufficient. With most cases two sittings of five minutes each are sufficient to destroy the growth, which gradually dries up and falls away, leaving a surface at first slightly reddened, but which later assumes the appearance of normal skin.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refun the purchase price, it satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by

STONE IN THE KIDNEY.

I was first taken with sharp pains in the lower part of my bowels in the region of the bladder. Shortly blood appeared mixed with my urine, and a few weeks later I had an attack of gravel. I tried a number of doctors. One said it was gravel, another and another stone in the kidneys. For three months I was under the care of an eminent doctor at Albany, but constantly growing worse, went home to die. At this time I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and am now robust and strong. A remedy which can do this to one so near death as I was should be known everywhere. I hope this statement will cause others afflicted as I was to use the Remedy.—C. W. Brown, Petersburgh, N. Y.

Inflammation of the Bladder.

OBITUARIES.

For the past two or three years the Angel of Death has seemingly been hovering over this community and a large number have been called from us by the dread messenger, many without a moment's warning. We know the old must die and the young may; yet when without any prevailing epidemic so many are taken from a community as have been here the past week, the entire people are forcibly reminded of the fact that life is but a span long, and very uncertain. We are this week called upon to record five deaths, four of them very sudden.

Mrs. Eliza Bruce, one of Clinton's old citizens, aged 87 years, died Friday afternoon, at one o'clock. She had always been blessed with good health and retained her mental as well as physical strength to an unusual degree and her last sickness was not prolonged. She had been connected for many years with the Baptist church. Her funeral took place at her late residence Sunday, at 5 P. M., attended by Rev. H. R. Williams, of the Congregational church.

Anson Roff, another of the old landmarks and business men, attended to business on Friday, as usual, seemingly as well as common. In the night he went into the kitchen for something; his wife heard him fall, and going to him found him lying unconscious and breathing heavily. Before assistance could be procured he breathed his last. His funeral was held Tuesday at 2 P. M., at the house. Rev H. R. Williams, pastor of the Congregational church of which the deceased was a lifelong member, assisted by the venerable Rev. Wm. P. Wastell. The services at the grave were under the control of Clinton Lodge, No. 175, F. and A. Masons, of which Mr. Roff was a charter member. Wm. Dorr, W. M., assisted by Rev. G. E. Peters, of Detroit, rendered the impressive ritual in a very effective manner. Mr. Roff was 75 years old.

Melvin A. Coffin, aged 21—just entering upon life's duties—had for several days been poorly but was out on Saturday; but about one o'clock Monday morning his spirit was summoned from earth. He grew up among us well and favorably known, and was a musician of unusual promise, whose services were freely given to every charitable and worthy object. His funeral at his father's residence Tuesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock was largely attended. Rev. A. W. Stalker, pastor of the M E. church, officiated. As the procession left the house the Clinton band, (of which Melvin was a member), in full uniforms, played the solemn funeral march entitled "Eternity."

Monday afternoon the only son of Mr. and Mrs Caleb Lampson died after an illness of only three days, aged ten years. He was a bright boy and a general favorite. Mr. and Mrs. L. have the sympathy of all in their great affliction. Funeral Wednesday afternoon.

Wm Caldwell, aged 79, living five miles west of town attended Mr. Roff's funeral and was to all appearances in good health. About 1 o'clock Wednesday morning his wife noticed his breathing was not right. She spoke to him but received no reply. She then touched him but he did not move. Before any thing could be done he too passed away. The funeral was held at his late residence Thursday, Rev. A. W. Stalker officiating. The remains were taken east for interment.

Died, in Tecumseh, June 4th, 1890, at her mother's home, Mrs. Eliza D. McDougal. Her maiden name was Gregg and she was born in Groveland, Livingston Co., N. Y., November 8th, 1847; went to Illinois with her parents in 1865; when settled there joined the Presbyterian church in French Grove, Ill. At the age of 26 married Mr. John McDougal, from Somerset, Mich.; came with him to his home; joined the Wesleyan Methodist church by letter from French Grove, Ill.; took active part in church work. About six years ago she came to Tecumseh to live with her aged parents. She leaves an aged mother, five sisters and three brothers to mourn her loss. One brother and two sisters have gone before and just six months before her death she followed her father's remains to his last resting place, which was a terrible strain on her nervous system. She has been confined to the house since the second week of his death, but has been as patient as could be under her troubles. Until late years she was a helper to all who were in need. Death comes suddenly; so hers was. The Lord knows best. He doeth all things for the best. Her remains were buried in Tecumseh cemetery the 6th of June, Rev. W. H. Babbitt officiating.

Mrs. Hannah Herbeson was born in Antrim county Ireland in the year 1815. Her maiden name was Hindman her early life was spent in Ireland. She immigrated to this country with her husband and family in the spring of 1848. Her husband Joseph Herbeson preceded her to the other shore nearly three years ago. She was the mother of fourteen children. Eight have gone before, six are left to mourn her loss. W. J. lives in Franklin, John in Dakota, Robert and Joseph in Bath, Mich. Lawrence in Newburg, the only daughter Margaret in Owosso. She was an earnest christian, her bible was her constant companion, she has been a great sufferer with rheumatism; she suffered a stroke of appoplexy on June 14th, 1890 and passed quietly away. The funeral was conducted from her late residence in Franklin Tuesday the 17th.

Girls and Mothers Read This!

I wish to tell you of the case of a girl 16 years old, who had been sick with suppression two years. Her father had paid over $300 for doctors' bills, still she was falling. She had the worst countenance that I have ever seen, a kind of greenish yellow, she was emaciated, had constant bowel trouble, and had to take morphine every night in order to sleep at all. All who saw her thought she would die. Her parents said they had done all they could. I repeatedly urged them to try Zoa-Phora, but they were strongly prejudaginst "nostrums." Finally the mother said, "We must do something and this is as likely to help her as anything She and I pursuaded the father to let the girl try it. As a result, in four months her functions were established and regular, and in six months she was the picture of health—a living wonder to all who had known her.

I could describe 20 other cases, not as wonderful as this, but still very remarkable cures.

Happy Meeting of Two Friends

John M. Allen, of Charlotte, N. Y. said to his friend, "Parsons, I am about eead with the Gravel, and cannot find ohlp." Mr. Parsons induced Mr. Allen td give Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., a trial. Weeks went by and the friends met. Mr. Allen said Dr. David Kennedy's Favorit Remedy has saved my life. It is a cure for Gravel—and the only cure.

It is conjectured that a specific may yet be for every ill that flesh is heir to However this may be, certainly the best specific yet found for diseases of blood is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and most diseases originate from impure blood.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

ANOTHER GRADUATING CLASS BIDS FARE-WELL TO ITS CLASSIC HALLS.

The Commencement Exercises Held on Friday, June 27th—A Class of Six Receive Their Diplomas.

The commencement exercises at the Seminary this year drew out a large crowd as usual, and the day was a beautiful one in every respect. In fact a rainy day is a rare thing at the Raisin Valley Commencement. At the appointed hour, 10 a.m., the Seminary Hall was filled to overflowing and the exercises began promptly. The hall was nicely trimmed with evergreen festoons and the platform was decorated by an evergreen screen. Suspended from the ceiling above the stage was the class motto, wrought in flowers upon an evergreen background: "Labor Omnia Vincit."

At exactly 10 o'clock, Prof. Hathaway rang the chapel bell for the last time. He then opened the exercises by reading David's charge to his son Solomon. The venerable Richard Harkness then offered prayer.

The first instrumental solo was a march executed by Miss Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, during which the graduates took their places on the platform.

The first essay, by Nina B. Anthony, was entitled "Books as Companions." She spoke of the sublime characters of literature. In their books we can meet them face to face and learn to honor and respect them. We can, in our choice of books, always enjoy the best society. She spoke of the dangers of pernicious literature, light trash, which was usurping the place of the classics. It was very finely delivered.

"The "Trial of Jesus" was the next essay, by Elbert J. Chase. The speaker gave a very interesting account of the trial treated purely from a legal standpoint, and showed its utter lawlessness and farcical character. The essay evinced much careful study and thought.

Miss Dora Grayson, of Tecumseh, gave a vocal solo entitled "Eternal Rest." It was one of her best, and sang with her usual effectiveness.

"Our Indebtedness to Society" was the title of an essay by Myrtie C. Kelley. We do not live for ourselves alone but for society as well. Society has been improving for ages through the influence of education and religion. The reformation of society must begin at home. The essay was one of the best on the program.

"The Dream of the Nationalist," by Geo H. Crane, was the next on the program. The great political questions of monopolies and trusts, railroads, finance, labor, etc., are pressing upon us for solution. The speaker then set forth the theory of the Nationalists, so-called, for the settlement of all these questions. This essay was finely written and well delivered.

Miss Ella Jackson then favored the audience with an instrumental solo, which was admirably rendered and elicited applause.

Mary E. Middleton spoke on "Custom as a Tyrant." Custom has so strong a hold upon people in social and governmental affairs that but few men possess strength enough to withstand it. Such men are the pivots on which revolutions turn. Intemperance and its attendant evils arise from this cause. This address was very nicely delivered.

"Parallax" was the subject chosen by Della M. Parker. She spoke of the antiquity and beauty of astronomy and explained in detail the meaning of the term and its value in the prosecution of this study. This was the last essay on the program and its superior merit clearly entitled it to the post of honor.

The presentation of Diplomas followed and then Prof. Hathaway gave an address to the class, which was one of the finest productions of the character ever given at the Seminary. We expect to print it in full hereafter.

The exercises closed with a vocal solo by Miss Dora Grayson, entitled Annice, which was sang in her usual felicitous manner. Thus ended a commencement program which was fully equal to any of its predecessors.

The alumni exercises in the evening were well attended. The Raisin Glee Club furnished the music. The program was much enjoyed. Geo. Kelley, '89, gave an oration; Ida Russell, of '86, a recitation, and Eva Wueeler, of '88, a paper. The exercises over, the alumni adjourned to the dining hall, and partook of a bountiful banquet. More than half of the entire enrollment responded to their names, and all enjoyed themselves hugely.

TWENTY-SIX GRADUATES.

THE BANNER CLASS OF THE TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL PRESENT THE MOST BRILLIANT COMMENCEMENT PROGRAMME EVER GIVEN IN TECUMSEH, AND RECEIVE THEIR DIPLOMAS.

The Opera House Crowded to Overflowing with a Delighted Audience—A Program both Literary and Musical of Unusual Excellence. Pleaty of Applause and Oceans of Flowers—A Detailed Report of the Exercises.

The Class of 1890 has the reputation of being the largest class ever graduated from our High School. It not only surpasses all others in numbers, but in point of ability and scholarship it equals any of its predecessors. The Commencement, therefore, was an event of more than usual interest this year. Public expectations had been wrought up to the highest pitch, in anticipation of a brilliant program, and it is safe to say that they were not disappointed. Every one of the lucky twenty-six had some part to perform, and all acquitted themselves with credit. It was the universal verdict that there was not an inferior production in the entire list. Five minutes was the outside limit allowed to each essay, and so admirably was the programme arranged that it consumed only two hours and a half. The first musical selection was given at 7.30 sharp, and the benediction was pronounced at 10 o'clock. The Opera House was packed to suffocation. All the available standing room was occupied and hundreds of people were turned away, unable to gain admittance at all. The sale of admission tickets was stopped at half past seven, for every available chair was then taken. Twenty-six small tables were ranged along in front of the platform. The ushers gathered the bouquets and other gifts as the audience came in, and placed them upon the reception tables. Many books and other valuable gifts were bestowed by friends of the graduates, and the floral offerings surpassed all former efforts, both in variety and number. Those tables were a beautiful sight. The stage front was neatly decorated with evergreen trimmings and potted plants. Suspended from an upper fly the class motto appeared in large gold letters: "For Life, not for School, We Learn." The beautiful sentiment of this motto imparted its truth to all the essays, and gave character to the entire exercises. Prof. Wilson and the graduating class occupied chairs upon the stage. The entire program was presented without the least hitch or failure of any kind, showing thorough rehearsal and preparation. It was announced by Prof. Wilson in the following order:

Benediction—Rev. Frank Adkins.

The orations were all well committed and admirably recited. Not one of them was lost to the large audience and their briefness gave a pleasing variety to the program. We have no comparisons to make among the graduates. Their productions are printed in full below and speak for themselves, and we do not begrudge the extra trouble and labor on our part which this report necessitates.

The musical part of the program was of superior merit. The opening piano duet was given by M. Wirt Allen and Miss Rhoda Benedict, both of whom are graduates of the Adrian college musical class at the last Commencement. The vocal solo by Miss Agnes Woodward was beautifully sang, Miss Jennie Root accompanying. The chorus of seven violins was executed by Miss Mabel Hayden and six of her pupils: Emma Bailey, Iva Elliott, Nora Colvin, Bert Marks, Willie Elliott and Paul Brown. It richly deserved the applause it received. Miss Dora Grayson fully sustained her reputation in her vocal solo, Miss Ella Jackson accompanying. The male quartette was greeted with a rousing encore, to which they very happily responded.

We herewith append the essays and orations in full, in the same order in which they were given.

Salutatory.

MAY A. KINGAN.

Kind Friends and Classmates: It is my pleasant duty, this evening, in behalf of the Class of '90, to extend to you a most hearty and cordial welcome.

We appreciate your presence here, since it shows us that you have some interest in our exercises.

You see before you an army assembled at the close of a very successful campaign. The students' war of '87, '88, '89, '90 is over, the last battle with books, ideas, propositions, etc., has been fought. Some of us enlisted for two years, others for three, but the most of us have been in the ranks the full four years. Some have fainted and fallen by the wayside, but the deserters have really been few, while our faithful veterans have ever been foremost in the fight, and whenever a decisive battle, or, technically speaking, an examination occurred, they bravely marched forward and boldly made the charge, each time with excellent success.

And so, after four years of unceasing labor in the field of knowledge; after four years of pleasant association with our teachers—it is indeed pleasant to meet as soldiers, at the close of this warfare, for a final review before disbanding.

Our historians will relate to you some of the many and varied experiences of the largest class that ever graduated from the Tecumseh High school.

Those who prophesy are supposed to have "imaginative power;" but "though they have the gift of prophecy and understand all mystery and all knowledge," yet, whether they will have charity and consideration for our feelings in predicting our future, remains to be seen.

I come merely to announce and bid you welcome to the final entertainment which the veterans of '90 have prepared for you.

Hoping that you will feel amply repaid for the time spent in listening to us to-night, I again extend to you a cordial salutation and a most sincere welcome.

Individuality.

MAGGIE HAIRE.

That "Individuality" is the most prominent characteristic of self-made men no one will dispute.

When we speak of an individual as being self-made this question naturally arises, "What do you understand by the term "self-made?" Webster defines it in four words, made by ones self. By means of his own talents and energies, persons may rise to positions of fortune fame or influence without the usual aids to such attainments. Our individuality will manifest itself.

Young persons are often told to "aim high" and are particularly informed that if they point their arrows at the sun the flight will be higher than if the aim were lower. Just here many make the mistake of a lifetime. Taking the world's estimate that certain trades, callings and professions are held to be most respectable and honorable, many in their ideal to "aim high" rush into them without the least adaptation to meet their requirements, and a miserable failure is the result.

If you put a pen-knife to do the work of an ax, the delicate little instrument will soon be spoiled. And is it any more or less than the truth to say that the majority of people put themselves or are put to work to which they have no natural talent?

If you have ever attended an exhibition of horses you no doubt remember the many different classes that were exhibited. There was the strong and sturdy draft horse, the graceful saddle horse and the fast horse. In all probability the fast horse was the most coveted by the crowd. All are now placed on the track for the premium on speed. How unequal the contest. While the fast horse easily reaches the goal, the remainder go lumbering along and by their extreme clumsiness appear ridiculous. Now drive them all from the tract and bring in only one class at a time. There is nothing ridiculous about them now when each class is exhibited upon its own individual merits. No amount of training would have ever changed the radical characteristics of the animals, but it would have destroyed their individuality.

In accordance with individual ability and taste, each should choose his own vocation, not delaying till the force of necessity drives him to do that for which he has no natural adaptation.

Whether the aim be high or something less than the height of the sun, the main thing is to have an aim, some definite line of study or work, and towards that point we should direct every energy and the end will crown the undertaking.

Myths.

EDWARD M. PALMER.

Webster says a myth is a fabulous or an imaginary statement or a narrative conveying an important truth. The former definition is doubtless the outgrowth of the modern use of the term, while the latter relates to its use by the ancients, as in the story of the Golden Fleece, the labors of Hercules and the various theological teachings in the 1st, 2d, and 3d. centuries A. D. It therefore cannot be considered as a fable. Neither is mythology the history of fables, regarded as mere creations of the imagination or as introduced merely to supply the chasms which are found in all the early historical records of the human race. Myths may be divided into several classes of which the first and most important is the Theological and Moral. Theology must of a necessity be founded on myths, and to substantiate these theories Theologians must draw largely upon their imagination. This can be readily seen by attending church service and listening closely to the sermons. It will generally be found that two thirds of the texts are from the New Testament, and the writers from which they have been selected are Matthew, Luke, Mark, John, or some other writer. All of these must depend somewhat on heresy and traditions for their works, and above all, upon their memories. As a consequence of taking a subject from their writings a person must draw upon his imagination largely for proof and illustrations, the same as the authors themselves did for their writings. And when we take any of the religious beliefs of this world, for example, that of the Grecians down to the present time, and sum them all up and trace them to their origin, we find that they are founded largely on myths. If according to our first definition, a myth is a fabulous or an imaginary statement, our country must be full of mythology to day, for certain it is that there are many imaginary statements. In after years it will be told to our children how our good forefathers battled for the protective principle in our political system. The idea of free trade will appear as strange to them as the myths of the ancient Greeks do to us. I would that our forefathers had not made Bachus their God of revelry in song and drink, then we would not have had so much of this drink habit to contend with. May its strength grow less and less, and may history concerning it be rather a myth than a well founded report, for it is a shameful and disgraceful blot on our national and political record, a knowledge of which I am sure we would rather lie dormant, or become perverted into a myth, than to be handed down in its true light. When will the people wake up to these facts, cease to be manipulated by political leaders and come out and vote their conscientious beliefs? Why do we stand idly by and allow this and kindred evils to sap our nation's vitality? Verily, my friends, if such continues, our history will be worse than that of the ancients. Theirs was one of fable, ours one of reality, exceeding in vividness all the painted realities of those of the ancients.

Class History.

R. S. MOORE.

Indeed, my friends, we live in an age of great advancement. The past and present have revealed to us unbounded knowledge but what the future will be only remains to be seen. Yet how could events that traspired hundreds of years ago be of benefit to us now, were it not for history?

History is a record of events in their chronological order. Barbarous nations have kept no records, they having no desire to remember events after their occurrence, but we, who are enlightened have such desires and the history of our country is as dear to us as is a feast to a savage.

The celebrated works of the great English historian Edward Gibbon and the great American historian George Bancroft, have produced a wonderful effect upon the present age. Were it not for these great men many important events pertaining to their country's welfare would have been forgotten. So to, would our class of '90 been forgotten had I not appeared before you to-night and unraveled the mysteries which pertain to our school life.

Perhaps this brief history will not only be of information to us now, but in years to come when some members of our class hold prominent positions in our nation's government, then will our biographiers turn back to the history of our school days and find there the beginning of a life, whose name now is common, dear to all.

If the history of a class like that of a nation were to be a record of great deeds, bold adventures, wonderful achievements, etc., I am sure, my friends, you would have been honored by my absence to-night; but if on the the other hand, it were to contain an account of each member's school life, t would be impossible for me to give it in such limited time, hence for convenience our class has three historians.

Most of us remember that to us eventful September morning in '86 when we began our course in the High School. Impressed with our supposed greatness, especially in numbers, for our class is by far the largest ever sent out by the Tecumseh Public Schools, and, imbued with the sease of dignity, we started out upon our various courses. During our Freshman year there were fifty-two of us, Sophomores thirty-nine, Juniors thirty-one and Seniors twenty-six.

There were nine members began in the first grade, seven while between the first grade and the High School and ten while in the High School.

And now feeling that I have the advantage of my schoolmates, for the first and perhaps the last time, I wish to recall in a personal way things perhaps that may have been forgotten by some of us. First, there is our dignified president, J. Rosebrugh Hosmer.

Of his uneventful school days little can be said. Except a semi-occ sional application of the rubber hose Robe's school days would have been monotonous.

Second, is our esteemed friend and charade composer, Hattie Conklin, Mischief and pleasure went well with her till recitation hour, then time was precious, note writing was bidden good b ye.

Third is our favorite innocence, the great Demosthenes Albert O. Howard. Who was it that tried to place placard, | off, Poison, For Sale, on your back? Who was it that stealthily passed my books around the room and left my seat For Rent?

Fourth, is the Ridgewayite and base ball crank, Edd Palmer.

Edd will never refuse taffy, and as the old saying goes, "An ounce of Taffy is worth more than a ton of epitaphy.

Fifth, is our self composed and distinguished linguist, Mag Haire By perseverance and close application she has succeeded in reaching the top of the ladder of fame.

Sixth, is our Brownvillian friend, Mame Crowell.

Her love for mischief making is still a characteristic but her pedestrian desires have been squelched since her return from Clinton.

Seventh, is our vice-president, Mattie Kehoe. The dignity shown in her official capacity point to a future which may be marked by an impersonating Belva Lockwook.

Eighth, last but not least, is our brilliant class prophet Mag Spafford. Her witty expressions and great imaginative power have made her no small friend among us.

And now the time has come to say adieu to our school days, the happiest days of our lives.

Anticipation vs. Realization.

AMEY E. KINGAN.

"Oh! Vainly wise the moral muse hath sung
That hope hath but a Siren tongue."

For ages the Siren has been a synonym for the delusions of hope. But throughout the beautiful poem from which our quotation is taken, the poet affirms and proves from the widest range of poetry, romance, history, experience and even revelation itself, that hope is truly an "anchor to the soul"—the guiding star of life and the only sure foundation upon which we rest in death.

In a feebler way and poorer language, we too will attempt to show that anticipation is not a Siren voice alluring us on in facinating tones, only to be dashed upon the rocks of disappointment; but a kind and beckoning hand, ever held out to encourage and stimulate earth's children to persevere in its onward course.

True it is that all anticipations are not realized, or if they are, the result is sorrow not happiness.

Alexander with his marshalled hosts controlled the world, and millions died that the insatiate conqueror might be great. But was he satisfied? History tells us that when he saw the subjugated empires lying at his feet, he wept because there were no more worlds to conquor. And why? His ambition was ignoble. His anticipations may have been realized, but they brought him no true satisfaction. And the same may be said of Cesar, Cyrus and Napoleon. But do you think these were the sentiments of Washington and Grant? They too were commanders of great armies, but their battles were fought in the best interests of their country, and th r victories were for humanity and for right; and a great reward was theirs—the consciousness of well doing and the happiness and prosperity of their country.

From warriors and statesmen we may go on to the individual experience of every day life. Anticipation of fortune, fame and happiness loom before the imagination. Efforts are put forth to secure them, and the labor and privation necessary for their attainment is cheered and lightened by the reward. They may not come just when we expected nor as we desired, but some great good is sure to follow all right endeavors; often times more and better than we had dared to hope.

And thus we approach our own situation as a class to-night. From our earliest school years we have had in high anticipation this hour before us. Toward this point we have worked and studied; for the recompense which this hour gives us; obstacles have been overcome, and difficulties surmounted, which would have been impossible without the inspiring power of anticipation. It has been our talisman, unseen by others, but ever with us exerting its magical power. Day after day have we ciphered out the complex problems of arithmetic and algebra, untangled the many threads of rhetoric, and conned the long dry pages of history, both ancient and modern. Our brains wearied and our courage flagged and utterly dismayed would we have turned aside had not the alluring light of anticipation led us on.

And here we stand at last. The goal is reached. Study of these school years is over; even the last dreaded composition is written. In looking back, our school days seem brief and pleasant. Our lessons were not so difficult and our teachers were helpful and kind, and are we the learned and accomplished scholars we had hoped to be? Should we be willing to exchange the discipline of these school years and the attainments they have brought us with our standing of a few years since? We know that we should not, and this we say in no spirit of pride or boasting. We are well aware of the wide fields of learning before us, but we feel too, that what we have already gained, is as good food, giving us strength to run forward in the race for knowledge that is before us. To be satisfied with ourselves and our present attainments would be the death knell to improvement, but we are satisfied that anticipation should ever more guide and direct us.

We All Wear Cloaks.

GRACE HECK.

Yes, we all wear cloaks, but what a great variety there are. Some long, so that they entirely envelop the form, others merely a pretense of a cloak. A great many are dingy and worn, some fresh and bright. Here one of a somber hue that at first glance would make the wearer appear plain or even ugly, which when thrown off would reveal a person much to be admired. There one that is thrown open a little, and we catch a faint gleam of the personage, enough however to make us anxious to tear off the cloak and see the rest.

You have met a few people who wear long cloaks fastened to the very bottom, as if they were afraid to let the world see a bit of their character You attempt to make friends, hoping that you may help them in some way, and you almost think you have succeeded, but alas! the cloak is not opened for you. A few may know what is hidden underneath, but even these few know very little. They trust no one and no one trusts them. So they pass a solitary life, when perhaps if the cloak had revealed more of their character they would have been far happier.

Then there are persons who have a very agreeable disposition and would win many friends, but they seem to delight in wearing cloaks that are displeasing and even ugly, thinking by their independence in wearing something out of the usual line to gain admiration, but the wished-for attention does not come and they are scoffed at by many.

I once knew a person who wore a long, plain cloak. It seemed to me so plain that I had not the least desire for a glance inside and I wondered what others could see attractive in her. By some chance the cloak was thrown open and a trait of character was displayed that surprised me and which I had no idea the person possessed. I began to grow interested, thinking if she possessed one such excellent quality she must have more. When she saw I was interested in her, and not merely curious, little by little the cloak was drawn off and I found that she indeed did possess rare charms. Her admirers were not numerous but those she had were true friends.

Then there is another kind of cloak widely different from the one just mentioned. All eyes are turned towards it, so brilliant it seems. Everyone is so fascinated by the outside appearance that they never think of looking under the cloak, but, although beautiful, it is made of frail material and begins to wear out. A great rent is torn in the front, another here, a third there. The former admirers stand back in amazement, doubting if this is the same person they saw some time before. The owner attempts to cover the rents with patches, but alas! the cloak is ruined and the character appears very hideous when brought in comparison with the cloak.

In so great a variety, is it a wonder that we often misjudge a person by the cloak he wears? Let us not seek then to display our virtues in our cloaks or conceal our defects under them, but let us seek to wear cloaks that more nearly correspond to our characters.

Prophesy.

MARY E. HAIGHT.

Time 1898. It is on a bright, sunny morning, when having planned some work for the day, that I am suddenly disturbed by the ringing of the door-bell and the visitor comes in the form of one of those persistent agents; but yet there is something attractive, something strangely familiar about this one.

Soon after she is seated, she chances to notice, in the room, a picture of the class of '90 and tells me that she was a member of that class, and then turns and looks at me, but the recognition is mutual, for in her I recognize Etta Coddington, and she begins to tell me about the class as far as she knows. I remember that Etta had two ardent suitors, and we had often wondered which one she would choose; but she tells me that they fought a duel, one being killed and the other thrown into prison for the offence; so she, heartbroken, goes on her travels.

All of us thought, when Albert was a boy, that his inclination tended toward a tailor, but it seems he has risen, step by step, until he has finally become a member of Congress; thro' his efforts the "Bill of Woman's Rights" was passed, thus proving his continual loyalty to the gentler sex.

Our fair historian, Edith, who went to India as a missionary, found that one poor heathen was all she could look after.

My visitor asks me if I remember how Hattie used to say she had no hopes after commencement, and how she looked at the moon in adoration, so that we all called her moon-struck. Well, the attraction was so great that our philosophical principle was put into effect and the lunar body was drawn toward the earth, so that Hattie finally reached the hitherto unattainable.

Russell is now Capt. of his beautiful ship called "Courtship," and, although he is now on one of his voyages, we know he will safely anchor, for as one of our historians has told us, he was always successful in his school work, and "it was for life not for school we learned."

"And I was surprised," my informer said, "when I came along to see upon the bill boards the advertisement: "To-night—at the Opera House—The famous comedian, accompanied by his wife, the most noted Prima Donna traveling. Best theatrical on the Globe," and upon inquiry, found that the principal characters were Edwin Palmer and Alice Garlinghouse.

When I inquired what laurels had fallen upon Maggie Spafford, I was told that she became so interested in finding the future of her number of the class, that she settled down, with a houseful of cats, to a profession known as matchmaker.

But Viva's fate was so startling to me, for I always had thought her to be so gentle, yet "the course of true love never did run smooth" and she, against the wishes of her parents, accepted the Sage advice of her devoted follower in one of our neighboring towns, and—eloped with him.

This conversation brings before us many beautiful recollections of the class, many reminiscences never to be effaced, and, as we separate, we express the hope that we may meet it again, united never to part.

Of What the World is Thinking.

VIVA A. HOWELL.

The world may be considered as a body having one great mind, the public mind. The nations are the members of the body while the individuals are the atoms of which it is composed. This public mind is, at present, much agitated by the questions of labor, capital, temperance, taxation and religion.

Education has never before been so widely diffused among every class.

It has enabled each citizen to see more clearly his position in life and awakened him to seek a better. Many of our laboring people are poor, some in actual want. The poor ar growing poorer, while the few ar growing wealthier. The laborer sees for himself, his children and his children's children only poverty and suffering. Like our forefathers who, considering the welfare of themselves and their posterity, revolutionized the government, the laborers are endeavoring to secure liberty and property by revolutionizing the system of labor. Therefore they are forming organizations led by men of prominence, not only in this country but in the countries of the old world. They demand shorter hours, thinking that by this means many now out of employment will be supplied with work and thus the wants of a great number be relieved.

Another thought that troubles the mind of Earth is to see so many of her promising children moving steadily on to sure destruction through the evils of intemperance. At times the fearful thought almost overwhelms us. Great efforts are put forth. Temperance meetings are held and lectures delivered. The subject is made a party issue. Nothing that can be done is left undone. But other issues rush in and crowd aside the great work. Temperance is a great tide, and though ebbing now, will come in again with greater force than ever before bringing success to its workers.

We next come to the subject of taxation, which leads us to consider whether or no the products of foreign countries shall come into our borders untaxed. For if the labor necessary to produce these commodities be employed abroad, it will take the wages of so much labor from our people. But as our minds are divided on these questions of great importance so is the World on this, and only time can tell which side will win.

Religion, though not so much agitated at present, fills the whole universe with its silent influence and in some way known only to our Creator, governs the moral actions of all and brings everything to its appointed end. Even from these few hints we can plainly see that there was never a better opportunity for men and women to serve their country. The laborer needs wise leaders, the intemperate man a helper to lift him up and to destroy the "fire water" in the country, statesmen to enact good laws; the pulpit, sincere workers.

Class History.

HATTIE CONKLIN.

As an historian I fear I have mistaken my calling, yet we are resigned to our fate.

As historians we will speak of the school-days of a class which had lived twelve long years and during that time has experienced thrilling adventures, seen grand sights, heard wonderful things and accomplished great deeds. It would be useless to relate, since everyone is acquainted with this fact, that never before did a larger, more attentive or a more disciplined class leave the Tecumseh High School.

Our class poet, who joined us five years ago, has been successful in all his undertakings and very attentive to his lessons, one of his favorite expressions being, "I haven't got that far."

Etta Coddington, having been in the class for the entire twelve years, has passed through many trials and tribulations, the number of miles over which she has passed in going to and from school being about 4,600.

During his school life Chas. Hastings made up his mind to leave and search for better companions, but he came to the conclusion before it was too late that he was better off with the class of '90 than elsewhere.

The tallest and most graceful girl in our class is Grace Heck. She has grown up with us from childhood and her past life has been such that more than one has learned to love her.

My earliest recollections of Mag Haight are when at the Brown school. In those days she was called a model girl, but now,—Oh, how changed! But as she is one of those who prophesy perhaps I had better say nothing.

It seems as though our brother historian, Robt. Moore, had always been with us, but he joined us four years ago, and in the meantime has completed all the studies laid out in the courses with the exception of the languages. I will leave it for the prophet to decide whether his future will be as bright as his past.

If within the last few years anyone should have happened in our school room, they would have found sitting near the front two girls named May Kingan and Emilie Hamilton, who were always busy with their lessons, never looking to the right or left, but one always looking back and one always looking ahead, for they were seated the one in front of the other.

Edith Vedder has been in the class but a short time in comparison with most of the members, but she has proved the time and made for herself a cheerful and helpful classmate.

Are not all these facts sufficient to prove the last statement?

Surely this is a peculiar class; one of the greatest peculiarities arises from their heights.

How is it that the ladies of the class of '90 look up to the gentlemen of that class, when the ladies tower to the extreme height of 91 feet and the gentlemen reach only to the height of 52?

All Are Architects of Fate.

S. ERWIN CONKLIN.

All are architects of fate, working in walls of time. Each of us has a destiny and our to day's and yesterday's are the blocks with which we build.

In the years which have been allotted to mankind, three things are to be considered; youth, middle and old age, the first of which might properly be called the foundation.

It is a long upward struggle, but like the artisan who hews the rough rock and places it as a finished piece in its place, so we fashion each day, making it what we will.

All too quickly will it pass, and we will find that lost opportunities can never be regained. Then "let us be up and doing" for whatever our sphere we have some duty to perform.

As the victory belongs to the persevering let us not be content with our present position, but push forward, and like the boy who wishes to see his initials cut higher in a school stone rock than those of his companions, we will have made a foothold on m ore step in an upward direction.

We have an advanced and enlightened age with which to contend, and it is necessary that we be prepared. All around us are those who have taken their turn. We have seen them fall and rise again, but we should remember that our greatest glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Some of us have nearly completed our foundations—then will come the sterner realities, or what should be to us an age of usefulness.

We will probably have left our homes and friends, to do for ourselves. Many ways will lie before us, but to choose the one that we can best travel is a question that is liable to arise in our minds. It is a turning point in our destiny. We expect to find many obstacles and temptations in whatever course we pursue, but by overcoming and doing our part well, we know that honor will be ours.

At last comes the summing up of our age—and having completed our labors we look back over the past and see wherein we have failed.

Then let us profit by the example of others, take our stand, and with all our might try and make the world of to-morrow better for our being in it.

WHY THEY SMUGGLE.

EXTENSIVE SMUGGLING UNEARTHED AT THE PORT OF NEW YORK.

Gothamites Get a Taste of Cheap Clothing—How the Smuggler Dodges the Tariff, and in That Way Sells Cheap London Clothing in America.

The eating is the proof of the pudding, and facts are the disproof of the pretenses and wild exaggerations of the protectionists.

One of their exaggerations is the statement that clothing is as cheap in the United States as in Europe. The curious side of the matter is that if this statement were true there would be no need for protective duties on clothing. But instead of lowering duties on cloth and clothing we find McKinley actually putting on still higher duties and telling us in his tariff speech with coolest impudence, "We want no return to cheap times in our own country." McKinley evidently does not believe that clothing is as cheap here as in Europe; and, what is more, he boldly assures us that it shall not be so. He has the idiocy to tell us, in defense of his outrageous bill, that "when merchandise is the cheapest men are the poorest."

But the foolish claim that clothing is as cheap here as in Europe has recently been refuted in a practical way that leaves absolutely no foundation for the false pretensions of the men who make such a claim.

The smuggler has been detected again for the thousandth time. This time it is clothing made in London that he has been secretly selling in New York.

The efforts of Special Agent Wilbur have recently brought to light an extensive and organized system of smuggling. The smuggling is carried on in clothing, cloaks, silks, plushes, laces and in nearly all other articles subject to high duties, thus offering large profits as compensation for the risk of detection.

The method of operations is as follows: Certain agents in New York take orders for clothing to be made in London, charging on their bills so much for "freightage." The unsuspecting buyer supposes this "freightage" covers the duty also, as it is usually put high enough to give that impression. The agent having taken his customer's measurement and the goods having been selected, the order is sent off to London. The clothing is then made up and is brought over in care of some employe on one of the ocean steamers. In New York the packages are kept well out of sight for a day or two after the vessel lands, and are then slipped ashore in bundles of washing. In this way the clothing reaches the New York agent in the course of a month or two; and the buyer, who knows nothing of this smuggling process, receives notice of the arrival of his clothing.

Now, the fact that these smugglers will run the risk of detection and punishment—$5,000 fine or five years' imprisonment—disposes very effectually of the pretense that clothing is cheap here. If prices were the same here as abroad the smuggler's occupation would be gone—just as the occupation of McKinley himself would be gone. For this reason neither the smuggler nor McKinley believes in having things cheap here.

These smuggling cases have called out a mass of information as to the comparative cost of clothing here and in England. A man who signs himself "A Victim" writes a letter to one of the New York papers in which he makes this statement: "I can buy suits in London at from three to four guineas, or from $16 to $21, which cost in New York from $45 to $55. I cannot get quite as good a fit, but I do secure better material and more durable work. Now the cost of these articles to the tailor in London must be at least one-third less, or say about $10 for the $16 suit and $15 for the $21 suit. The duties amount to from $5 to $7.50 to the tailor, or possibly even less. Charging me from $5 to $10 per suit for transportation, etc., he still has a profit left him, and is able to undersell the American tailor by a very considerable amount."

An American missionary at home from South Africa on a vacation reports that even in that remote quarter of the globe clothing costs about half what it costs here, although it has to be shipped all the way from England.

The writer of this article can give a case from his own experience. Passing through London three years ago he had a light fall overcoat made at one of the best known establishments on Regent street, the cost being $15. In the city of London proper clothing is still cheaper, as he afterwards found out. Now, in the winter of 1888-9 the writer was in Boston. He went one day into a tailoring establishment—one of the cheapest ones at that—to find out what would be the cost of the same coat in Boston. The tailor's attention was called to the quality of the goods—its soft, pliant character, evidence of the fine long clothing wool of Australia or the Cape.

"Now, how much would you charge to make me a coat like that?"

"Thirty dollars."

These smuggling cases and the McKinley bill together have stirred up the tailors in New York, and these men have recently held meetings to look after their interests. They saw their trade threatened by the smuggler on the one hand and by McKinley on the other.

At one of these meetings W. H. Kinney, who had been chosen secretary, gave an instance of how the proposed bill would affect American tailors. An overcoat, he said, which now, with the cost of making and a reasonable profit, could be sold for $32.50 would, when the bill became a law, cost $71.87, while a London tailor would be able to make such a coat and deliver it here for $44.46, including the duty. Tailors would be compelled to pay a duty on two and one-half yards of cloth, which if made up would come in free.

The tailors are very strongly opposed to that feature of the McKinley bill which allows American travelers to bring back $100 worth of clothing from Europe.

Nobody ever hears of an American who has clothing made just before going to Europe; but this same American always comes back home with a large stock of clothing, and very happy to be rid of high tailors' bills for several years.

At present the quantity of personal clothing which a traveler may bring in free is unlimited, but McKinley puts the limit at $500.

In the universal scramble for protection the tailors think that they also ought to get a turn at the wheel. They are opposed to allowing the traveler so much cheap clothing. A gentleman named Mitchell who knows says that McKinley's $500 limit "would mean that a man could bring in from one to five years' supply of clothing and could escape the duty on it, while the tailor here would be forced to pay duty on the cloth he imported. Moreover, figuring on the scale of duties laid down in the bill, a Philadelphia house had made all its arrangements to manufacture clothing on the other side of the ocean and then import the goods, paying duties, etc., but yet making a saving from the cost of similar goods to the American tailor of 18 or 20 per cent. The effects of such competition upon the American tailor could be easily imagined. Beyond any doubt he would feel it most keenly."

That does not look very much as if "clothing is as cheap here as in England."

Who is it that buys this foreign made clothing? Not the wicked Democrats and Mugwumps alone. Republicans do it, too, for a man does not talk "patriotism" when he goes to buy clothing; he buys it where his dollar goes furthest. Nobody ever accused the Union League club, of New York, of having any leaven of "British free trade" in it; but this Mr. Mitchell, in speaking of the agents of London tailors, says: "It is an open secret that a couple of months ago one of these emissaries of a London house made his headquarters at the Union League club, which ought to be one of the strongholds of protection, and carried on his business with much success."

This Union League "stronghold of protection" clearly does not believe that clothing is "as cheap here as abroad," but it believes in getting clothing as cheaply as possible. It plainly does not indorse the famous saying of President Harrison that "a cheap coat means a cheap man," or the saying of the Lord High Tariff Maker himself that "when merchandise is the cheapest men are the poorest."

Smuggling is wrong — artificially wrong—made so, that is, by statute; but the smuggler is a useful institution in his way—he performs a service to the country by proving beyond all doubt that the tariff raises prices. Every smuggler that is caught preaches a mute tariff lesson to the consumers of this land. He crushes the life out of the protectionist pretense that goods are as cheap behind the tariff wall as on the outside.

The Protectionist Fourth of July Orator.

The time is at hand for the Fourth of July orator to plume the wings of his patriotism and flap them in saucy triumph before the rest of the world. "Triumphant democracy" is a theme which stirs the blood of every American, and the time ought to be far distant when any citizen of this country should lose faith in his country's present and future glory.

But the glorious Fourth shows every year a spectacle calculated to make men and angels laugh. It is the protectionist orator who tries to proclaim that his country is the greatest and the strongest and the wealthiest and the most energetic and the most progressive that the sun ever shone upon, or ever will shed its gentle light upon, in its future course through the centuries.

And yet it is this same old protectionist who has all along been preaching a far different doctrine. It is he who has been trying all these years to drill into us the strange, cowardly and utterly un-American doctrine of "We can't."

American enterprise and thrift, American courage and cunning, American genius and brains—these are things that are known even in Europe, and they are respected there. American inventiveness is everywhere associated with the American name; and in every civilized city of the globe a man needs only to advertise "the latest American invention" when he wants to draw the crowd.

Every intelligent American knows these things, and we are all proud of this reputation of ours which has gone abroad into all the world.

But what shall be said of the protectionist orator who, after dilating upon all this in his Fourth of July speech, goes off and mounts the political rostrum to teach the universal doctrine of "We can't?" The doctrine of American impotence ought to be so unpopular that the indignation of the people would forever seal the lips of these prophets of evil, of these false teachers who are trying to sap the American character of its chief strength, namely, of its confidence in itself.

The man who believes in himself is strong, and universal fear means universal weakness. The paralysis of a nation's self confidence is chaos come again. The self reliant nation leads the progress of the world, and national despair is national death.

Let us then close our ears to the teachers of American weakness. Let us laugh to scorn the long faced politicians whose trade can only thrive by making the people lose faith in themselves, and whose permanent success would rob the American character of its peculiar and crowning virtue. Out upon the whole tribe of men who ever "make perpetual moan" and cry "We can't!"

The protectionists raise their hands in holy horror at everything that looks like a "free trade scheme to ruin our industries." But the good Maj. McKinley himself now takes a hand at ruining industries by his high tariff bill. In anticipation of the passage of the bill by the senate Messrs. Balbach & Son, the owners of the great smelting works at Newark, N. J., are preparing to remove their entire establishment to Mexico.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind. testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 10 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

Debate.

Resolved—That a boy should be taught only those things which he is likely to need in practical life.

AFFIRMATIVE.

A. O. HOWARD.

It is self-evident in this age of the world that everyone should have at least a common school education; an education that embraces a good knowledge of the common branches, reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, etc. No one will deny that a person is likely to need these studies in everyday practical life. In fact one must understand these branches before he can advance to higher learning. They are as the lower steps in a ladder without which we can never reach the top. Therefore the point at issue has more particularly to do with the education received subsequent to this.

In this discussion there is one point that must not be overlooked and that is the time in which a boy has to get an education. In our village schools and the same may be said of nearly all other similar schools, twelve years are required to complete the prescribed course, each year being devoted to a single grade. The first eight are spent in acquiring a common school education, the last four are spent in the high school.

Let us look at the latter department. From the almost indefinite number of sciences a few are chosen to be pursued in those four years. The different sciences present all degrees of practical usefulness. Bear in mind that when those four years are finished life's battle will begin. The average age of the high school graduate is about 19 years—twelve years of which are spent in preparation for practical life.

Now then comes the question—is it not better to fill up those four years with studies which will be of practical use in manhood rather than with those which serve merely to ornament the intellect? For instance, we have United States civil government in our high school course. Is it not better to spend the limited time in the study of the laws of our country rather than to study the old Roman laws, which, however grand, are of no practical use to the average man?

Of what use would ancient mythology be to the business man, as compared with a thorough commercial course, or what would it be to an engineer or machinist as compared with a knowledge of the philosophical principles of mechanics, heat, etc.? But, someone says, not one boy in a dozen knows what he will do when a man. In that event there is all the more need of a practical education, an education that may be turned to account in gaining a livlihood. If a boy wishes to know something about moral philosophy, sanscrit, mythology, philology, archaeology and a host of other ologies, let him, if he has the time and means, attend college. But the average boy has only a limited amount of time and means with which to obtain an education and that time should be spent in getting an education that will enable him to command respect and face life without flinching.

If we add more years to the high school course we simply introduce higher studies and make the addition substantially a college course, and right here that question of time and means presents itself. By the way, how many of the class of '90 would complete the course if it were four years longer?

Nearly everyone is adapted to some particular work. Of three college presidents who wrote articles in the Youth's Companion on the "Backward Boy," all said, "find out the boy's forte and then educate him to it." In other words give him an education which shall develop his natural tendencies; give him a practical education. In many schools manual training is being introduced, which shows that the popular sentiment is daily growing in favor of practical education.

No one can become too skilled in any vocation. Competition is so active that a person to be successful must give his entire attention to his profession, for unless he is an expert his services will be at a discount. He must know how to put his theory into practice; theory he learned when a school boy, to be used when a man. Theory without practical application, like faith without works, is dead. This is a practical world, a practical life, and he who would be successful must prepare himself in the right manner to meet it.

M. THERESA KEHOE.

In this enlightened age of progress it is useless to attempt great achievements or even ordinary ones without a practical education. But many have imbibed the idea that to obtain a sufficient education to enable a man to appear advantageously upon the theater of public life, his boyhood must be spent within the walls of some classical seminary of learning, that he may commence his career under the high-floating banner of a collegiate diploma. That a refined classical education is desirable and one of the accomplishments of man, we admit—that it is indispensably necessary, and always makes a man more useful, we deny. Classical lore and polite literature are very different from that vast amount of common information, which a man must have to render his intercourse with society pleasing to himself or agreeable to others.

Let boys and girls be taught first all that is necessary to prepare them for the common duties of life, then if they can make practical use of higher attainments let those be added afterward. Swedenborg says: "It is of no advantage for a man to know much unless he lives according to what he knows, for knowledge has no other end but goodness, and he who is made good is in possession of a far richer treasure than he whose knowledge is the most extensive and is yet destitute of goodness; for what the latter is seeking by his great achievements, the former already possesses."

By a proper improvement of time the apprentice or the mechanic may lay in a stock of useful information that will enable him to take a respectable stand by the side of those who have grown up in the full blaze of a collegiate education, and with a better prospect of success at the start, because he is better stocked with common information without which a man is a poor helpless being.

Every youth should have a mark in view and pursue it steadily. He should not be turned from his course by other objects be they ever so attractive. Life is not long enough for any one man to accomplish everything. Indeed but few can accomplish more than one purpose well. Many, alas very many, never accomplish a worthy purpose. Yet there is not a man endowed with fair, or even ordinary capacity or intellect who cannot perform at least one useful, noble work. But few men could succeed in more than one of the learned professions. Perhaps the man never lived who could master and become eminent in all of them. Certainly not in them and in agriculture and the mechanical arts. How much less then are the probabilities of his exhausting several and those perhaps the most intricate spheres of a man's activity.

Of what advantage would it be then, for a youth to spend his time in learning several of the learned professions of which he can make no particular use? Rather let him give his whole and undivided attention to his particular calling, which, when thoroughly mastered, will be a source of pleasure and profit, not only for himself, but for society in general.

R. J. HICKS.

It is generally understood that all boys should have some education, if nothing more than that acquired by completing our grammar department. In the first place to succeed in life, a profession or trade is of great assistance. By having some art or trade well learned, men of good character are seldom out of employment, while without these men are compelled to take what comes, whether desirable or not. Of course men have accumulated fortunes by speculation, but in such case all is chance, and the parties engaged run great risks, either making themselves rich or extremely poor. Where one succeeds, hundreds fail.

General exchange or mercantile business is in reality a profession. If a boy intends to become a business man, he should be well educated in business. A youth studying a particular profession need not necessarily be equally well educated in all others. Too much meddling with matters foreign to the desired occupation results in failures, not only in the one, but in all.

If a person wishes to winter in Florida he is not likely to pack his trunk with overcoats, felt boots, etc., but he takes along summer wear. So in the professions. If a boy intends to become a lawyer, it would be unwise for him to study medicine and agriculture at the expense of his profession. Thorough drill and education make men excel. A man taking a half dozen professions cannot get higher in any one than the average; thus is no better off than if he had one partially learned. To perform a duty well requires labor and skill, to excel demands a still greater degree of skill and labor. Electricity was not utilized by mere chance, or by men devoting their time to other subjects generally. The recent advancements in this line were made by men devoting their entire time and study to the subject in hand. Edison made great improvements in that form of energy called electrical energy, and by close application attained a world-wide fame. In the whole scope of science the greatest results have been attained by persons devoting their entire time and labor to the one profession. It is often remarked that if a man has two or three trades or professions he will not need to be out of employment. Getting the college training required for a profession is the smallest part of the work needed to become superior. But it is the several years of experience and application following that enable men to excel. Life is too short for a man to undertake too many occupations, and those men who know a little in several branches know nothing in any one, thus remaining stationary.

All men are not gifted alike, and it was not intended by our creator that all men should have like opinions. One man possesses ability for one occupation, and another that for a different one. And to best develop natural talents he should receive training in the work for which he is best adapted, and not in divers occupations with which he will not be associated in after life.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, it seems marvellous that our opponents should try to make you believe what they scarcely believe themselves, but it will seem still more wonderful if they do succeed in causing your opinions to coincide with theirs.

NEGATIVE.

DON H. C. BOWEN.

The present, my friends, is indeed an age of universal enlightenment, and a person in order to make life successful in it must be well educated in more than one branch of learning. A person may have a common education who has a moderate supply of common intelligence, but this in our day is far from being sufficient. The contested question states, "only those things which he is likely to need in practical life." Now it is absolutely impossible to tell what a person is likely to need in this life, and the word only limits the sphere of teachings to a minimum. A person educated to day in every practical science known will, during some part of his life, find a use for each and every one of them and probably more.

What I wish to call particular attention to is what J. S. Mill defines as two of the evils incident to close application to one line of work, i. e., contraction of the mind and loss of independence and self-respect. When a person is educated to do one particular thing, and that only, it becomes at last to be almost a second nature. You may talk with him understandingly about his own trade; go beyond this and he is hopelessly stranded. His mind being constantly on one subject is narrowed and hardened to reason. In fact he is unconsciously a fanatic. Ask the professor of music who wrote the Psalm of Life and probably he will suggest Mozart, while the lawyer might say Blackstone. A person following a profession and knowing no other is dependent upon that one line of employment. There are many obstacles to be taken into consideration in following a trade through life. There are ways innumerable by which a man may lose his position, and when he is thrown out of employment he can do nothing else, he has been educated only in those things which he supposed he was likely to need in practical life, hence he knows how to do nothing else; he must begin anew or starve. By the way, there is a man whose opinion upon certain scientific subjects is universally accepted, yet I doubt very much if the same learned man could drive a nail into a piece of soft putty without pounding his fingers.

So give the student of to-day a good broad education; he cannot learn too much; he will need it all, and it would be better far for him to finish a thorough course at least in our public schools before he thinks of a profession. If you do this there can be no cause for regret, and Emerson's good advice will be followed when he says: "Give a boy address and accomplishments and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes where he goes; he has not the trouble of earning or owning them; they solicit him to enter and possess."

ALICE B. GARLINGHOUSE.

True indeed it is that the capacity of even the greatest mind is limited, and the man who would make the best use of his powers of memory must exercise a wise discretion as to the things he tries to remember. If any principle of education is universally recognized it is that there should be no crowding in the mind of the pupil, but that every portion of knowledge imparted should have room to define itself and to grow. Therefore, I do not believe that any person should try to remember everything that comes within his reach, for doubtless the attempt would only cause confusion in the mind, but neither do I believe that he should disregard all objects of thought except those which he intends to use in practical life.

Two boys in the eighth grade of our public schools determine to become mechanics. With this end in view one leaves school at once, becomes an apprentice and goes to work to master the trade. The other finishes his course in the high school, then spends three or four years in college, including in his work a thorough business education. During these years he improves every opportunity to pick up, here and there, all available information concerning his chosen profession, and when he is ready to begin work in earnest, he is by no means ignorant of it. Because of his trained intellect he is able to apply himself much more effectually than the first. Ten years hence which one, think you, will be the better mechanic? Which one will have the broader views of life and be the more influential citizen? And further, which one will be better able to make his way in the world should circumstances oblige him to leave his present occupation? Certainly, you will all say the better educated one.

Lack of time has been urged as a reason why one should confine himself to the thorough mastery of one branch of work rather than to try to obtain a general knowledge of many. And again we have just been told that the average age of a graduate is nineteen years. Now would it not be better to spend, if necessary, two, three or even five years more of youth, seeking and storing up useful knowledge upon various subjects, and thus be prepared for any emergency, than to hasten out so young into the busy whirl of active life, knowing how to do but one thing, even though that may be mastered in every detail? We are often told that our school days are our happiest days. Surely then, a few more years may be spent pleasantly as well as profitably in school with no disadvantage in the end, I think I may say, in the majority of cases.

Hence I would repeat, instead of a limited education which shall cause your boys and girls to lead correspondingly narrow lives, give them a chance to obtain a good broad fund of general information, and rest assured their lives will be correspondingly broad and useful.

CHARLES HASTINGS.

It is indeed true that a boy should have a thorough education, but not only in one thing because he does not want to know about one thing, and that only. He wants an education in many things so that after leaving school he will have many things to care for himself all through life.

If a boy has more than one aim and cannot use them directly he can use them indirectly. Now suppose a boy learns to be a mechanic, everything runs smoothly for some years when his health fails and he must quit his profession, altogether in order to save his life. Now he has no other means to support himself, so he must begin to learn another trade, occupation or profession which will require time and labor, whereas if he had had more than one line of work when his health failed, or even a broad and liberal education he could have stepped out of one into the other, and therefore save time and trouble.

A fair education, broad and liberal, invaluable to one class of persons, is indeed valuable to all; whatever discipline of the mind, though it may not be put to practical use, gives in that much more power to do the line of work we pursue, whether it be to manage railroads, be railroad kings, to manage oxen or to be an artisan. Then we say let a boy learn as many things when young as possible, for the advantages occurring to him in future life does away with the seeming disadvantages in learning them while young.

Dreams.

MARY B. CROWELL.

Our dreams are our thoughts and as we dream so do we act, for we live in thoughts not breaths, and men truly great first dream of greatness and then strive to attain it.

Thus it is with our school days, they are the stepping stone to our other life, and as we have dreamed and acted in our school life, so will it be reflected in the days to come.

During the past twelve years each day with us, has been as the flash of a diamond on the sands of time to improve or to lose, as our wills have led us. How much of this time we have spent profitably will be shown in the years to come when some may, perhaps be remembered among the foremost of the land, for we all know that

"'Tis education forms the common mind,
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

I do not doubt that when each one of us was promoted to the first year of the High School, we all dreamed of this night, when we would shine forth as stars and each one endeavor to show what vast amount of learning he had acquired, but now, when the time has come we are only given just four minutes.

We have no doubt also, that after the experience of a year ago, when there was such a deficency of light, that each one dreamed of coming here, abundantly furnished with bright ideas with which to enlighten the audience, provided there was a like deficency this year.

Our dreams may be grand and ennobling while our expression of them may be feeble; thus it must have been with some of us while we were toiling the steep paths of our school life, and endeavoring in essays and newspapers to express our thoughts in good language, no doubt that if they had been placed in a golden frame, they would have adorned the walks of posterity and would have been handed down as heir-looms to coming generations.

Good books are the greatest and best thoughts of the greatest and best minds; which, if we wish, we may have as our constant companions and thus bring our dreams and aspirations on a level with theirs. Our dreams are our own, but a word once spoken can never be recalled, and as Byron tells us

"But words are things, and a small drop of ink,
Falling like dew upon a thought produces,
That which makes thousands, perhaps millions think."

To-night the school life of many of us ends. Surely it is with feelings of deep regret, we meet, I might say for the last time, to say farewell to these days and to the friends they have brought us. Even if these days have not been the most eventful ones of our lives, the memory of them will always be associated with pleasant dreams. May we not express the hope that each one of us may go away, dreaming bright dreams for the future, and with a happy remembrance of the past.

Class Prophecy.

EMILIE HAMILTON.

Sitting by the window thinking of my school days and of how many changes there have been, I find that eight years have passed. The changes are indeed startling. Scarcely any of the twenty-six members of the class of '90 remain at Tecumseh. I had often thought it would be nice to have a reunion of the class, and last week received an invitation to one to be held at the home of one formerly known as Mame Haight. I resolved to go if possible, as I had heard but little of my schoolmates for two or three years. The day came and I started. I thought I would like to surprise them, so sent no word that I was intending to come.

I was deeply engaged in a book when a lady entered the car and, touching me on the shoulder, asked if I would share my seat with her. I did so and she picked up the book that I had been reading. She told me that I was desperately wicked and begged me to turn from my evil ways. She then handed me a tract from a large number she had in a package, entitled, "The evil results of novel-reading." I raised my hand and she noticed my class ring. She spoke of it and I recognized in her our old schoolmate, Mattie Kehoe.

Arriving safely at the station I started for Mame's, although it was much too early for the guests. I reached the place but was much alarmed at the strange sounds that came through the window. I summoned all my courage after a few minutes and rapped. When I was admitted I was greatly surprised at the mammoth proportions of my hostess. We all remember her in '90 as a very slight built school-girl, but lo! the change. The first thing she asked me was whether I had heard her speech through the window, and then it became evident to me that she was practicing elocution. After a pleasant visit the guests came.

First to arrive was Agnes Stevens. Agnes is well-known everywhere in her own state. People who do not appreciate her worth have been heard to say, "There comes that abominable book agent again! She said: "I met Edith Pilbeam the other day. I was trying in vain to force myself through a crowd surrounding the Salvation Army when one of its leaders began to sing, and I recognized the voice of Edith Pilbeam, accompanied by her tambourine.

Chas. Hastings and Ernie Conklin were the next arrivals. Charlie has not become governor of the state yet, but is already constable. Ernie, whom we all expected to be a doctor, now teaches vocal music.

Another who could not be present has not given up in despair yet. Having become convinced that ladies were few and that young men were fast following the advice, "Go West, young man," for this reason May Kingan has started recently for Colorado. Then came Don Bowen. I said to him, "I supposed that you were a noted doctor, you obtained such a reputation by those prescriptions that were given in the Breeze, but they tell me you have invented a medicine which even rivals Castoria." Suddenly we were interrupted and informed that another would continue the prophecy and thus our joyous reunion came to an end.

Heroism.

AGNES M. STEVENS.

When'er a noble deed is wrought
When'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts in glad surprise
To higher levels rise.

Honor to those whose words or deeds
Thus help us in our daily needs,
And by their overflow
Raise us from what is low.

Is it not true that there is always something in our hearts which responds and thrills at every recital of heroic deeds, whether in song or story?

And surely this must be the angel side of our human nature which so answers and rejoices over all deeds of heroic daring, devotion and self sacrifice.

It is an inspiring and cheering thought, always, to know that every human soul is capable of some noble and unselfish action. And with the poet we do "Honor to those whose words or deeds; thus help us in our daily needs."

The history of all times is full to over-flowing with the records of the beautiful and saintly lives and deeds of our countless heros and heroines.

And as long as this world stands there will be more of like nature to record.

In times of peace and prosperity this life of ours seems so sordid and common place. Every one is so full of his own interests, pursuits and pleasures that it is hard to realize that we are in deed and truth, better and nobler than we seem.

My thoughts can best be illustrated by imagining our own little village over taken by a dire disaster, in form of fire, pestilence or flood.

Our homes destroyed, property gone, friends wounded or dead, grief and sorrow supreme in every heart. Would we not quickly forget whether we were rich or poor, friend or foe? Everything like this would be forgotten in our great whole hearted efforts to help and succor those in distress.

Aside from these daring and noble deeds, is a kind of heroism which might be called latent, undeveloped, only waiting for some opportunity to show itself. These are the acts of loving, unselfish devotion, that we see often in humble life and are what makes life so sweet to all of us.

Many of the faces that we see each day are plain, dull and uninteresting to look upon, but who can tell what patience, kindness and thoughtfulness lies latent within their souls?

We have only time to mention one more variety of heroism. All are familiar from earliest childhood with the touching story of Casibianca.

"The boy stood on the burning deck,
Whence all but him had fled;
The flames that lit the battle's wreck
Shone o'er him round the dead"

That was long ago. Such instances of sublime and steadfast courage are not so rare in these latter days. Witness, "The brave though childlike forms" of these timid gentle maidens who come tremblingly foward onto this stage to-night, and with fainting heart and failing breath deliver before this cultured and critical audience a poor little insignificant production of their brain, dignified by the name of Graduating Essay.

The Duty of Self-Culture.

M. EDITH PILBEAM.

To become all that is possible in excellence, efficiency and capacity for good, every human being is obliged to make the most of himself. The work may be called self culture. There are two reasons for the obligation: first, the real value of every man's being,—the absolute good it involves,—and second, its value in relation to the good of others.

The work pertains to every department of our nature,—the moral and spiritual, the intellectual and emotional, the æsthetic and physical. The true ideal is a harmonious development of all the faculties and susceptibilities. Both personal welfare and usefulness require that duty haye the first place.

There are many things to be held in subordination. Among them, health is all-important. Without it learning and culture lose their power and their value. Money is another factor and time may be generously devoted to the work and may bring forth richer results. The inability to secure the advantages of schools will not be an excuse, as there are many ways of improvement, and the more difficult the attainment the more useful it will prove. Some seek a course of education of only material advantages, in preference to one that enlarges and elevates. We can not at will summon thoughts that are desirable and dismiss those that are not, but can we not occupy our minds with things that aim to purify and elevate?

Perfection of character consists in placing reason first and is followed by such movements of the feelings as will correspond with the occasion. To this result conspire self-knowledge, self-government and self-culture. There is a somewhat prevalent idea that high culture brings weakness in the sense of inability to endure hardship; that increased sensitiveness to the annoyances of life indicates inability to bear up against them. The idea is not well founded. The cultivated man has resources which are not dependent on mere outward conditions. He finds relief where another finds nothing to meet his wants. He has strength to master the difficulty.

Women, refined by culture, endure many things which others cannot. Young men, brought up in the midst of refinement and trained in schools, endure the hardships of the camp and field, while the rugged but uncultured are often broken down by disease and die. Life, by reason of this culture, is richer and far more desirable.

There is a form of culture that brings weakness instead of strength and there seems to be the point where civilization or refinement ceases to be an advantage and becomes a burden. True refinement consists in reasonably providing for the susceptibilities of the person. False culture generates unreasonable wants and accepts the burdens which they impose. Our physical powers are given us to use and improve, hence the general duty of self-culture extends to these. It is a duty that ends only with life, perhaps not then; and when all that is possible has been accomplished, there will yet remain enough of infirmity and defect to save from self-exaltation and to test the forbearance of friends.

Class History.

EDITH A. VEDDER.

As class historian I believe it is my duty to relate the various exploits and great achievements of our class. But I acknowledge my task is more difficult than I anticipated. Macauley says "history is a romance founded on facts." Were I Hume, Carlyle or Macauley I might presume to write history. But as I am not I must content myself with relating facts with the romance.

The Class of '90 consists of twenty-six members, seventeen girls and nine boys. Our average age is eighteen. The youngest member of the class is going sixteen and the oldest, twenty-two. On further inquiry, I found that the average size of our shoes is five. The smallest size is 2½ and the largest 8. The average size of our gloves, I was unable to obtain, as some of the girls had none. Furthermore eleven of us have gray eyes, nine have blue eyes and six have brown eyes. Nineteen of us have brown hair and the remaining six have light hair, varying from flaxen to light brown. Although we can boast of no bright and shining light, as well as the class of '89, we can say we have been faithfully guided by one during the past two years.

It was only four short years ago that fifty-two young people entered the High School, each one impressed with his own importance.

But notwithstanding this importance, the years '87 and '88 passed into eternity without our achieving immortal fame. During this time our class gradually diminished until there were only thirty-one Juniors.

With the exception of six, all of them are here to-night. One, I believe, joined the class this year, thus making our number twenty-six.

Perhaps we may attribute the exceedingly large number of our class to the class spirit developed in our Junior meetings. In 1889 we organized and elected our officers thinking to become more enthusiastic in our school work, and to impress each other with the desire to complete his course of study. In this, I think we have been successful. For when the time came to part, it was not without feelings of sadness that we bade each other goodbye. The future was a sealed book. Would we ever meet again? If we did meet, would we still be friends?

So it was with pleasure that we assembled in the A room, in September 1889, and found there nearly all of our former classmates. We were confronted by new teachers, but although we regretted the loss of our former teachers we do not the less love and honor our present teachers.

Perhaps the most enjoyable, as well as the most instructive duties of our last year were of the Lyceum, an institution in which pleasure and profit were blended. What eloquence was displayed! What profound thought were presented to us! Perhaps some of the participants may yet be as famous as Pericles or Demosthenes. But be that as it may; our thoughts linger on the present rather than on the future. As a class we are together for the last time.

"The end has come, as come it must
To all things; in these sweet June days
The teacher and the scholar part
Their parting feet to separate ways.

The Night Brings Out the Stars.

ETTA CODDINGTON.

On the fourth day of creation, when the sun, after a glorious but solitary course, went down in the evening and darkness began to gather over the face of the uninhabited globe, all ready arrayed in exuberance of vegetation and prepared, by the diversity of land and water, for the abode of uncreated animals and man,—a star, single and beautiful, rolled forth into the firmament. Trembling with wonder and delight in new-found existence she looked abroad and behold nothing in heaven or on earth resembling herself.

But she was not long alone. Now one, then another, here a third and there a fourth resplendent companion had joined her, till, light after light stealing through the gloom, in the lapse of an hour the whole world was brilliantly bespangled.

And so it was, when our country was in a perilous condition and all was darkness and gloom, that a star, great and grand, came forth to cast a ray of light over all, and this he succeeded in doing, for no brighter star ever shone than George Washington, the father of our country. Much did he do to cast light over all and to banish darkness from the universe. At first he appeared to be alone and struggling dimly in the darkness, but as the gloom became more dense the brighter this star shone, and soon other bright stars began to appear, one by one, and they timidly looked around upon the vast multitude that crowded through the dark serenity of space, and filled it with life and glory, until the grand constellation appeared that gave us this glorious Republic, this land of Christian liberty.

Had there been no despotic oppression, no suppression of freedom of thought or action, there would have been no darkness to have brought out the brightness of these stars whose luster, undimmed by time, is as bright to day as it was one hundred years ago, and will continue to shine as long as this Republic stands.

Again darkness gathered over this land of ours and another star came forth on whom all lives, all thoughts, all hopes were centered, and on whom every eye was cast. This was that wonderful star—Abraham Lincoln. Had it not been for the gloom and desolation which hovered around there would have been no night to have brought out the shining of this star, and also the brightness of that other great star, whose memory is as fresh in the minds of the people—Ulysses S. Grant. Gen. Grant was but an unknown tanner until during this darkness he began to shine forth with many others, and no star ever rose and set without leaving its influence somewhere. They may cease but their brightness shall never fade away nor their glory be quenched in the light of peace.

Thus will it be with our army,—if when night throws her mantle about us and all seems dark and dreary, we step forth and help form the great constellation that gathers around the midnight throne, we, too, may be classed among the brilliant stars that night bringeth forth.

Prophecy.

MARGARET SPAFFORD.

One drowsy afternoon in June
I fell asleep to a robin's tune;
But scarce had slumber closed my eyes,
Before, from the far northern skies,
The mighty Mudjekeewis came;
Down the street and across the lane,
Raving, raging, moaning, sighing,
Awoke me, and in accents dying,
Said to me in a voice austere,
"Oh, thou wise prophetess! modern seer!
To thee, a mortal, it has been decreed
The fate of mankind thou shalt read.
But I know it is true in your secret heart,
You deride our power of the superior art,
And for this, like the Cassandra of old,
No one shall believe what you have told.
The wisest, best and safest plan,
To be able to read the fate of man
Is by the euchre deck. The diamond king
Will reveal of the youth some wonderful thing.
And the queen of hearts will tell of the dames;
Besides you must have high, low, jack and the (game.
On the 26th of June, that you'll make no mistake
I'll be by your side in invisible state."
So now, kind friends, if you'll lend me your ears,
I'll tell you their fate like the grand old seers.
First, Emilie, a ship and some water—what can (it be?
Oh! She is transporting the negroes back o'er (the sea.
Mame Crowell will give up enjoyments and the (dance,
And sedately settle at a nunnery in France.
Now for Belle, rolls of paper, let me see!
Oh! The President of United States she will be;
And in her short and brilliant inaugural address
Which she will be compelled to say in four min- (utes or less,
She'll be expected to take a whole nation down,
Like she once had to astonish a small country (town.
Quite content in a happy home I see Grace,
Thinking to rule a family, not a nation, is her (place.
A book of quotations has made Emma Kingun's (renown,
And the sweet girl graduate of a certain town,
Can for her essay without research or look,
Quote popular authors from this wonderful book.
Woe is she! Woe is she! Poor Marguerite Haire!
Hopes to be blasted in one young and fair!
On this eventful eve she will slumber by the hum
Of the voices, and a second sleeping beauty (become.
Ah! 'tis quite sad that this edifice great
Will all have to fall in a ruined state.
Now for the boys, glory and fame awaits them (not;
They belong to the wrong sex for such a lot.
Of course, they're married and settled in some (nook,
Tending the baby or scolding the cook.
The two Robs, I am happy to relate,
Are real content in this blissful state;
But Robe will quarrel with his wife every day,
And I'm afraid she will beat him in a horrible (way.
I have now completed my inevitable task;
Expressions of incredulity show it's useless to (ask;
Am I believed? Ah, no! Mudjekeewis was true,
So I'll bid you and the art forever adieu.

The Worm in the Oak.

RUSSELL H. ADKINS.

From her cot behind the mountains rose the morn, with glory crowned,
Filling all the earth with brightness, gladdening
everything around;
Waking every living creature, heralding her
maker's sway,
Calling birds and beasts and people to their labors for the day.

On the mountain tops tall pine trees stretched away far out of sight;
Cedars grew there; swaying hemlocks beckened
at th' approach of light;
Through the elms down in the valley robins sang among the leaves;
And the weeping willows even dried their tears—forgot their griefs.

But the king of day revealed no grander tree
among the throng
Than an oak of many winters, towering loftily and strong Toward the sky, and bearing acorns hung 'mid leath'ry foliage,
Where the squirrels loved to ramble, and the winds to howl and rage.

Thus for ages had it stood there, braving winter's stormy blasts,
Stretching to the clouds its branches, like a brig
with full rigged masts;
As it plows the bill'wy waters and withstands
the rising gale,
While its masts transfix the heavens and the storm fills every sail.

Up the mountain came the woodmen to their work at dawn of day, Bearing axes on their shoulders, chatting in a lively way.
Now with measured strokes and heavy, loud and clear the forest rang,
Where before the squirrels chattered, where the thrushes sweetly sang.

So they felled the stately pine trees and the willows bowing low;
So the great oak yielded groaning, struck by pow'rful blow on blow,— Victor, he, of many battles, now his hour had come to die,—
Lay there quiv'ring on the hillside, held his arms outstretched on high.

Then they hewed the trunk in pieces, stripped the branches from its sides,
Bared the firm and lasting timbers which the rough bark clothes and hides;
Did not find the tiny worm-hole burrowed half way up the tree;
But 'twas nothing to be mentioned, hardly large enough to see.

Sent the timber to the dockyards, where were fashioned of the pine
Masts and floors, and of the willow steamer
paddles strong and fine;
Of the elm the keel they wrought but, for it will not split nor soak;
But the ribs the sides and bottom, were of tough and solid oak.

Now the steamer, richly laden, filled with various useful stores
To exchange for tea and rubber, bound for India's sunny shores,
Trav'ling on in mid Atlantic, cut the waters with her keel,
Dashed the spray in whirling eddies from the paddles on her wheel.

Toward the rising sun she glided o'er the waste of waters wide,
Past the Azores, through Gibraltar—rocky capes on either side—
Entered then the fatal sea where Greeks and Romans used to trade,
Where the Romans conquered Carthage and her fort in ashes laid.

Here terrific South winds met her off the Eastern coast of Spain,
Roared and bellowed round her bulwarks; but the ship in proud disdain
Held her course against their fury, as huge Hercules most bold
Used to grapple with the giants, and subdue those pests of old.

So the vessel, madly plunging, still withstood
the angry storm;
But, alas! its fury growing, struck that timber
where the worm,
Gnawing with untiring labor 'neath the waters
in the gloom,
Boring through the oaken bottom, had in silence
sealed the doom
Of the all unconscious sailors, and prepared a watry tomb.

Now the billows, dashing violently on to seize their prey,
Forced an entrance thro' this loophole, swept the riddled piece away.
When the sailors heard the splashing in the treach'rous hold below;
Men were sent to find the leak, and stop the waters' dang'rous flow.

But the vessel rolled too wildly, and their work was all in vain;
So they went to man the pumps, and worked away with might and main;
Though the briny sea kept rushing in to fill the spacious hold;
And their hearts at length began to fail these seamen strong and bold.

For they might as well have tried to find the leakage in the sky,
Stop the pouring rain in olden time descending from on high,
When 'mid lightning flash and thunder Heaven's king with mighty hand,
Through those forty days of deluge, swept the ocean o'er the land

See! at every plunge the steamboa sinks yet deeper in the sea!
Sad it is to hear the wailing of the vessel's company;
For the waves rush in in torrents, and all hope is well nigh past;
Loud the surges roar, and angrily the wind howls by the mast.

Thus three days the storm kept on with blackened sky and blinding rain;
When at length its force abated, and the sea
grew calm again;
On a broken wreck the stars looked down
throughout the awful night,
While fair Luna's silv'ry radiance sooothed the melancholy sight.

When the sun rose in the morning from his cradle tinged with red,
All the rocky coast was lined with spars and remnants of the dead;
Chests of food and mangled corpses, timbers wrapped in seaweed green,—
Yes, and there among the ruins that worm-eaten piece was seen!

Oh! ye mariners who sail upon the stormy sea of life,
Where clouds lower and waves threaten—clouds of evil, waves of strife,— Guard against the little worm that slyly gnaws
the oak away
And subjects a noble character to ruin and decay.

Envy, pride, or false ambition, hiding deeply in man's heart,
By its secret, silent working, plays a most destructive part;
Spoiling all the strength and beauty of the proudest intellect,
Till the most majestic bark is by some breaking billow wrecked.

When you go, my happy classmates, from the pleasures of this day
Forth to meet the world's stern duties, then whatever you essay,
If some stately structure rear, or steer through some tempestuous sea,
Build of timbers strong and sound; beware the worm within the tree.

What Spectacles Do You Wear?

BELLE JOSLYN.

Standing on the bank of Niagara, you may, by the use of bits of colored glass, greatly change the appearance of the falls. Through the red glass it seems a repulsive torrent of blood; the yellow shows you a flood of sunshine; while the blue gives the water the appearance of a gigantic bluing-tub, reminding one forcibly of "blue" Monday. Through the white glass only can you see the true beauty of the torrent; it gives the one correct view.

Emerson says: "Our moods are lenses coloring the world with as many different hues." If this be true —that our moods are our spectacles— may I ask you, "What Spectacles Do You Wear?"

The world may be divided into three classes of people, according to the color of the spectacles they wear.

First there are the people who wear blue spectacles. All the persons belonging to this class must have been born on "blue" Monday—at any rate when they enter the world each of them is equipped with a pair of blue spectacles. Their sole enjoyment lies in a state of misery; they will not believe that they have any friends and they live in constant expectation of disaster and ruin. To them life is unendurable and they generally make it a burden to their friends. Through their spectacles the whole world assumes a deep indigo hue. Poor creatures! They are to be pitied since their folly brings its punishment with it.

The second class is composed of people who wear rose-colored spectacles. These are the persons who will follow some Will-'o-the-Wisp, with untiring diligence until it plainly shows itself to be a fraud, and then are ready to have implicit faith in the next one that appears. To this class belong the men who are trying to invent impossible things, while their wives generally belong to the class who wear the blue spectacles. To the persons wearing rose-colored spectacles, the world assumes a rosy hue, a very pleasing color and such persons are apt to be satisfied with appearances without enquiring further.

To the third class belong the people who wear white or clear spectacles. Since their spectacles are not tinted, they are enabled to see clearly all objects about them. Persons who are cool and collected, and can judge without prejudice, will be found wearing the white spectacles. It will readily be seen that these persons have a great advantage over the people who wear the blue or the rose-colored spectacles. So you see it is highly important that each person discover thro' what lenses he commonly views the world, and if, upon examination, he finds that he has been wearing the blue or rose-colored hues, let him at once seek a pair of white spectacles. Since it is such a vital question—I ask you again—"What Spectacles Do You Wear?"

Valedictory.

J. R. HOSMER.

Kind friends and hearers; your large attendance and the interest you have shown to night has been the parting encouragement of our school life Tecumseh. Your many encouraging words have helped us on with our studies and to bear the hardships of school life.

Members of the board of education; words can not express our feelings towards you for you assistance in preparing us for the great battle of life which we are just entering. This great strife has its victories and its defeats and I hope that we have started on the road that will lead us to success.

We will trust that we have followed the courses that you have so wisely laid down for us, as well as the classes that have preceded, but we can not be the judges, as all graduates have an exalted opinion of their knowledge.

We owe great respect to our teachers who acted so wisely at the helm of their different departments in steering us around through the stormy parts of our school life. "Patience ceases to be a virtue" but it was not so with them. They overlooked in a measure our faults, so that school life and school work has been a pleasure rather than a burden.

Class mates; how shall we ever repay them? Only one way is left open, and that is to put in practice what they have striven to teach us. It may not be the lot of all of us to go deeper into the sciences and other studies that have interested us here, but those who can must strive to reach the topmost round of the ladder.

As we end to night our connections which have been preserved through much trial and tribulation and go forth each to take his own way through life; is it any wonder that our hearts should be saddened at the thought of separation, with only pleasant recollections to remain with us?

Our paths may be widely separated and our trials vastly different, but we hope that our motto is true, "For life, not for school, we learn."

President A. W. Mills presented the diplomas in a brief address, the benediction was pronounced, and Tecumseh's banner Commencement was ended. It will long be remembered as a red letter day in the history of our Public Schools.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

Arsenic and Potash Three Times a Day for Twenty-Five Years.

I have been taking S. S. S. (Swift's Specific), and feel it my duty to state its results, that others who are similarly affected may profit by my expense. I was relieved of there sufferings. I had suffered for a long, long time with what the doctors called Herpes, an eruption of the skin, forming scales and blotches which was horrible to endure. Under the advice of physicians I took 30 drops of Fowler's Solution of Arsenic every day for 25 years besides many other kinds of medicines, without a cure. I have been taking S. S. S. for about two months, and the eruption and unpleasant symptoms have all disappeared, and I am continuing it to completely root it out of my blood, which I am confident it will do for others, for thousands of such cases all over the country which resist all other treatment I have lieved hear in my present business for 22 years.

The best medical writers claim that the succeseful remedy nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past obliges us to admit that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symtoms yield to it.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

DODD'S CATARRH CURE.

LOCAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT.

In order to cure catarrh it is necessary to allay the inflammation of the irritated membranes with a soothing application, cleanse the head of the plugging mucous secretions, and heal the discharging ulcers For cold in the head and nasal catarrh Dodds' local treatment does this without the aid of snuff, douches or fumes. If the disease has extended downwards affecting the bronchial tubes or lungs, digestion and blood, the internal treatment both removes from the system the scattered poison, and by its building-up properties assists nature in restoring the impaired parts. Send for our book treating on catarrh. FOSTER, MILBURN & CO., proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y. Sold in Tecumseh, Mich., by C. A. Wright & Co., druggists.

Every Two and a Half Minutes

The blood makes a circuit of the body every 2½ minutes, delivering nutriment and taking back waste matter to be filtered out by the liver and kidneys and removed from the body through the bowels and the urinary secretion. Any stoppage or obstruction of this process may produce various forms of disease, such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Headache, Debility, and bad blood with its multiplied evils (boils, blotches, pimples, sores, eruptions, abscesses and the like). When such obstructions exist as evidenced by the presence of complaints similar to those just mentioned, the best medicine to use is Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks the secretions; removing all impure and effete matter through the proper channels. By restoring healthy action of the stomach, liver, and kidneys and bowels, B B. B. removes all impurities of the blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

St Jacobs Oil Cures

PROMPTLY AND PERFECTLY

BRUISES, SWELLINGS, CUTS, &c.

A bruise is a contusion; swellings are inflammations; cuts and wounds are alike disturbances to natural action, through which the veins are clogged, circulation impeded, congestion sets in and pains ensue. Nature is impatient—it tries to right itself and pain intensifies. Bruises and swellings need a soothing influence, but in cuts and wounds hardly any one would pour a liquid remedy into a gaping wound. So soon as nature brings the parts together, almost at once,

St Jacobs Oil soothes clears away obstructions, heals the injured tissues and restores. Used according to directions, it helps nature and cures

PROMPTLY AND PERMANENTLY.

Mr. Louis Rush, 49 Preston Street, Detroit, Mich., says: "Pitching ball I sprained and bruised my arm; two applications of St. Jacobs Oil cured me."

Mr. Gustav Nauwald, Jr. (Tivydale), Fredericksburg, Texas, writes, August 20, 1888: "I was badly cut with a scythe; half bottle St. Jacobs Oil cured me." IT CURES.

LAW OF THE SABBATH.

LESSON I, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JULY 6.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xiii, 10-17—Commit Verses 15-17—Golden Text, Matt. xii, 12—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After encouraging them with the fact that it was their Father's good pleasure to give them the Kingdom, and that therefore He would surely see to their present need in the small matters of food and raiment, He commanded them to be watchful and diligent, expecting persecution while they improved the present time of grace. He then turned to the people with an admonition to repent, and by the parable of the fruitless fig tree taught them that they were spared as a nation only because of intercession, and through the long suffering of God.

10. "And He was teaching in one of the synagogues on the Sabbath." In His early ministry we read of Him that "As His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day;" and although He knew so well the hypocrisy of those who taught in the synagogues, yet He does not depart from His usual custom. Because there are false teachers, and many calling themselves Christians who are only hypocrites, this is no reason why others should forsake the house of God; but simply a strong reason why those who know and love the Truth should be always in their place and stand boldly for the Truth, both in public and in private.

11. "And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years." Not so bad as the man at the pool of Bethesda who had an infirmity thirty-eight years (John v, 5), but bad enough surely. In Luke v, 15; vii, 21; viii, 2, we read of many who had been healed by Him of their infirmities, and it may be that this woman had heard through some of them of His wonderful power and love, or she may have been, notwithstanding her infirmity, a regular attendant at the synagogue and a true worshiper of the One God. The word translated "infirmity" signifies also "without strength" or weakness, sickness, disease—and it is the word used in reference to our Saviour in Matt. viii, 17, where it is written: "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." In Him is health of body and soul for all the world.

12. "And when Jesus saw her, He called her to Him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity." When He called, she evidently came; He is still calling "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest;" but how few seem to come. This woman was conscious of her helplessness and earnestly desired release, therefore she came readily. Sinners, though bowed down and unable to lift themselves up, are too often unconscious of it, do not think they are sick, and therefore heed not the physician. Oh for a deep conviction of sin and a realization of our utter helplessness. Lazarus stood at the grave's mouth alive and well, but he was bound hand and foot with grave clothes so that Jesus said unto them, "Loose him and let him go" (John xi, 44). Many Christians are bound hand and foot by some besetting sin, some earthward tendencies, from which in vain they seek to free themselves, but Jesus is able, and if they only knew the meaning of "Thine is the power" they would look to Him and be set free for service.

13. "And He laid His hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God." His word was sufficient, for "He cast out the spirit with His word;" and "By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made" (Matt. viii, 16; Ps. xxxiii, 6). His word, without His actual presence, was sufficient, as in the case of the centurion's servant and the nobleman's son (Matt. viii; John iv). Yet He often used His hands in giving forth His power, as in Luke iv, 40; v, 13; viii, 54, etc. After His resurrection and ascension we find Him in Patmos laying his right hand upon John and saying, "Fear not." To every true believer He is saying, "I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not, I will help thee." Concerning the ungodly He says, "All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people" (Rev. i, 17; Isa. xli, 13; Rom. x, 21).

"And immediately she was made straight." How quickly the eighteen years' infirmity flees, and just as quickly was the man healed who was thirty-eight years sick. Neither infirmity, nor disease, nor death itself can abide in His presence, for He is The Life. That which neither skill, nor money, nor human effort can accomplish, He instantly does with a word or a touch. He is the same Jesus still and there is no necessity for any of His redeemed to be under the power of the devil (Luke x, 19).

"And glorified God." She either believed that Jesus was God or that God had given Him this power, and she glorified God in Him. Paul writes to the Galatians: "It pleased God to reveal His Son in me; and they glorified God in me" (Gal. i, 15, 16, 24). If we glorified God because of all He has done for us, our lives would be a continued thanksgiving.

14. "And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation." Here is a man more sick spiritually than this woman was physically. He is truly bowed down, and cannot lift himself up, but he does not know it. He is like the tree in the parable, a fruitless cumberer of the ground spared by the mercy of God. Satan in him grows indignant because some of his goods have been spoiled. A piece of work that Satan has had in hand eighteen years has been suddenly scattered to the winds, and this child of the devil grows angry.

"Because that Jesus had healed on the Sabbath day." This holy man (in his own estimation) was so jealous for the sanctity of the Sabbath day that he would not on any account have a sufferer relieved, but it was all right for him to get angry. I once saw an officer on a ferryboat rebuke a man for whistling on the Lord's day, while he himself was running his boat for ordinary traffic and collecting fares as on any other day. There is much straining out gnats and swallowing camels in religious matters.

15. "The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the Sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?" A hypocrite is one who conceals his real motives and professes to be what he is not. This man professed to have a great reverence for the Sabbath, while his real motive was his hatred of Christ. He little thought that Christ read his inmost thoughts and knew well his real motive.

16. "And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day?" The first verse in the New Testament calls Jesus the Son of Abraham; and Gal. iii, 16, says that "To Abraham and his seed (that is, Christ) were the promises made." Here stood the seed of Abraham, the Christ, but unacknowledged, despised, hated by this hypocritical son of Abraham who gloried in the name, but was in reality no son of Abraham at all (John viii, 39). Here also is a poor afflicted woman, a true child of Abraham, yet despised by this proud Pharisee, who has been convicted by Jesus of esteeming an ox or an ass better than her.

I was first taken with sharp pains in the lower part of my bowels in the region of the bladder. Shortly blood appeared mixed with my urine, and a few weeks later I had an attack of gravel. I tried a number of doctors. One said it was gravel, another and another stone in the kidneys. For three months I was under the care of an eminent doctor at Albany, but constantly growing worse, went home to die. At this time I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and am now robust and strong. A remedy which can do this for one so near death as I was should be known everywhere. I hope this statement will cause others afflicted as I was to use the Remedy.—C. W. Brown, Petersburgh, N. Y.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Miner Miller's health is very poorly.

Grandma Britton is quite sick at M. Yates.

Joe Harrington has recovered from his severe tussel with the erysipelas.

The families of Chas. Barrett, Geo. Kempf and C. H. Miller are having the scarlet fever, but all are doing well at present.

The fate of the late free coinage bill is causing many wry faces. Although not a statesmanlike financial measure it was an improvement on the present Wall-st. contraction scheme.

Politics are not in full bloom, still the buds are starting. The late invalid pension act is probably all that will be done in the pension line—except special claims, during the session The majority of soldiers are not satisfied. They wanted a service pension, which in the present stage of the game would be more equitable.

Fine weather, and the growing crops are looking well, with the prospect of another year of over production, and consequent hard times. Farmers are divided on the price of wool, some are selling while others are holding on for better prices under protection—believing that factories can pay 10cts more than market price for foreign wool, also 10cts. more than the market price for domestic wool and then make a cloth that will compete with foreign cloth at the market price. Such is all tariff logic. People are beginning to learn that a tariff is a tax on the people of the government imposing it. One nation cannot levy a tax on another nation, it is beyond their jurisdiction. But they can embarrass trade and put up prices on imports and corresponding home articles thro' a tariff and its accompanying trusts, and lower prices on labor, agricultural and exclusively home productions, by contracting the volume of money. And by pandering to the whole liquor traffic with all its concurrent vices and the tariff trusts, in running the political machine, hope to remain in power, and requite by increasing offices, raising salaries, issuing bonds and doling out appropriations to the favored few, thereby enriching the classes at the expense of the masses.

There was no great enthusiasm on the Fourth. Most all farmers and laborers spent the day in hay and corn field. Some went to Adrian, a few to the lakes and others to Saline. The fireworks at Macon and York in the evening, also dances at York, Saline and Milan were fairly well patronized.

There was quite a celebration at Robert T. Easlick's, July 3d, 1890, it being his 20th marriage anniversary, where neighbors and friends to the number of 90 spent a very enjoyable afternoon and evening. A large awning, or bowry was constructed along side of the sitting room, 14 by 36 feet, as a dining and promenade hall. Supper was served to the 90 guests about 5 o'clock. In the evening Olds & Bacon's orchestra favored the gathering with some fine music, and the people old and young, marched and countermarched up and down the bowery in grand shape till way after bed time. As tokens of esteem a fine lot of presents were presented, a partial list of which, from memory, is as follows:

Hanging lamp—Grandma Easlick.
Base rocker—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Easlick, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Olds, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Stimpson, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Olds.
Pair towels—Mrs. Wm. Hendershot.

Towel—Mrs. Mary Davenport.
Pair vaces—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilkins.
Dress pattern—Mrs. Alfred Lewis.
Paper Holder and Perpetual Calendar—Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Easlick.

By means of this calendar it was learned that the recipients were married on Sunday, July 3d. 1870, and that on Monday the 4th there was a great celebration in Saline over the building of the Toledo and AnnArbor railroad.

Cold, cough, coffin is what philosophers term "a logical sequence." One is very liable to follow the other; but by curing the cold with a dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, the cough will be stopped and the coffin not needed—just at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Broadbent and Mr. and Mrs. Bowman drove out from Clinton and spent the Fourth at R. Taylor's.

Mrs. Eugene Norcross is entertaining her mother and sister. They arrived Saturday evening and, we understand, expect to remain several weeks.

Miss Nina Allen is quite serfously ill and her many friends are very anxious about her. Miss Addie Lamkin, too, has been in poor health since her attack of quinsy several weeks ago.

Franklin sent a goodly delegation to Wampler's Lake, Friday. Mr. Munger and family attended the Prohibition gathering at Adrian, and the Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club improved the day by a picnic in Clem Bramble's grove.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Harvesting is the order of the day now.

Dave Swan has moved his market into his new store.

Bert Gillen has recovered from the effects of his wagon wheel bruises.

Mrs. Will Osgood has returned from Morenci much improved in health.

The masons, Frank and Jun Pocklington, have got the walls for Will Osgood's house completed.

Geo. Exelby has built a brick cellar back of his hotel, which is a great improvement these warm days.

Lime Hause is bound to get ahead of the lightning and has placed lightning rods on his barn and house.

The 4th was observed here by a basket picnic in Britton's grove, followed by playing foot ball and base ball and the firing of crackers and small cannon. There was but one accident during the day. Will Larabee, in firing the cannon, got his face filled with powder, but he was fortunate enough in not losing his eyesight.

DEATH OF JOSEPH EXELBY.

On Wednesday, June 25th, 1890, at 2 P. M., after a painful illness of ten weeks, Joseph Exelby quietly and gently fell asleep, to wake no more in this world, for his soul has passed away to the world beyond the river of death, to dwell in palaces not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Oh grave! where is thy victory? Oh death! where is thy sting?

The deceased was loved and respected by all who knew him and Mrs. Exelby and her family have the deepest sympathy of all the citizens of Britton and vicinity in their bereavement His family has lost a kind father and a loving husband, and Britton has lost one whose push and energy have helped to make our village what it is to-day. He always seemed to be happy when with his family, as he was seldom seen on our streets in the evening.

The deceased was born in the township of Ridgeway, October 14, 1834, and was 55 years, 8 months and 11 days old at the time of his death. Nov. 18th, 1855, he married Miss Letitia Linn, daughter of Samuel and Abigail Linn, natives of New York state, by whom he leaves five sons.

Politically Mr. Exelby was a solid Democrat, having held the office of township treasurer, besides being most prominent in local affairs. He built the first brick block in Britton and also built two stores of the new block erected two years ago.

The funeral of deceased took place at the Ridgeway church on Friday, June 27. The last sad rites were conducted by the Rev. James Lowry, of Ridgeway, assisted by the Rev. Jas. Wright, of Britton. The services were solemn and impressive and the many eyes dimmed with tears and the many broken utterances showed only too well that Joe will be missed from among us and when the grass has grown over his grave and the years roll on he will still be numbered as one whose word was his bond, and as one who never refused a helping hand to the poor or unfortunate. But now he is dead, why should we weep? Can we bring him back again? We can go to him. He can not return to us.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Rainy wether and haying combined don't agree with most farmers around here.

The Free Methodists held a camp meeting near here last week and part of this.

Errit Spear fell from a cherry tree, last week, and broke an arm in two places.

There was a very good attendance at the quarterly meeting held here last week.

Frank Wood's little girl, Mabel, was playing in the road, last Thursday, when a horse that was passing near, ran at her and struck her in the back with both fore feet, tearing her dress off her, and injuring her somewhat, but she is better at present.

Good music is seldom, or never heard around here; when the ladies go to Adrian and happen to meet people on the way that can make music, they stop right in the hot sun and hire them to play for them, even if the thermometer is a hundred in the shade.

Excursionists to Devils Lake will find Uncle Fred Deuel's steamer, G. A. R., at the dock bound for Allen's Hotel, north shore. Trip around the lake and dinner for only 60 cents. Take the G. A. R. "Handling the Word of God deceitfully"

One of the numerous family of book agents has lately been "doing" Franklin and is perhaps still at work in the vicinity. Better look out for him. The book he carries ("Bible Readings" it is called) is not what he would have his subscribers to beleive; a good orthodox volume, uplifting in tendency and safe for young people to read. It is an adventist book, the poison in it cunningly concealed, but none the less deadly.

Of course any one has a right to believe that way, if he can lay aside common sense sufficently and has the right, also to try to convince others, provided he does so honestly. But that is not the way these agents of adventism work, in any case that has come to this writer's knowledge. Instead they point out passages on which all christians agree, but are very careful that you shall not see anything which shows the real purpose and character of their books. Truth never needs to be bolstered with a lie, and when a man deceives you into buying something very different from what it is represented to be it is very evident he is not working for the truth.

This and kindred tricks, on which adventists rely to make proselytes will not help them among well-informed and thinking people. Many however, have never had their attention called to the subject, and may find their faith unsettled before discovering that they have been duped. It would be well for all of us before buying any book to look at the title page and see if it is published in Battle Creek, the headquarters of Adventism. Then if it is, and we still wish to purchase, we will at least do so with our eyes open.

OBITUARY.

Jane Heaney, aged 87 years, died at the home of her son, John Heaney, in Raisin, on the 19th of June, 1890.

The deceased was born in Antrim county, Ireland, in 1803, and was brought to this country by her parents when she was three years old. She lived in Philadelphia until 1827, when she married and moved with her husband to Batsto, N. Y. In the fall of 1840 she, with her husband and family, came to Michigan. They lived in Raisin until the following spring, when they bought a farm on Sec. 1, in the township of Tecumseh, where the deceased lived until within eighteen months of her death. Her husband died 15 years ago. After his death she kept house for her oldest son, Hugh Heaney, until he died December 6th, 1888. She being no longer able to bear up under the infirmities of age, her only remaining son, John Heaney, of Raisin, took her to his home and cared for her during the remainder of her days. She received during her decline every attention that kind hearts could bestow upon her, and although her life journey was a long and a weary one, her last days were her best days. She passed quietly away surrounded by her son's family and Mrs. Geo. Bryan, her youngest daughter. Her work is finished and we trust she has entered into that rest which remaineth for the people of God.

INFORMATION WANTED.

EDITOR HERALD:—I would like to inquire if the Alumni Association of the Tecumseh Union School has ceased to exist, or if it lacks qualified officers? For three years in succession I have received no card of invitation to the annual exercises and learn that there are several others who have had a similar experience. Some of these members live at a distance and some of them live in the village. If the society still exists, that is, if it has not passed wholly into the control of the honorary members, the corresponding secretary would do well to learn the duties of his office and act in accordance with the duties thereon imposed. It would be a pleasure as well as a privilege for the old members to know of the society's prosperity, financial condition and general welfare.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JULY 10

If the Force bill should become a law, the South would become more solid than ever. Mark the prediction.

The Republican revolutionists are playing "high old jinks" down in Washington now. But the people will have their innings next November, and then look out.

Congressman Allen voted for the Force bill and also spoke it its favor. He took occasion to say, however, that his district did not need the law, that there had never been an illegal vote cast and counted for Congress in the second district of Michigan. Thanks, Captain, for small favors.

The World's Fair has been chosen at Chicago, and a better selection could not have been made. Jackson Park with a large section of lake front adjoining is the site chosen. It will be sufficiently easy of access and the fair will have plenty of room to spread itself.

The U. S. Senate did one thing for which they deserve all praise. They respected the rights and wishes of the people in passing a free coinage silver bill. They have two more chances to show their patriotism. Let them defeat the McKinley tariff bill and the odious election bill, and the people will condone a good many shortcomings in other directions.

A movement is on foot to organize a new political combination to be composed of the Farmers' Alliance, P. of I, Prohibition and Labor parties. An effort will be made to combine these elements and nominate a fusion State ticket.

The census enumeration in Detroit seems to have been a veritable farce. The papers are calling upon the Common Council to take steps for recount. Wm. Duncan, a resident of Miami Avenue., canvassed the west side of that street and found nine houses, containing 73 inmates, that had been omitted entirely.

Seventeen years ago, a Force bill was before Congress, no more infamous than the present Lodge bill. Mr. Blaine was then Speaker and he killed the measure. There is no more right or reason for the passage of such a law now than there was then.

The Democrats of Pennsylvania did a good work at their state convention last week. By the nomination of Pattison & Black, the ticket which was elected in 1882, they have mede victory possible even in that Quay-ridden state.

The Republican party is far from being a happy family at present. With the Eastern manufacturers calling for free raw material, the Western farmers demanding a reduced tariff, and the Southern republicans opposing a force bill, boss Reed is having his hands full to keep the faithful in line.

Congressman Ewart, a Republican from North Carolina, took a bold stand against the revolutionary election bill. In fact most of the Southern Republican members opposed it. Mr. Ewart made a vigorous speech, in which this passage appeared:

"Unfortunately, politics has come to such a pass that under the rule of King Caucus men vote for measures, that deep down in their hearts, they do not believe in. They know, deep down in their hearts, that this is as damnable and vicious a piece of legislation as ever was put on the statute books. As to the negroes' political rights—speaking for my own State—no Republican in the State, black or white, is prevented from casting his vote. The elections there are absolutely fair.

A cog has slipped somewhere in the high tariff machine. The high taxers told us that the low price of wool two years ago was caused by the Mills bill. Then why is it that the passage of the McKinley bill has'nt raised the price of wool this season? Will some of our high tariff farmers please rise and explain?

The Chicago Herald has begun the erection of a building for its future home, which while not of the sky-scraping order, is claimed to be the best planned newspaper office for convenience and practical purposes ever erected. The Herald has shown its enterprise in making a paper, and it is quite natural to expect that its new building will be a model.

THE FEDERAL ELECTION BILL.

In one hundred years of federal legislation, no such outrageous and revolutionary measure has ever before passed either house of congress, as the election bill which was driven through the House last week under the whip and spur of caucus dictation. Seventeen years ago a similar measure was introduced in the House, and Secretary Blaine, who was then Speaker, used his influence against the bill and killed it. If good cause existed for killing such a revolutionary measure then, there is ten fold better reason now. This bill strikes a deadly blow at local self government and home rule, which lie at the foundation of our republican system of government. The bill provides for federal supervision of all congressional elections in any district where it shall be asked for by at least one hundred votes. Supervisors of election are to be appointed whose nominal duty will be to prevent frauds of registration, casting and counting of votes, but whose real duty will be to count in the candidates of the party in power.

The ostensible object of the bill is to promote the purity of elections, but no sane man can honestly believe that such would be its practical effect. As one member aptly observed, it ought to be entitled: "An act to raise h—ll in the South." The Reed ring of revolutionists, who have rushed this iniquitous measure through the House, by throttling debate and overriding the rights of the minority, expect it to have that effect and evidently designed it for that purpose. The American people have not yet lost their manhood, nor will they surrender their liberties tamely. Many of the States have adopted electoral reform laws, which will prevent bribery and intimidation, and secure an absolutely secret ballot. This measure would kill ballot reform entirely, as it provides for an open vote as to congressmen. It thus establishes a double set of election officers, and if enforced in every district of the Union, it would mulct the people to the tune of fifteen millions of dollars for every election. Would not the voters of Lenawee county resent such federal tyranny?

* * *

Congressman Allen, who at the dictation of the caucus, supported this bill, candidly admitted that his district did not need the measure, and yet, at the request of a paltry one hundred voters, it would be foisted upon us, with all its useless expenditure and demoralizing influences. We venture to say that every member of congress, if privately catechised, would make the same declaration. Congressman Ewart of North Carolina vigorously opposed the measure. He said: "As to the negroes political rights, speaking for my own State, no Republican, black or white, is prevented from casting his vote. The elections there are absolutely fair." True, there are a few districts in which elections have been unfair, but they are comparatively few. In this category Speaker Reed's district in Maine, is probably entitled to the blue ribbon. He owes his own election to the most glaring corruption and prodigal use of boodle. And yet, if Speaker Reed himself could be shelved by the rigid enforcement of a federal election law, his defeat would be dearly purchased, if obtained by federal tyranny and usurpation.

* * *

But what is the real purpose of such a revolutionary measure? The pretense that it is needed to promote purity of elections is a pretense only. The real reason is one of political necessity. The Republican ring, that has fastened its clutches upon that party to rule or ruin it, see the handwriting on the wall. The tax-ridden farmers of the west and south are crying for a reduction of taxation, and in response they are given the McKinley bill which will increase taxes. The same classes demand a restoration of silver to its proper place as money, and Speaker Reed, under the dictation of Wall street, kills the silver bill. The manufacturers of New England are calling for free raw materials, which would enable them to extend their foreign trade and reduce the price of their goods to home consumers, and the leaders heed the call by taxing raw materials higher than ever. The people are no longer bamboozled by the "home market" humbug. They are bound to have reduced taxes and a reasonable addition to the currency, in proportion to the increase of business. On these issues the Republican cabal that runs the party is doomed to overwhelming defeat. As a dernier resort, they hoist the bloody shirt, in the guise of a federal election law. The bill is not designed for the South alone, but for Democratic districts both North and South, and the intention is to steal enough districts to enable the cabal to keep control of the House. Will this revolutionary conspiracy succeed? We shall see.

A TARIFF LESSON.

The Des Moines Leader, of Iowa, presents the following questions and answers on the nature and operation of the tariff, for the benefit of those who plead ignorance of the subject;

What is a tariff?

Tariff is a tax levied on foreign goods when imported into this country.

Who pays the tax?

The importer pays it.

Does he lose anything in consequence?

He does not. Because he adds the amount of the tax to the cost, and then with a reasonable profit on both, he sells to some one else.

Does anyone lose anything by the transaction?

The consumer loses all that is added on account of the tariff.

Who is benefited by this tax?

The government is benefited to the amount of the tariff, less the cost of collection.

Is any one else benefited?

Manufacturers and producers of the same goods in this country are benefitted by it.

How so?

They are enabled to sell their goods correspondingly higher and still compete with the importer in price.

Who is the loser in that case?

The consumer, the same as in the other case.

What is the distinction between a revenue tariff and a protective tariff?

The same tariff may be both revenue and protective; revenue, with reference to the imported article and protective, with reference to the home production of the same kind. Tariff on such goods as we cannot produce is always "for revenue only."

Does a protective tariff enable a manufacturer to pay higher wages for his labor?

It enables, but does not compel him to do so.

What does he do in that case?

He hires his labor as cheap as he can.

Why so?

Because it is in accordance with human nature and business principles.

How does the politician get into office on a protective platform?

He tells the manufacturer that since the protective tariff is for his special benefit, he must furnish $1,000,000 campaign fund.

And what does the manufacturer do?

Believes him and reluctantly furnishes the money.

What does the politician do?

He goes to the people and tells them that protection is for their special benefit, and that the country is going to be ruined with British free trade if they do not all vote for him.

By what special argument does he secure the farmer's vote?

He assures him that protection brings down the price of everything, and then promises him a protective tariff on all his farm products in order to increase the price.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH WOOL?

What is the matter with wool? According to all the protectionist predictions it ought to be booming. The prospect of an increased tariff was confidently proclaimed as the one thing needful to send it up, just as—according to the same prophets—the possibility of unfavorable legislation sent it down when the Mills bill was before the country. But even with the McKinley bill safety past the "narrows" in the House and the Senate evidently disposed, on partisan grounds, if no other, to follow the lead of the House, the wool market is uncomfortably dull and prices are ruling lower than they were last year. Boston, the center of the wool trade in this country, reports from last week the sale of less than 2,000,000 pounds as against 3,342 000 for the corresponding week last year, though the receipts were more than a thousand bales heavier. The wool growers are grumbling and calling on protectionist authorities for an explanation; but the explanation is not forthcoming. If there is one favorable to the protectionist policy it has probably been mislaid.

There is an explanation but it is not favorable to the protectionist policy. It has the merit, however, of being intelligible and rational. The dullness of the wool trade is due to the uncertainty and distrust which manufacturers and consumers have as to the effect of the proposed legislation which has been conceded to the demand of the wool-growers. With a prospect of greatly enhanced prices for woolen goods purchasers are already preparing for a lessened consumption and the manufacturers are trimming their sales accordingly. The result is seen in the lessened demand for wool and the reduced prices offered.

It is not, perhaps, to be expected that the wool growers will abandon all at once their hostility to free wool or their belief that it would be an injury to their industry. That will come in time—in a comparatively short time, if Mr. Blaine's scheme goes through. But at present it is not to be looked for. The wool growers must, however, have learned that neither the promise nor the performance of high tariff is sufficient to elevate the price of their product. And that is a considerable step in the direction of enlightenment.—Detroit Free Press.

THE SUGAR SWINDLE.

Let every democratic voter understand clearly the tariff sugar swindle.

The McKinley bill places on the free list the raw material of sugar—syrup, cane juice, tank-bottoms, and melado—95 per cent. of which is imported from abroad, and on which 95 per cents of the tax goes into the United States treasury.

The McKinley bill retains the tax on refined sugar for the benefit exclusively of the republican sugar trust because every dollar of the tax paid by the people to the suger trust goes into the pockets of twenty-one men owning the forty-nine refineries of the United States.

The McKinley bill relieves the twenty-one refiners of a yearly tax of over $60,000,000, which they now pay into the treasury of the United States as a tax on the imported raw material.

But it does not relieve the people of the yearly tax that the people pay into the pockets of the twenty-one sugar refiners—the tax on the sugar we eat.—N. Y. World.

The best medical writers claim that the succeseful remedy nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past obliges us to admit that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symtoms yield to it.

No matter what may be the ills you bear from indigestion, a dose of Ayer's Cathartic Pills will ease you without question. Just try them once and be assured; they have much worse dyspeptics cured. You 'll find them nice and amply worth the price.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." A HOME MARKET CASE.

PHILADELPHIA AND HER HOME MARKET FOR NEIGHBORING FARMERS.

The Protectionist Idea of a Factory in Every Village to Buy the Farmer's Produce—How This Idea Fails to Pan Out in Philadelphia's Case.

The American Protective Tariff league makes it one of its specialties to drill the faithful in the home market doctrine. In a recent article the league states this doctrine in the following form:

"In every village surrounded by farms there should be located manufacturing establishments of some kind that will give employment to operatives. The wants of these workpeople will create a demand for food, clothing and shelter, and the product of the farm and factory will be ever in demand. Nothing will be wasted in transportation, and labor will reap the entire harvest."

What is the matter with that theory? Nothing, apparently. As a maxim this home market idea may seem all right, but it must be further tested by applying it to a market, for we have very high authority for saying that we should be "students of markets rather than maxims."

Now, Philadelphia is not exactly a "village surrounded by farms," but it is the largest manufacturing center in the United States, and the counties adjacent to it are great farming counties.

If a mere village with "manufacturing establishments of some kind" can shed prosperity on the surrounding farms, it would seem that the great city of Philadelphia, with many manufacturing establishments of many kinds, ought to shed a multiplied measure of prosperity on the counties lying near it.

But what are the facts? A recent Philadelphia paper says: "More farms are being sold out every month in the counties adjacent to Philadelphia than were sold ten or twelve years ago during an entire year."

Evidently, then, the great factories of Philadelphia have failed to bring prosperity to the farmers. The little home market idea has failed to work, and it is not true in this case that "the product of the farm and factory will be ever in demand." If the theory fails to work near such a great manufacturing center, what reason have we for thinking that it will be any more successful in "every village surrounded by farmers?"

The truth is that nearness to a city or village with manufacturing establishments is of no great advantage to a farming community, except in the matter of such perishable objects as fruits and vegetables.

The great staples of this country are wheat, corn and cotton, and it makes no difference to the growers of these whether their market is near by or far away—in America or in Europe. The farmers in the south are now selling a considerable quantity of cotton to the mills which have sprung up there during the past decade, but they do not get one penny more for the cotton they sell to the mill in a neighboring village than for that which they sell to the merchant who ships to Liverpool. The only thing of prime concern with them is that they get the fair market price for their cotton; after that they are utterly indifferent where their cotton goes. The cotton buyer may sell in Liverpool or to a home manufacturer, and the grower of the cotton will never know the difference.

Now if the farmer should be taught the protectionist doctrine that the home market has some special sanctity hanging about it he will insist on selling his cotton only to the home manufacturer; he will even demand that congress put an export duty on cotton, so that our entire crop may be manufactured in this country.

England alone took nearly half of our cotton last year. Other European nations took large quantities, and our total exports of cotton were more than three-fourths of our entire crop.

Now let the idea be applied that all this cotton could be profitably manufactured here, which is perhaps true; but go further and apply the protectionist doctrine that the government ought to step in to regulate the industry of the country—especially that it ought to pass laws to turn that industry into any channels where a profit is possible. Very well; but the only way to do that in this case would be to prevent by law the exportation of cotton; in other words, to put on export duties which would render the exporting of it unprofitable. An export duty is just as defensible as an import duty. At least there is no other way of reaching the protectionists' ideal that all our cotton should be manufactured here.

The result, then: Five or six million bales of cotton kept at home to depress prices to an unheard of figure, and farmers in the south wishing they could turn their fields into fish ponds.

Against all this nonsense about a home market and about cutting ourselves off from the rest of the world, "forgetful of mankind," the true principle to be interposed is that each nation has its special advantages and resources, and that in foreign trade the products of these advantages and resources are simply exchanged, and there is a profit of both parties to the operation.

The fact that a market is far away counts for very little. A bale of cotton weighing 400 pounds is now carried from New York to Liverpool for fifty cents. The cheapness of freights thus brings distant cities into much closer communication than before the age of steam.

The ease with which markets are reached is one of the great factors in the world's trade, but the protective tariff steps in to robbe us of the advantages which steam has given us.

We sold England last year $475,000,000 worth of goods and bought from her only $150,000,000 worth. There is a strong feeling in England now in favor of putting duties on our goods as retaliation for the McKinley bill. If that is done we should manifestly be the heavier losers—and our farmers the heaviest losers of all.

SOME AMERICAN EXPORTS.

Falsity of the Cry That We Cannot Sell in the World's Markets.

American manufacturers have made considerable progress in some lines of goods in gaining for themselves a foreign market. The Boston Advertiser has recently published a list of New England mills which manufacture for the export trade. The Jackson Manufacturing company at Nashua, N. H., exports more than 30,000,000 yards of cotton goods a year. Another mill exports 10,000,000 yards. There are other large mills which export considerable amounts. Our total exports of cotton cloth last year were 120,000,000 yards. A large number of the mills in New England find a foreign market for portions of their outputs, consisting almost entirely of sheetings, shirtings and drillings.

The principal points of export are China, South America and Africa. Many of the New England mills ship goods to South America, and large orders are received from houses in China.

One would think that these cotton mills would exert themselves to the utmost to get control of as large a foreign market as possible, but such is not the case. An agent of one of them makes the following report:

"If the cotton mills would only cater more to the foreign trade they would have a market for their goods whenever business gets dull at home. The South American trade is especially desirable, and could be easily built up if the manufacturers would look into and consider the necessary points to be covered. Whenever there is a depression at home, as at present, they think of the export trade more seriously, but the very minute the home demand springs up and increases they have entirely forgotten export interests, which if developed in the proper way would serve them well in future dull periods."

The New York Dry Goods Economist, the principal trade paper of the dry goods trade in the United States, is of precisely the same opinion. With regard to our cotton manufactures it says:

"The majority never give any thought to the export trade until the home market is glutted and stocks must be moved. Then they sell at any prices they can get until they bring the home market to the better condition previously described. That is the sole reason why the export trade in cotton goods is no larger and so variable."

This shows such a perversion of the usual instinct of shrewd business men to search out new markets and to exert their ingenuity to hold them that one naturally demands a reason for this lack of enterprise. Can it be that the habit of looking to the tariff to keep prices up has begotten a spirit of dependence and has sapped the old time courage which floated American commerce in all parts of the world? Has the home market delusion really made our manufacturers think that the home market is itself sufficient to take all we can produce? Has all this twaddle of the high Protectionist orator about our not being able to compete in the markets of the world caused the manufacturers to lose their self reliance? Has the baby cry of "We can't" really made commercial cowards or drones of our manufacturers?

In a case, however, where we have gained a foothold in foreign markets one would think that congress might at least be depended upon to place no obstacle in the way of the foreign sales of our wares. But such is not the case. Cotton underwear has been exported by the Glastenbury (Conn.) Knitting company. Treasurer George W. Scott now says: "Under the McKinley tariff bill all this will be stopped, as the increased cost of trimmings will prevent almost any dry goods whatever being exported. The extra duty on pearl buttons alone will add 50 per cent to the cost of manufacturing underwear." New England has quite too much of that kind of "protection," and the country at large certainly has enough of the stupidity of a congress which converts this "protection" into a blight and a hindrance to both producer and consumer.

Unprotected Labor.

Manufacturers always go to Washington and ask for higher duties in the interest of their labor. How does it happen that congress found it necessary to protect labor from these same manufacturers by passing the contract labor law to prevent them from hiring the "cheap pauper labor of Europe" and bringing it here to compete with American labor?

In some of the mining towns of Pennsylvania the census enumerators found these "pauper laborers" wearing their number on their clothing. They are entered by numbers on the books of the company for which they work, their names being so far beyond our spelling and pronunciation as to form an agony unendurable to the bookkeeper. It is a well known fact that this is the most degraded and the worst paid labor in the United States. Has any of these cheap laborers ever been refused employment on the ground that he was too cheap, and that the manufacturer or mine owner did not wish to let him compete with the higher priced American labor?

The truth is that manufacturers and mine owners employ the cheapest labor they can get, provided only that it be efficient. Nobody can justly blame them for that. Every employer, by the natural laws of competition, is compelled to get as good terms as possible in procuring labor. The employer is compelled to act on this principle. But then he should not go to Washington and ask for higher duties "to protect labor" when he knows perfectly well that the labor market is open to the widest competition, that he himself will hire the cheaper labor, although when this cheaper labor was in Europe he held it up to the country as a great bugbear, as the "pauper labor" which must not be allowed to compete with American labor.

Laboring men know well enough that it is through organization that they get better wages, and that no case has yet been found where a protected manufacturer raised wages on the ground that congress had raised his protective duties. Many cases, on the other hand, can be cited where a higher duty has actually been followed by a reduction of wages.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-regulated house.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely, not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay No man or woman now living will ever date document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

THE ALUMNI SOCIETY.

THEIR REGULAR ANNUAL REUNION HELD AT ARMORY HALL, FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 27, 1890.

A Large Attendance and an Excellent Program Presented. Followed by a Banquet, Toasts and Responses.

The Alumni Reunion, which was held at Armory hall on the evening of Friday, June 27th, was more largely attended than usual, and the program, although a "picked up" one, was of more than usual merit. Many of the regular appointees failed to come to time, and the program was not completed until the Wednesday prior to the date of meeting. This delayed the printing of the programs so there was no time left for sending invitations through the mail. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, however, the meeting was an unqualified success. This result was chiefly due to the labor of Walter Burridge, the member of the executive committee who had charge of the arrangements. He brought order out of chaos in true military style.

There were one hundred covers at the tables, and many were present who were unable to obtain refreshments. Vice-president E. A. Wilson presided and announced the program, and Abner Wilson filled the place of toastmaster to perfection. The oration, essay and poem were all good. Mr. McKinnon's modesty is responsible for our not publishing the oration. The poem and essay are given in full below. The music was furnished by a brass sextette and was very appropriate for such an occasion. One feature of the evening was the admirable manner in which the younger members performed their parts, and herein lies a hint for future meetings. Let the old timers take a rest and give the young folks a chance. The response by Alex. Richard was exceedingly interesting and gave the rising generation some new ideas about schooldays away back in the thirties. VanAntwerp filled the position of caterer with his usual success.

Poem.

INEZ LAING RICHARD.

"Not every man can be a poet.
No more'n a sheep can be a go-at."
So sang a bard of long ago,
And lately I've believed 'twas so;
On first thought one would think, with time,
That any fool could make a rhyme.
But if you doubt, as I deny it,
All I can say is,—come and try it.
The poet should be born, not made? well
I was born; so then pray tell
Why I should not the right possess
To wander in the wilderness
Of rhyme and rythm, metres short,
Or long, or common; any sort
Of verse which will a thought convey,
Though it be but a homely lay.
And though it not a spark contain
Of the fine frenzy of the poet's brain.
Pray let me substitute, without offense,
Just practical, plain common sense.
We've met to-night, a motley crew,
Old age and youth, old times and new.
The business man thinks "What a bore;
I wonder who is at the store."
Doubts flit through the housewife's head,
That the hired girl can set that bread.
The blushing sweet girl graduate
Hopes admiration to create;
While her admirer, slick and trim,
Is wondering what she thinks of him.
You wonder why we've gathered here,
So strange a crowd? The reason's clear!
We went to read and write and spell
At summons of the same school bell;
The same school mother raised us all;
We went obedient to her call,
Through heat and cold, through storm and sun;
And then, when the day's work was done,
Unwearied by the day's dull plod,
Came the forbidden promenade.
Full many a tale the old mill race
Could tell of each familiar face,
That used to haunt her green-lined shore.
The botanizers, to explore
The quiet woods for posies gay;
The boating parties on their way
To Fish-pole Island's bracing air;
The timid ones who did not dare
To brave the cataract's mad pranks,
Got out and walked by on the banks.
There were the lovers, sweet and shy,
Their boat hid from the passers-by,
In some deep nook beneath the shade
The old tree's spreading branches made.
I think that friendship was the name
We called it then; but in the game
Sly Cupid had a hand, be sure,
Or else the weddings had been fewer.
I know it is the style to grieve
For good times past when school we leave,
As though our education's done,
The good fight past, the battle won.
But let us turn against the tide,
And call to mind the other side;
Think of long lessons, rules severe;
Examinatious long and drear,
The rules read every term brought out
That time-worn, threadbare joke about
The girls expecting no excuse
On school grounds, for tobacco's use,
Or, boys if they their duties shirk,
And spend their time on fancy work.
Do you remember how you blushed,
And felt so mortified and crushed,
And scarcely could lift up your head,
While your unfeeling teacher read
The note you thought securely hid
Under the dictionary's lid?
And many mishaps of that kind
You all could doubtless call to mind.
Viewing the matter in this light,
I ask you, do you think it right
To make our graduates believe
That with Commencement day they leave,
The best part of their lives behind,
In coming days but care to find?
Confess now, man of middle life,
Would you give up your home, your wife,
Your bank account, so hardly earned,
And have your dial backward turned
To boyhood days, once more alone,
With not a cent to call your own?
And ladies, for your girlhood joys,
Would you exchange your girls and boys?
I think, if driven to the test,
We'd own the present time's the best.
Not that we would forget the past,
But enjoy our good times while they last.
Then as bright links in memory's chain,
We'll fondly think of them again.
Last summer's flowers are old and sere,
But just as lovely ones are here.
The future is beyond our ken,
The present day is ours, let then
Time's requiem be by others sung,
Contentment keeps us ever young.

Fences.

ALICE GARLINGHOUSE.

"Well, wife, said farmer Brown, one day, as he came in to dinner, "our neighbor, farmer Green, is building a new fence between his field and mine, and instead of a sensible rail or a good board fence, he is building one of those new fangled barbed wire concerns."

"Why, I thought you were in favor of improvements," said Mrs. Brown.

"So I am," was the reply, "but these barbed-wire fences are not improvements. They will be the ruination of this country."

"How so," queried his wife, for she had come to regard the new fence, so light and strong and durable, as a vast improvement on the heavy, clumsy rail fence over which our grandfather climbed in his boyhood.

"Well," was the reply, "I'd like to know who on earth can sit on a barbed-wire fence and talk politics, and if you can't sit on the fence and talk with your neighbor about the country, what is the use of having a country?"

Light dawned on Mrs. Brown's mind, and after her worthy lord had returned to his work, she soliloquized something like this:

There are some people who are always perched on a fence and are never happy or contented. Take these farm fences for an example. The men who sit on these most are the men who always complain of poor crops, who are never suited with the weather. If it rains long enough to moisten the corn, the hay will be spoiled. If it is good hay weather, it is too dry for the corn, and so on. For them, the market prices are too low and the wages of hired help too high, and they all agree that a farmer's life is a most miserable one.

Then there are political fences. Some people do so enjoy the prospect from the top of this fence. It is beneath their dignity to assist in any way in the management of public affairs, yet things do not go to suit them. They are sure the nation is going to ruin, but they propose to let those already at the helm steer the great Ship of State through the rocks and shoals, while they stick to their loved fence and find fault.

Another fence that is occupied for ten months of the year, yes, I may say for the whole twelve months, might be named the school fence. People who sit here are those whose children are always reported as having a hard time at school. To be sure, the darlings are innocents and the teachers cruel tyrants. Listen and you will hear them say, "Well, I think they ought to elect a school board that knows how to run a school and hire teachers good for something." Yet seldom, indeed, can one of these grumblers be found in school meeting helping to choose the officers they are afterwards so willing to undermate.

But the fence most to be lamented, and which, too often, has the largest number of occupants, is the one running right through our churches. And who are these people? Are they those who are most interested in the work? No. They are those who say your church, your minister, your prayer meeting, your work, never ours. From their elevated positions they have peculiar advantages for taking observations and this must be the reason that they are always first to discover that something has gone wrong over there in the field, and are sure to be loudest in their criticisms.

As a rule, we find that the earnest workers in any organization are in such good humor and have such a kindly appreciation of their co-workers that they seldom find fault with a neighbor or harshly criticise his mistakes. But the most crabbed, critical and narrow-minded of all people in the world are those who never take hold and help, but sit on the fence and air their ugliness by finding fault with some one who is honestly trying to do something. Such people are never suited with their positions and frequently complain that some one is intruding on their rights. I do not wonder that they are crowded for it seems to me the fences are full. Perhaps, however, they resemble the omnibus with its proverbial, "always room for one more."

Now, I would rather see that a man has a decided opinion on any question and is not afraid to express that opinion, when there is occasion, though he may be in the minority, than to see him sit on the fence until he discovers the stronger side, then complacently slip down on that side and say with a knowing air, "I thought so all the time."

Oh, that all the fences were of barbed wire! Then, instead of being the ruin of the country, as farmer Brown predicted, they might contribute largely to its salvation.

DR. BENNETT

will be in Tecumseh July 16th, at the Lilley House.

Four weeks ago Dr. B. explained how that he had seen many who came to him explaining of piles, and on getting the fever that was for herein removed, (it was not piles at all) their headache had gone, their bad liver and stomach had disappeared, the trouble they had with kidneys or some female weakness had all disappeared entirely; to one who had never heard any thing about these things it would get up some thinking (if they ever thought of themselves.)

But now comes some one who never had any piles at all, but they have that headache Smith had, or the same bad stomach and liver Jones had, or the same trouble Tompkins had with his bladder or kidneys, or the same female weakness Mrs. Perkins had; but they told me they never had any piles, but wanted to talk with Dr. B. about themselves.

Yes, they used to have the same constipated bowels years ago as they have now, but that was liver and stomach.

On hearing our explanation about fever, which was the cause of all constipation, and this was above the sphyncter muscles, and hence no such thing as piles could be felt and this was the reason of their being as they were now. They would try it and see. To their surprise their stomach, liver, and kidneys, and nervous troubles were also gone. No more bladder difficulty, no more uterine weakness to worry them. They were astonished, so would any one else be, who never had seen this demonstrated and proven. Now could any man who dare think for himself and act for himself go on seeing these things day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year, proving the same thing every time and by and by not know how to explain them, and that satisfactorily to others and himself too? Even if he had no book, that even taught him.

What say you, my thinking, or must you let some one do your thinking for you; and because some one calls him a quack, (but he is not) you will not go and hear from his own lips a little of his own experience, he will not ask you to believe it but to give it to you in a candid way; tell you how that down in this part of the body is this great Sympathetic System of nerves. The most highly and thickly distributed of anywhere in the body, and this is the Power that drives every organ in the body. Heart, liver, stomach and kidneys are not power; they are driven by a power, and this is the power. Should some of you wise ones wish to hear me, come. We are writing to suffering ones, and we want their attention; come and hear, that is all, then look us up, see what is being done for your neighbors. We are willing to be scrutinized, willing to be criticised; but seeing and proving is believing. Go and see him when here, you who have Hay fever, Asthma, Dyspepsia, Head and Backache, nervous troubles and the like, for he certainly cures them.

Deafness Can't be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be distroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh cure. Send for circulars free.

F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

Despite the flourish with which certain of the census enumerators would dissipate the large number of cases of their neglect cited in the Journal by calling attention to an instance here and there in which attention had been given in a round-about way, there are still evidences of inefficient service. Augustus W. Slayton telephoned the Journal Saturday that the boarding house in which he makes his home at 80 Henry st., and which shelters 11 citizens, had been overlooked by the census enumerator. He called at the house, so Mr. Slayton says, early in the census taking, and promised on request of the landlady to call again, which he has as yet failed to do. The house was at no time without inmates who would have known of the enumerator's return and performance of his duty.—Detroit Journal.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

The lamps were lighted last evening for the first time and they worked without a hitch or break of any kind. The machinery was started on Monday, but two days were occupied in getting everything in readiness. Mr. Travis acts on the principle: "Be sure you are right and then go ahead." He took the necessary time to make everything ready and last evening, with the approach of darkness, the store circuits were connected. All the arc lights, 22 in number, now placed, were giving forth their beautiful light at eight o'clock. At exactly nine o'clock the street circuits were connected with the dynamo and the 22 street lamps were simultaneously lighted. Not the least trouble was experienced with a single lamp. The entire system worked as smoothly as though it had been running for six months, and all who had lamps in their stores were more than satisfied with the experiment. After using this light a few weeks no one would dream of going back to kerosene oil and tin reflectors. Four more arc lamps have already been engaged. The new light made its advent "brilliantly" in more senses than one.

THE NEW FOUNDRY.

The work of raising stock for the new foundry is progressing favorably. The amount now pledged is $20 000 and additions are coming in daily. All who desire to take stock should apply soon as the books are not likely to be held open any length of time. Some people who are blessed with a surplus in bank have very peculiar ideas about investing their money. They will send it out West thousands of miles away from home and entrust it to strangers, in some enterprise they know nothing about and which they cannot keep watch of. In three cases out of four such investments prove worthless. The same money invested at home with good reliable business men, under one's own eye, almost always turns a fair income. On home investments of this kind the risk is reduced to a minimum. Besides, every new enterprise adds to the volume of business already done here, and thus indirectly assists the lines of business already established. Capitalists and men of moderate means are alike interested in this project.

Through scores of processes, the forty-two pieces of a pair of shoes require to bring them together, the co-operation of fifty men and women, whose division of labor is so thoroughly systematized that everything goes with the same regularity attributed to the works of a clock, until as a result, you, well-shod reader, who wears the W. L. Douglas' shoe, can buy a pair from three to five dollars that would have cost your forefathers from six to twelve.—Ex.

Buy A Buckeye.

Thos. R. Kyle has received the Agency for this vicinity of the Buckeye Harvesting Machinery. The Buckeye light mower has been a standard article of farm machinery for over a third of a century. It is the most perfect mower ever sold in this country. It has remained unchanged in its mechanism for thirty-three years, and no mower of late years has ever surpassed it. The Buckeye Binder is the lightest, strongest and most durable. Dynamometer tests always prove it to be the lighest draft binder ever made. Its knotter is adapted to the use of all kinds of twine, and it never fails to tie. Farmers wishing to buy a new mower or binder should examine these machines.
